49ERS AT GIANTS

The San Francisco 49ers hit the road for the third time in four games as they travel across the country to take on the New York Giants on NBC's Sunday Night Football. This marks San Francisco's lone game against an NFC East opponent this season. The all-time series between the two clubs is tied, 19-19, as San Francisco and the New York Giants are meeting for the first time on Sunday Night Football.

The Niners head to MetLife Stadium for the second consecutive season after defeating the Giants, 16-10, in 2014. In that game, the 49ers sacked Giants QB Eli Manning twice and also registered five interceptions on the day.

The 49ers were defeated by the Green Bay Packers last week at Levi's® Stadium. On defense, the 49ers brought down Packers QB Aaron Rodgers three times. LB Aaron Lynch registered 2.0 sacks on the day, marking the first multi-sack game of his career and has registered at least 1.0 sack in six of his last seven games at Levi's® Stadium. LB Ahmad Brooks also sacked Rodgers for his first of the season and 42nd of his career.

BY THE NUMBERS

- 521 The 49ers have 521 total rushing yds. this season, the 5th-most in the NFL (Was. - 558; Min. - 546; GB - 545; Car. - 529).
- 95.2 The Niners have allowed 95.2 rushing yds. per game on the road since 2008, ranking 2nd in the NFL during that timespan (Pit. - 94.1).
- 5 In their previous meeting at NYG (11/16/14), the 49ers defense registered 5 INTs against Giants QB Eli Manning, marking the first time the 49ers notched 5 INTs in a game since 11/12/09 vs. Chi. (5 INTs - QB Jay Cutler).
- 4.42 San Francisco's 4.42 avg. yds. per carry this season ranks 5th in the NFL (Min. - 4.92; StL - 4.55; Was. - 4.43; Oak. - 4.43).
- 3.0 LB Aaron Lynch's 3.0 sacks on the season rank t-5th in the NFC.
- .833 Since 2009, the 49ers are 5-1 (.833 winning pct.) on the road against NFC East opponents.

THE HEAD COACHES

Jim Tomsula was named the 19th head coach of the San Francisco 49ers on January 14, 2015, after spending the past eight seasons as the team's defensive line coach. Tomsula also served as San Francisco's interim head coach for the final game of the 2010 season, a 38-7 victory over the Arizona Cardinals. Tomsula has coached 31 seasons of football at the high school, college and professional levels since the fall of 1989, including eight (2007-14) with the 49ers since being named San Francisco's defensive line coach in 2007. Tomsula joined the 49ers after enjoying one of the most successful stints in NFL Europe history. Prior to being named the head coach of the Rhein Fire in 2006, which made him the youngest head coach in NFLE history at age 38. Tomsula served as the Berlin Thunder's defensive coordinator for two seasons, winning World Bowl XII in his first season with a defense that ranked first in the NFLE against the run. Tomsula joined the NFLE in 1998 as the defensive line coach of the England Monarchs. He then went on to serve in the same capacity for five seasons with the Scottish Claymores, where he established a reputation for producing some of the league's most dominant lines. He also played a leading role in mentoring and teaching young talent in the league's National Player Development program. Between NFL Europe seasons, Tomsula spent each fall as a member of Division II Catawba College's coaching staff, since coaching in the NFLE was not a year-round position. He was a defensive lineman at Catawba College (1987-88) in Salisbury, NC, after transferring from Middle Tennessee State (1985).

Tom Coughlin is in his 12th season as head coach of the New York Giants. The 2014 Giants won three of their final four games, finishing the season with a 6-10 record. In 2013, the Giants won seven of their last 10 games en route to a 7-9 record. In 2012, the Giants were 9-7 and scored 429 points, the second-highest total in franchise history. In 2011, the Giants finished 9-7 and won the NFC East championship before winning four postseason games, including their second Super Bowl in five seasons. The Giants were 10-6 in the regular season and again reached postseason play as a Wild Card in 2007, which served as a springboard to the team's Super Bowl victory. Prior to joining the Giants, Coughlin coached the Jaguars for eight seasons (1995-2002). He was named the first head coach of the expansion Jaguars on Feb. 21, 1994, a full 559 days before the franchise played its first regular season game. In 1995, Jacksonville won four games, more than any previous expansion team in NFL history. The following year, he was named NFL Coach of the Year by United Press International as the Jaguars made the playoffs in just their second season and advanced all the way to the AFC Championship Game, where they lost to the New England Patriots. Coughlin arrived in Jacksonville following three years as the head coach at Boston College, where he turned a struggling program into a Top 20 team. He was the Giants wide receivers coach under Parcells from 1988-90. Coughlin entered the NFL as the Philadelphia Eagles' wide receivers coach in 1984 and 1985. He held the same position with the Green Bay Packers in 1986 and 1987 before moving to the Giants for a three-year stint.

FREQUENT FLYER MILES

A trip around the world is approximately 25,000 miles. The 49ers are one of three teams (Mia. & Oak.) that will essentially travel around the world with their 2015 road schedules.

The Niners aren't alone however, as the teams in the NFC West (90,990) have the highest combined mileage total of all divisions.

KNOW YOUR OPPONENT

Based off of 2014 results, San Francisco has the 3rd toughest schedule in 2015. The 49ers have nine games against teams that were .500-or-better and nine play-off teams last season.

GET 'EM WHERE YOU WANT 'EM

It is extremely difficult to win games in the NFL. While the overall winning percentage of San Francisco's 2015 opponents is high, the 49ers home/away opponent breakdown outside the division is more favorable based off of 2014 results.

49ERS HOME OPPONENT'S 2014 AWAY RECORD (NON DIVISION)

Since 2009, San Francisco's 35-14-1 (.710) record at home is 5th-best in the NFL. Part of the success is due to the stout defense over that time. The 49ers have allowed the least amount of points in their home stadium during that timespan (785 pts.).

49ERS IN PRIMETIME

The 49ers are slated for four primetime appearances during the 2015 season beginning with their Week 1 win against the Minnesota Vikings on ESPN's Monday Night Football as well as this week against the New York Giants on Sunday Night Football. All-time, San Francisco holds a 69-37 record in primetime games. The season opener versus Minnesota was just the sixth time in franchise history the team opened the season on Monday Night Football.

THE BIG GAME COMES TO THE BAY AREA

Levi's® Stadium, home of the San Francisco 49ers, will host Super Bowl 50 on February 7, 2016.

"It's a testament to everybody in the Bay Area," says 49ers CEO Jed York. "The city of Santa Clara came together, obviously San Francisco stepped up for the Super Bowl, San Jose has been a big part of this, and I think you're going to see everybody from Napa all the way to Monterey step up for this. Sports are supposed to bring people together; they bring communities together, and nothing emphasizes that more than the Bay Area hosting Super Bowl 50."

The first Super Bowl was played in California in 1967 at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum. The game will return to Northern California for the first time since Super Bowl XIX, which was held on January 20, 1985 at Stanford Stadium. Super Bowl XIX featured future Pro Football Hall of Fame quarterbacks Dan Marino and Joe Montana. Montana led the 49ers to victory, defeating Marino's Miami Dolphins 38-16.

To celebrate this golden moment, the NFL will break away from its traditional use of branding the Super Bowl with Roman numerals and will instead use the Arabic numeral "50." The league will return to Roman numerals for Super Bowl LI, scheduled to take place on February 5, 2017 at NRG Stadium in Houston, Texas.

Before the Super Bowl, fans can head over to Super Bowl City and the NFL Experience to partake in a week-long series of family-friendly events. Super Bowl City is a free-to-the-public fan village, centered in Justin Herman Plaza, on the Embarcadero at the foot of San Francisco's famed Market Street. Fans will have the opportunity to sample locally grown food, experience the Bay Area's cultural diversity, view performances from national and local artists and participate in football-themed activities. In addition to serving as a hub of fan, sponsor, media and NFL activities, Super Bowl City will be the broadcast home for the CBS Television Network - the exclusive broadcaster of Super Bowl 50 - as well as NFL Network.

"Super Bowl City will give every San Franciscan a chance to share in the fan experience of Super Bowl 50," says San Francisco Mayor Edwin M. Lee. "As San Francisco hosts the most philanthropic Super Bowl ever, our Bay Area region's small local businesses, hotels and restaurants will share in all these events. I'm excited that the San Francisco Bay Area and all we have to offer will be once again seen on one of the world's largest stages."

The NFL Experience will be housed at Moscone Center North and South. For its first visit to the Bay Area, pro football's interactive theme park will feature participatory games, displays, entertainment attractions, youth football clinics and free autograph sessions with NFL players.

Moscone Center West will be home to the NFL Fan Viewing Gallery and the NFL

Media Center. The Fan Viewing Gallery provides fans with the opportunity to get up close and personal as current players, NFL legends and celebrities are interviewed live by national radio personalities.

Both Super Bowl City and the NFL Experience will open on January 30, 2016, providing local residents the opportunity to experience the festival before out-of-town guests arrive. Additionally, 25 percent of every dollar raised by the San Francisco Bay Area Super Bowl 50 Host Committee will go toward supporting local community initiatives and high-performing nonprofits.

Geep Chryst is in his fifth season with the 49ers and first as the offensive coordinator, having spent his first four years as the team's quarterbacks coach.

With 27 seasons of coaching experience, including 22 years in the NFL, Chryst joined the 49ers, in 2011 and has played a significant role in the development of QB Colin Kaepernick, which was evident when he became the starter in Week 11 of the 2012 season and led the team to an appearance in Super Bowl XLVII.

In 2014, Kaepernick set career highs in passing yards (3,369) and rushing yards (639). His 639 rushing yards set the franchise record for most rushing yards by a quarterback in a season. Kaepernick also tied the franchise record for most consecutive games with a touchdown pass (18 - Steve Young, 10/9/94-11/26/95).

During the 2013 season, Kaepernick led the team to its third consecutive NFC Championship Game appearance. Under Chryst's tutelage, Kaepernick ranked 10th in the NFL with a quarterback rating of 91.6, throwing for 21 touchdowns and only 8 interceptions.

The 2012 season showed Chryst's strengths and expertise as the teams quarterbacks coach in capitalizing on the strengths of the starting quarterback. Midway through the season, Kaepernick was named the team's starter. Chryst's quarterback duo of Kaepernick and Alex Smith, tied for the fewest interceptions in the NFL (8), ranked 4th in quarterback rating (101.2), and 4th in completion percentage (66.3).

In 2011, Chryst helped guide Smith to his best NFL season, setting career highs in passing yards (3,144), completions (273), and passer rating (90.7). He also set the franchise record for fewest interceptions thrown in a single-season with just five. Smith's five interceptions are tied for third in NFL history (min. 400 atts.) and his interception percentage of 1.1 also ranks third in NFL history (min. 400 atts.). Most importantly, he posted a 14-4 overall record as the starter, in 2011.

Chryst joined the 49ers in 2011 after five years as the tight ends coach/offensive quality control for the Carolina Panthers. In 2009, Chryst was part of an offensive coaching staff that helped the Panthers become the first team in the history of the NFL to garner two running backs with more than 1,100 yards rushing in the same season. His tight end unit also posted the most productive receiving season for Panthers tight ends in a decade that year.

CHRYST'S NFL COACHING BACKGROUND

Years	Coaching Position	Team
2015-current	Offensive Coordinator	San Francisco 49ers
2011-14	Quarterbacks	San Francisco 49ers
2006-10	Tight Ends/Quality Control	Carolina Panthers
2001-03	Quarterbacks	Arizona Cardinals
1999-2000	Offensive Coordinator/Quarterbacks	San Diego Chargers
1998	Quarterbacks	Arizona Cardinals
1996-97	Tight Ends	Arizona Cardinals

Before joining Carolina in 2006, Chryst served as the Arizona Cardinals quarterbacks coach (2001-03) and San Diego Chargers offensive coordinator/quarterbacks coach (1999-2000). Chryst implemented the no-huddle offense in San Diego in 1999, which led to Jim Harbaugh enjoying the second-highest passing output (2,761 passing yards) of his 15-year career. The Chargers also completed the most passes (332) in 13 years with Chryst directing the offense and Harbaugh became the first quarterback in team history since Hall of Famer Dan Fouts to pass for 400 yards in a game, that year.

Chryst spent three seasons with the Cardinals, serving as the team's tight ends coach from 1996-97 before becoming the quarterbacks coach in 1998. He began his NFL coaching career with the Chicago Bears in 1991 as the director of research/quality control, a position he held until 1995. In the spring of 1992, Chryst, after being out of uniform for eight years, took a 15-day hiatus from the Bears to long snap in three playoff games for the short-handed Orlando Thunder of the World League. Interestingly, he had made his professional coaching debut with the Thunder in 1991, serving as the wide receivers/running backs coach.

Chryst began his coaching career at University of Wisconsin-Platteville in 1987 before moving over to the University of Wisconsin-Madison in 1988. Chryst then spent two years at the University of Wyoming, serving as the offensive line coach in 1989 and the quarterbacks coach in 1990.

A three-year starter at linebacker for Princeton University, Chryst also played baseball for two seasons for the Tigers. He earned a bachelor's degree in history from Princeton as well as a master's degree in educational administration from the University of Wisconsin.

CHRYST'S FAMILY TREE

Chryst comes from a football-enriched family, as his father, George, was the head coach at the University of Wisconsin-Platteville beginning in 1979 and later became athletic director in 1981. He guided the Pioneers to a 79-60-2 record, including a Wisconsin State University Conference championship in 1980.

Similar to Geep, his brother, Paul, has an extensive background with experience at both the NFL and collegiate levels. He spent the last three seasons as the head football coach at the University of Pittsburgh prior to being introduced as the 30th head coach in University of Wisconsin-Madison's history in December of 2014.

COLIN CARD

Going into just his third full season as a starter in 2015, Colin Kaepernick is coming off of one of the most productive statistical seasons of his young career. Last season, Kaepernick set career highs in completions (289), passing yards (3,369) and rushing yards (641). His resume speaks for itself, as Kaepernick guided the 49ers to the NFC Championship and a berth in Super Bowl XLVII in just his 10th career start, the 3rd fewest of any starting Super Bowl QB. He set the all-time single-game rushing record (regular or postseason) for a QB with 181 yds. against the Green Bay Packers in the NFC Divisional Playoff game. He followed that season with another trip to the NFC Championship Game in 2013, winning the first three road playoff games of his career in the process.

2015 Highlights...

- Registered his 4th career 300-yd. passing game at Pit. (9/20), completing 33 of 46 atts. for 335 yds., 2 TDs and a QB rating of 106.7. His 33 comps. set a career high and were the most by a 49ers QB since Tim Rattay in 2004 [33 comps. vs. Arz. (10/10/04)] He also connected with 11 different targets on the day.
- Threw for 165 yds. on 17 completions vs. Min. (9/14) and became the first quarterback in franchise history to win each of his first three starts in season openers.
- He also improved to 5-0 on Monday Night Football, becoming the fourth quarterback all-time to start his career with 5 straight wins on MNF.

- Finished the 2013 season with a 91.6 passer rating, the highest single-season rating by a 49ers quarterback since 2001 (Jeff Garcia - 94.8).
- Set the 49ers franchise record for most passing yds. in a season opener vs. GB (9/8/13) as he completed 27 of 39 atts. for 412 yds., 3 TDs and a QB rating of 129.4. Since 1960, Kaepernick joined Hall of Famer Joe Montana as the only QBs in franchise history to throw for 400 yds, 3 TDs and 0 INTs in a game.
- Had a 58-yd. run at Sea. (1/19/14) (NFC-C), which is the longest run by a QB in NFL postseason history. Finished the game with 130 rushing yds. and now owns three of the top five rushing performances by a QB in NFL postseason history.
- Helped defeat the Panthers, 23-10, at Car. (1/12/14) (NFC-D) to earn his 3rd road win in the playoffs, which is the most among all QBs in franchise history.
- In his first career postseason start, set the NFL single-game rushing record (regular season and playoffs) by a QB with 181 yds. vs. GB (1/12/13), surpassing Michael Vick's 173 rushing yds. in 2002 (12/1/02 at Min.).

FAST AS EVER

The longest tenured member of the 49ers, Vernon Davis has a tremendous track record as being one of the most versatile and explosive tight ends in the game. Drafted by the 49ers with the 6th overall pick in the 2006 NFL Draft, Davis had a pair of touchdown receptions in the 2014 season after hauling in 13 touchdown receptions the year prior and becoming the first tight end in NFL history to register 13-or-more touchdowns in two seasons (13 in 2009). His performance in 2013 earned him his second career Pro Bowl selection. During the 2011 NFL playoffs, Davis registered 10 catches for 292 yards and four touchdowns, becoming just the fifth player in the Super Bowl era to register at least two receiving touchdowns in consecutive postseason games in the same season. Davis followed up his first trip to the playoffs with 254 receiving yards in the 2012 postseason, joining Cardinals WR Larry Fitzgerald as the only two players in NFL history to register four, 100-yard receiving games in their first five playoff contests. In the 2013 postseason, Davis hauled in a touchdown at Green Bay (1/5/14), and another at Carolina (1/12/14) the following week. He is currently tied for the most postseason touchdown receptions among all tight ends in NFL history with seven. Davis led the team in both receiving yards and touchdowns in 2009 and 2010, and was rewarded with a five-year contract extension on September 11, 2010. Davis is just as active off the field as he is on it, pursuing everything from curling and painting to humanitarian trips overseas.

2015 Highlights...

- Registered a team-high 47 rec. yds. on 3 receipts. (15.7 avg.) vs. Min. (9/14).

Career Highlights...

- Reached 50 TDs in just 115 games, the third fastest among TEs in NFL history (Antonio Gates - 92; Jerry Smith - 100).
- Ranks 1st in franchise history among TEs in TDs (55), rec. yds. (5,555) and receipts. (431). His 55 rec. TDs are 4th most in 49ers history.
- According to ESPN Stats & Information, Davis is one of only three 49ers with multiple seasons of 10-plus receiving touchdowns in the past 40 years.
- Has nine 100-yd. rec. games, which ranks 1st in franchise history among TEs.
- Has tallied 600 career postseason rec. yds., ranking 6th most in NFL postseason history among TEs.
- Compiled 11 career 25+ yd. receipts. in 8 career postseason games, which ranks 2nd in 49ers postseason history, trailing WR Jerry Rice (14 receipts. in 23 games).
- Since 2009, Davis ranks 1st in the NFL in receipts. of 25-or-more yds. (48) and 4th in receiving TDs (46), among all TEs.
- Set single-season career highs with 78 receipts., 965 rec. yds. and 13 TD receipts. in 2009. He was one of only two TEs to lead their team in all three categories (Kellen Winslow, TB). His rec. yds. and TD totals were both single-season records among 49ers TEs all-time.
- In 2009, his 13 TD receipts. tied the then-NFL record for most in a season by a TE (Antonio Gates - 13 TDs in 2004). Davis' TD receipts. tied for the most in the NFL with Patriots WR Randy Moss and Cardinals WR Larry Fitzgerald, making him the second TE (Rob Gronkowski - 17) in the Super Bowl era to lead the league (or tie for the lead) in TD receipts.

HALL OF FAME CAREER

Anquan Boldin has been the definition of consistent since joining the 49ers in 2013 and continued that trend in 2014. He led the team in receptions (83) and receiving yards (1,062) and once again provided veteran leadership to many of the team's younger players last season. The 12-year veteran and three-time Pro Bowl selection became just the fourth player in franchise history to have multiple 1,000-yard seasons with the 49ers and the first player to do so in his first two seasons with the team. Boldin's final stat line from the 2014 season moved him into a tie for 15th place on the all-time career receptions list and into 19th for most receiving yards in a career. Additionally, his efforts both on the field and off the field with the Anquan Boldin Foundation, he was named a finalist for both the Walter Payton NFL Man of the Year and ESPN Sports Humanitarian of the Year. Boldin has always had a knack for starting fast, exemplified by his possession of multiple NFL rookie records, including most receptions in a season (101) and most receiving yards in the first game of a career (217). He was named the NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year in 2003 and selected to the Pro Bowl that season for his efforts. He is the fastest player in NFL history to haul in his 400th, 500th and 600th career receptions and notched his 900th career reception during the season vs. St. Louis (11/2/14) to become the third fastest in NFL history to accomplish the milestone (164 games).

CONFUSE & CONQUER

Eric Mangini is in his third season with the 49ers and first as the defensive coordinator. A former two-time NFL head coach, Mangini spent the 2014 season as the tight ends coach and the 2013 season as the team's senior offensive consultant.

Mangini's wealth of football coaching experience, including stints as a head coach with the Cleveland Browns (2009-10) and New York Jets (2006-08), has been evident in his time with the team. In his 18 years as an NFL coach, he has been a part of seven playoff teams, including five division titles and three Super Bowl Championships. Prior to joining the 49ers, Mangini worked as an NFL analyst at ESPN from 2011-12.

As a NFL rookie head coach with the New York Jets in 2006, Mangini took a team that went 4-12 the previous season and directed it to a 10-6 regular season record and a playoff appearance. He was later recognized as AFC Coach of the Year by the Kansas City Committee of 101. Eight different Jets earned Pro Bowl honors over the three years that Mangini was head coach. Of the eight, three were drafted in Mangini's first two seasons with the team (C Nick Mangold, CB Darrelle Revis and KR Leon Washington), while four others (DT Kris Jenkins, QB Brett Favre, RB Thomas Jones and G Alan Faneca) were acquired while he was the head coach.

MANGINI'S NFL COACHING BACKGROUND

Years	Coaching Position	Team
2015-current	Defensive Coordinator	San Francisco 49ers
2014	Tight Ends	San Francisco 49ers
2013	Senior Offensive Consultant	San Francisco 49ers
2009-10	Head Coach	Cleveland Browns
2006-08	Head Coach	New York Jets
2005	Defensive Coordinator	New England Patriots
2000-04	Defensive Backs	New England Patriots
1997-99	Defensive Assistant/Quality Control	New York Jets
1996	Offensive Assistant/Quality Control	Baltimore Ravens
1995	Coaches' Assistant	Cleveland Browns

Prior to being named head coach of the Jets, Mangini spent six seasons with the New England Patriots as their defensive backs coach (2000-04) and defensive coordinator (2005), where he was part of three Super Bowl Championships. In Mangini's six seasons with the Patriots, the Patriots ranked fifth in interceptions (109) and second in interceptions returned for touchdowns (16). As the defensive coordinator in 2005, New England won 10 games and the AFC East despite having 45 different players make at least one start, an NFL record for a division champion.

Mangini served as a defensive assistant with the Jets from 1997-99, after spending 1996 as an offensive assistant with the Baltimore Ravens. He began his NFL coaching career with the Cleveland Browns as a coaches assistant in 1995, after serving as a ball boy and public relations intern with the team the previous year.

A native of Hartford, CT, Mangini played collegiately at Wesleyan University and graduated with a degree in political science. A nose tackle on the football team, Mangini still holds school records for single-season (11.5) and career (36.5) sacks.

COUNT HIM IN

Going into his 10th season and second with the 49ers, Antoine Bethea has made an instant impact on his teammates and coaches during his first year-plus with the team. Last season, he was selected by his coaches as the team's Bill Walsh Award recipient, given to the team MVP, as well as earning his third trip to the Pro Bowl. In 2014, he led the 49ers defense with 85 solo tackles, and registered the first interception for a touchdown of his career, a 49-yard interception return against San Diego (12/20/15).

Since being drafted in 2006, he has proven to be one of the most consistent and reliable tacklers in the NFL. He has started 116 consecutive games dating back to 2008 and has started all 143 games that he's appeared in over his career. He has made an impact off the field as well by launching his Safe Coverage Foundation, hosting free football camps for youth and donating game tickets to underserved children.

2015 Highlights...

- Had a team-high 10 tackles at Arz. (9/27).
- Registered 1.0 sack vs. Min. (9/15) and now has 5.5 for his career. It marked Bethea's first sack since 10/13/14 at StL.

Career Highlights...

- According to TrueMedia statistics, he has recorded the 2nd-most tackles (660) among all defensive backs since 2006.
- Has started all 143 games he's appeared in since 2006, including 16 games each year from 2008-14.
- Selected by the coaches as the team's Bill Walsh Award recipient in 2014, given to the 49ers team MVP.
- As a rookie in 2006, was a member of an Indianapolis Colts team that won Super Bowl XLI over the Chicago Bears, 29-17.
- Selected to the AFC Pro Bowl in 2007 and 2009 and was a Pro Bowl selection in 2014.
- Was the recipient of the Colts Ed Block Courage Award in 2012. Also voted the 2013 Colts Man of the Year.

REID-ING THE OFFENSE

Selected as the 18th overall draft choice in the 2013 NFL Draft, Eric Reid has done everything you could ask for after earning his starting spot in training camp of his rookie year. Reid has started in each of the 31 out of a possible 32 games over his first two seasons. In 2014, he started each of the team's first 15 games and registered 55 tackles, seven passes defended and three interceptions. He quickly made a name for himself as a rookie in 2013, finishing the season as the only player in the NFC to record four interceptions and two fumble recoveries. He became the first 49ers rookie safety to be named to the Pro Bowl in franchise history. Reid was the recipient of the Thomas Herrion Memorial Award given by the 49ers coaches to the rookie or first-year player who has taken advantage of every opportunity and turned it into a positive situation. Off the field in 2015, Reid hosted the inaugural "Eric Reid Invitational," a golf tournament which raised over $70,000 for the Baton Rouge Sickle Cell Foundation.

Career Highlights...

- Made his NFL debut vs. GB (9/8/13), recording 7 tackles, 1 INT, 1 PD and 1 special teams tackle. His first career INT came off of Packers QB Aaron Rodgers. Reid became the first 49ers rookie to intercept a pass on opening day since both DB Don Griffin and CB Tim McKyer each registered an INT at TB (9/7/86).
- Registered his 2nd INT of his career picking off a pass by Seahawks QB Russell Wilson vs. Sea. (9/15/13). According to the Elias Sports Bureau, Reid was the only 49ers rookie, since the merger in 1970, to register an INT in each of the team's first 2 games. The last rookie in the NFL to register an INT in the team's first 2 games was Phi. S Nate Allen in 2010.
- Notched a single-game career-high 9 tackles vs. Hou. (10/6), and also added 1 PD.
- Tallied 1 INT vs. Arz. (10/13/13), the 3rd of his career, picking off QB Carson Palmer and returning it 53 yds to the Cardinals 7-yd. line. Also recorded his first career FR, recovering a fumble by Arz. WR Larry Fitzgerald. The takeaway led to a 6-yd. TD run by RB Kendall Hunter.
- Recorded his first career special teams FR, picking up the loose ball after it was touched by Panthers CB Drayton Florence vs. Car. (11/10/13). The takeaway led to a 43-yd. FG by K Phil Dawson.
- Picked off QB Mike Glennon at TB (12/15/13), registering the 4th INT of his career. He also added 5 tackles and 1 PD.
- Finished the 2013 season as the only player in the NFC to record 4 INTs and 2 FRs.
- Named to the 2013 NFC Pro Bowl. Also earned the Thomas Herrion Memorial Award given by the 49ers coaches to the rookie or first-year player who has taken advantage of every opportunity and turned it into a positive situation

THE MCGAUGHEY SPECIAL

Thomas McGaughey Jr. (muh-GAY-hee) enters his ninth season in the NFL and first with the 49ers as the team's special teams coordinator. Having served as a special teams coordinator at the professional, collegiate and high school levels, he is a veteran of 18 coaching seasons.

As the New York Jets special teams coordinator, Jets K Nick Folk ranked tied for third in the league with 32 field goals made, in 2014. His 32 field goals made under McGaughey were the second-most in a single season in his career. The kickoff return unit also averaged 83.9 return yards per game (23.1 yards per return average), which ranked second in the NFL.

During McGaughey's three seasons as special teams coordinator at Louisiana State University (2011-13), the Tigers saw future NFL Draft choices WR Odell Beckham, Jr. and S Tyrann Mathieu earn All-America honors as returners. K Drew Alleman was named Second-Team All-SEC in 2012, while P Brad Wing garnered Second-Team All-America honors in 2011. While at LSU, McGaughey guided the Tigers special teams to seven touchdowns.

Prior to leading the Tigers special teams, McGaughey served as the assistant special teams coordinator with the New York Giants from 2007-10. In 2008, the team ranked fourth in the NFL in field goal percentage and saw K John Carney, P Jeff Feagles and LS Zak DeOssie each earn Pro Bowl honors. That year, Carney set a franchise record by connecting on 35-of-38 field goals (92.1 percent).

McGaughey joined the Giants after two seasons as the assistant special teams coach with the Denver Broncos. In 2006, Denver held opposing punt returners to an average of 6.9 yards per return, which ranked fifth in the NFL. The year prior, McGaughey worked with the Broncos special teams that saw the club go 13-3 and advance to the AFC Championship Game.

McGaughey spent two years (2003-04) working at the University of Houston before going to Denver. While with the Cougars, he was the special teams coordinator in 2003 and special teams coordinator and cornerbacks coach in 2004.

MCGAUGHEY JR.'S NFL COACHING BACKGROUND

Years	Coaching Position	Team
2015-current	Special Teams Coordinator	San Francisco 49ers
2014	Special Teams Coordinator	New York Jets
2002	Assistant Special Teams Coordinator	Kansas City Chiefs
2001	Minority Coaching Fellowship	Kansas City Chiefs

McGaughey originally entered coaching in the NFL as part of the NFL's minority coaching fellowship with the Kansas City Chiefs during the training camp of 2001, McGaughey joined the staff full time in 2002 as an assistant special teams coach.

In 2001, McGaughey worked as a pro scouting assistant with the Houston Texans, the year before the club's inaugural season. Prior to his time with the Texans, McGaughey served as the defensive backs and special teams coach for Willowridge High School in Texas from 1998 to 2001.

McGaughey began his coaching career as a graduate assistant at the University of Houston, where he was a four-year safety and special teams captain as a senior.

Following his senior season at the University of Houston, McGaughey spent time in training camp with the Cincinnati Bengals in 1996. Late in the 1996 season, McGaughey joined the Philadelphia Eagles practice squad and also spent training camp with the Eagles in 1997. He was a member of a Barcelona Dragons team out of NFL Europe that won the NFL Europe World Bowl title, in 1997. Interestingly, McGaughey has been apart of two football championships - Super Bowl XLII in 2007 with the New York Giants and an SEC Championship in 2011 with LSU.

DAWSON'S KICK

Entering his third season with the 49ers, Phil Dawson joined the 49ers in 2013 after spending the previous 14 seasons with the Cleveland Browns. In his second year with the club in 2014, he finished the season with 25 made field goals and 108 total points. During the 2013 regular season he had the second most made field goals (32) and points scored (140) in 49ers history, and kicked the game-winning 33-yard field goal in the Wild Card round at Green Bay (1/5/14). Head coach Jim Tomsula expressed his appreciation for what Dawson brings to the team, saying, "If you brought somebody in, anybody in that locker room, you want to get them around Phil. Great family man, good person, has his head really locked in right and knows how to be able to perform in this game and then walk out the door and perform everywhere. He's just a quality person in every sense of the word." Dawson made the move to San Francisco after establishing himself as one of the most accurate kickers in NFL history, ranking 12th all-time with a field goal percentage of 84.1% (366 of 435). Dawson has proven himself to be one of the most reliable kickers in extreme weather conditions in NFL history, registering a single-season career-high with 140 points in 2013.

Career Highlights...

- Set a new 49ers postseason record for longest FG made with a 49-yd. FG at Car. (1/12/14) (NFC-D).
 - Holds the 49ers record for most consecutive made FGs with 27.
 - Has the 3rd highest all-time FG percentage, among kickers with 300+ FG atts., in NFL history at 84.1%.
 - Ranks as the Browns franchise leader in FG percentage with a mark of 84% (305-363).
 - Is 1st on the Browns all-time FGs made list with 305 kicks made.
 - Ranks 2nd in Browns franchise history with 1,265 career points (Lou Groza - 1,349).
- Holds the Browns franchise single-season record with 30 FGs made in 2008.
 - Is the only player in Browns franchise history to account for 6 100-point seasons.
 - In 2008, he became the first player in Browns franchise history to convert a 50+ yd. FG in three consecutive games.
 - In 2004, he established a Browns franchise record with 27 consecutive FGs made [vs. SD (10/19/03) - vs. NYJ (11/21/04)], only to one-up his own record in 2012 with 29 consecutive FGs made [vs. Bal. (12/4/11) - at Oak. (12/2/12)].
 - According to the Elias Sports Bureau, Dawson, who also holds the Cleveland Browns franchise record for most consecutive made FGs (27), joined K Olindo Mare (Mia. and Sea.) and Neil Rackers (Arz. and Hou.) as the only kickers who currently hold the record for most consecutive made FGs for two different franchises.

On Head Coach Jim Tomsula

“The thing I love about Jim is, Jim is Jim. He’s going to be who he is. He’s not going to try to be anybody else and guys appreciate that honesty, that sincerity. And he does care about the players. He cares deeply about them and that resonates, I believe, in the locker room. He cares about the coaches. He cares about the organization. That’s just his personality. His relationship with everybody in the building, from the GM to the people that he meets in stadium ops that maybe he doesn’t have contact with, treats everybody the same way and I have a lot of respect for that.”

- Defensive Coordinator Eric Mangini

- Current NFL Network Analyst and former NFL Head Coach, Steve Mariucci

“Clearly he’s a player’s coach. You can see that he cares about his players and sets a good environment for his players. He tries to be very upbeat. He’s very detailed in the things that he’s trying to do as far as getting with the players and getting them on the same page. You can see that he’s coming in with different philosophical things with the up-tempo offense and up-tempo defense. So far, so good. You root for a guy like Jim Tomsula.”

- ESPN Insider, John Clayton

“Coach Tomsula is the most genuine head coach I’ve ever had in my football career. He really cares. If he says something, you can rest assured that he’s going to try to get it done. You can be pretty confident that he’s going to do whatever he can do for you. I think the guys respect that, I know I love him. I’ll do anything for him. I think that’ll translate on the field for us.”

- S Eric Reid

“He tells it how it is. If anything big happens out there he’s big on moving on to the next play. That’s how he operates. We don’t try to hop on what’s happened before, we try to just keep it moving. He’s real positive when something good happens, but if it’s not good, he’s going to let us know.”

- LB NaVorro Bowman

“He’s one of the most knowledgeable guys, one of the most passionate and he doesn’t think about football the way a typical coach does. He thinks about it more as a player. He understands the passion and emotion. And he understands the mental aspect.”

- T Joe Staley

On Offensive Coordinator Geep Chryst

“He has a great understanding of the offense and how everything fits together. He understands how the offensive line’s blocking schemes affect what the quarterback does. It’s not like he’s a new coordinator who is trying to figure everybody out. He’s got a lot of history with the guys in the locker room.”

- T Joe Staley

“He brings a lot of energy to our offense and does well to get the most out of his players. He creates opportunities for a lot of guys.”

- RB Reggie Bush

- QB Colin Kaepernick

“I’ve known Geep for a long time. He was actually my quarterbacks coach in Arizona my rookie year. He’s a great football mind, and I think he can bring a spark to the offense.”

- WR Anquan Boldin

On Defensive Coordinator Eric Mangini

“Coach Mangini’s thing is that we’re going to cause confusion. The opposing offense won’t know what we’re going to do each down. That could be bringing pressure or dropping eight in coverage, but it’s all about keeping the offense on their heels. That means a lot of movement and everyone having to know what everyone else is doing. It could be different people doing different jobs.”

- S Antoine Bethea

“He wants the offense to have to defend us, rather than us defend the offense.”

- LB NaVorro Bowman

On DL Arik Armstead

"We had very, very high grades on him. Very active, very athletic, big, long guy. When he gets in there, he's an explosive player. He can get to the quarterback. He can disrupt things."

- Arizona Cardinals Head Coach Bruce Arians

On TE Blake Bell

"Here's a guy 6-6, I think he weighed in at over 260 pounds, but what you see when you watch him on the field isn't size or girth, you're seeing an athleticism, a savvy, an ability to really be a nice weapon. So as a young receiver, he's got a lot of attributes."

- Offensive Coordinator Geep Chryst

On LB NaVorro Bowman

"He has a well-known presence on the field, something everyone respects. They respect how hard he works. The time and effort he puts in and ultimately the way he plays this game. So, it's exciting for this team to have him back out there."

- QB Colin Kaepernick

"He's an outstanding football player that has overcome a serious injury. I have a lot of respect for him being out there. There are a lot of physical challenges overcoming that kind of injury. I can just only imagine how much work he's put in to get back out there. I wish him the best."

- Denver Broncos QB Peyton Manning

On TE Garrett Celek

"Garrett's someone that has had a great feel for defenses and where the air pockets are and how to get open. So, he's someone we have confidence in as far as getting him the ball and allowing him to adjust to it."

- QB Colin Kaepernick

"There you go, there's an undrafted free agent that comes to work everyday man, he grinds hard. He's my kind of guy. He's a really good player. He can run. He catches. He's smart. You can use him in a lot of ways. And he's got that grit and toughness. He's a big body guy. He's got that grit and toughness where he doesn't mind mixing it up with you either."

- Head Coach Jim Tomsula

On K Phil Dawson

"If you brought somebody in and you want somebody, not only Bradley Pinion, anybody in that locker room, you want to get them around Phil. Again, great family man, good person, has his head really locked in right and knows how to be able to perform in this game and then walk out the door and perform everywhere. He's just a quality person in every sense of the word."

- Head Coach Jim Tomsula

On TE Vernon Davis

"I've been very impressed in what I've seen from Vernon. It's hard to cover him with a linebacker or a safety. From what I've seen in practice, the guy is almost unstoppable when he wants to be. This is the first year I've been able to play with him and really watch him on an everyday basis, but everything I've seen tells me that this guy is a great player and he hasn't lost a step. He's still fast, one of the fastest guys out there. He has great hands, great size. I love watching him run routes."

- RB Reggie Bush

"He's helped a lot. He's definitely a guy you can go to and ask questions. He's not going to give you the wrong answer or lead you in the wrong direction. I've asked him a lot of questions on routes, or he'll come up to me and say do this, or try and tweak that, and I do it and it helped me a lot."

- TE Blake Bell

On DT Quinton Dial

"He's an incredible person, incredible father, husband, friend. Great in the locker room and he is incredibly scary when it comes to putting a helmet on. So, he's that guy that we want. He's the true definition of a switch."

- Head Coach Jim Tomsula

"I think when you play a guy like that, he really brings out the best in you because you do have to think more. It's not just a 350-pound dude who's going to run into you full speed. It's a guy that can move, he's got good hands, he's smart, he knows what he's doing, where he's at. When you get a guy like that, it brings your level of play up and it starts to bring you into the season in a good way."

- G/T Alex Boone

On RB Jarryd Hayne

"He's coming along great. From what I've seen, he's working hard, he's working on the details. He's out after practice almost every day working on the mechanics and his footwork and how to hold the ball and all those little things that add up to being a great running back in this league. He's definitely putting in the work and the overtime to help make a difference on this team."

- RB Reggie Bush

"He's come leaps and bounds. It's something that, it's really hard to describe because it's such a unique situation. If I went over and tried to play rugby, I'd probably be lost. So, him coming over, being able to pick up football and the schemes that we have and what we're trying to ask him to do in such a short period of time has really been amazing."

- QB Colin Kaepernick

On RB Carlos Hyde

“He comes with that energy and enthusiasm that you want in a running back. He motivates the offensive line. When you got a guy out there that’s running hard like that, that’s just motivation. You want to keep picking your running back up because he’s going to keep hitting it.”

- C Marcus Martin

“He’s awesome. He could be one of the best in the NFL. He has so much talent and great vision and what we’re doing schematically really fits his strengths.”

- T Joe Staley

On QB Colin Kaepernick

“I’ve always liked Colin. I think he’s very athletic and I think that he’s a guy that will make a lot of big plays. He’s doing more within the pocket, which I think as he continues to do that, it’s going to help him. He’s a great athlete and he’s got that big play ability to avoid things and make things happen.”

- Denver Broncos Executive Vice President of Football Operations/General Manager John Elway

“He’s a guy that’s going to study every detail of what we need to do and we have a ton of confidence in him to do that and also bring other guys along with him.”

- T Joe Staley

“The thing that people don’t realize is how hard this guy works. Me seeing that at a workout facility is completely different than seeing it here in the classroom, being a student, the way he communicates, trying to make sure we are all on the same page. I have that much more respect for him. There’s no one that works harder than Kap.”

- WR Torrey Smith

On LB Aaron Lynch

“He’s another guy that I think has tremendous potential to grow. He’s very talented physically, physically gifted, very smart. He has an excellent play demeanor.”

- Defensive Coordinator Eric Mangini

On P Bradley Pinion

“Very, very mature for his age. Just turned 21. Has tremendous upside. The hang-to-distance ratio with this kid is very, very good. Just got to get him consistent directionally, but the sky’s the limit with this kid.”

- Special Teams Coordinator Thomas McGaughey Jr.

On NT Mike Purcell

“You feel great for him. Michael Purcell, he’s another one, I tell you all the time. He’s one of those guys that, he’s a father, he’s a husband, he’s a hard working guy, he’s a good person, great teammate. He’s got all those things and he’s got a lot of ability. So, you’re rooting for him, you’re pulling for him and it excites you.”

- Head Coach Jim Tomsula

On WR Torrey Smith

- QB Colin Kaepernick

On T Joe Staley

“I look up to Joe especially. Just watching how he works, being a Pro Bowler. He’s just a great example to watch and look at every day.”

- OL Trent Brown

On S Jaquiski Tartt

“He’s done a great job. Being as young as he is, trying to learn as much as coach is asking him to learn with going back to safety and coming up playing in the box, that’s a challenge for a rookie. So, he’s done a great job. I enjoy playing with him because he listens and goes out there and does the right thing.”

- LB NaVorro Bowman

“I’ve seen his highlight tape and the kid lays the hammer. He wants to get better, he wants to learn and that’s all you can ask from a young guy. He has a bright future.”

- S Eric Reid

On WR DeAndrew White

“He’s definitely developed, learned to be a pro. I’m trying to teach him how to take care of his body because it’s a long season. I’m trying to take him under my wing. He’s an awesome playmaker.”

- DT Quinton Dial

HT	WT	COLLEGE	CB
6-0	195	SOUTHERN METHODIST
BORN 2.6.92 // PORTLAND, OR // GRANT HS, PORTLAND, OR 2ND YEAR // ACQUIRED D-6 IN '14

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his NFL debut and first career start vs. Min. (9/14).
- Registered 9 tackles and the first INT and PD of his career at Arz. (9/27), picking off Cardinals QB Carson Palmer late in the first half.

GOLDMINE

- Like many other members on the 49ers roster, Acker's body features meaningful tattoos. One of them in particular is very important to him. "The one of myself and my deceased brother [Karols]. He watches over me as my guardian angel. It says playing for two, his eyes watch over me."
- Acker enjoyed a tremendously successful high school athletic career. A versatile athlete on the football field, Acker spent time lined up at quarterback, slot receiver, outside receiver, cornerback, punt returner, kick returner and kicker. He was named both Offensive and Defensive Player of the Year twice at Grant High School (2008 and 2009), while also returning 11 kick and punt returns for TDs in his senior season alone.

ACKER'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Prior to WrestleMania 31 held at Levi's® Stadium, joined 49ers teammates and WWE Superstars in visiting the Ronald McDonald House at Stanford. The 49ers players served ice cream, played games with kids, did arts and crafts and threw the football around.
- Earned all-state recognition at both defensive back and quarterback in high school.

BORN 11.15.94 // SACRAMENTO, CA // PLEASANT GROVE HS, ELK GROVE, CA ROOKIE // ACQUIRED D-1 IN '15

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his NFL debut vs. Min (9/14).
- Registered 3 tackles and the first sack of his NFL career at Arz. (9/27), bringing down QB Carson Palmer for a 4-yd. loss.

GOLDMINE

- Armstead's brother, Armond, was forced to retire before ever playing a down in the NFL. After playing collegiately at USC, Armond became an All-Star for the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League, helping the team win the league's 100th Grey Cup. He went on to sign with the New England Patriots in 2013, but medical issues forced him to hang up his cleats. "The biggest thing he has told me through this process is, 'at the end of the day, it's just football.' Having a brother who played at this level makes everything less overwhelming."
- If Armstead wasn't in the NFL, he would be playing basketball. He was a three-year starter in basketball at Pleasant Grove High School in Sacramento and played two years at the University of Oregon before focusing solely on football for the 2014 season. He entered his high school senior season listed as the number three prospect in NorCalPrep.com's Top 40 rankings for the class of 2012. "A big part of the recruiting pitch from Oregon was they were going to let me play two sports. We only lost 5 games during my time there. I wanted to go somewhere with the chance to win and be a part of something special."
- For Armstead, the NFL Draft process was a whirlwind tour. He went straight from the National Championship Game to San Diego to prepare for the NFL Combine and then to Sacramento for the Draft itself. However, his favorite part of the process was being drafted by a team so close to his hometown. "It's a dream come true. I'm blessed to be in this situation. Not a lot of other people are that close to home. Being able to play home games in front of my family is perfect for me."

ARMSTEAD'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Lists his parents, Gus and Christa, as the most influential people in his life. He also gives credit to his grandfather, Willie B. Armstead, an Air Force veteran, for instilling the value of integrity that his parents have passed along to him. "A lot of things he instilled in my dad have carried down to me. Having a family member who is more courageous than you can imagine and who served his country is a huge honor."
- Played both basketball and football at Oregon before focusing only on football in 2014.

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his NFL debut vs. Min (9/14).
- Recorded the first reception of his NFL career, hauling in an 11-yd. pass from QB Colin Kaepernick at Pit. (9/20).

GOLDMINE

- After a deadly tornado swept through the Oklahoma city suburb of Moore, OK in 2013, Bell used social media to spread the word about housing spaces and volunteered at a local church, passing out food and drinks to those affected by the tornado.
- Blake earned the nickname the "BellDozer" after starring in packages specifically designed for his ability to produce in goal-line and short-yardage situations.
- Bell was selected by the Detroit Tigers in the 43rd round (1,303rd overall) in the 2010 Major League Baseball Draft. Bell joins QB Colin Kaepernick and fellow 2015 NFL Draft pick WR DeAndre Smelter as one of three players on the current roster to be drafted in both the NFL and MLB.
- Named the Bob Kalsu Award winner for the University of Oklahoma football team as a senior in 2014. Kalsu was an All-American offensive tackle in 1967 who courageously gave his life in 1970 serving the U.S. Army. The award is bestowed annually upon the player who "personifies Kalsu's spirit of leadership, serving as a motivator and role model for his teammates."

BELL'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Converted from quarterback to tight end before his senior season at Oklahoma.
- Football runs in his family, as his father, Mark, played TE/DE in the NFL from 1979-84 and his uncle, Mike, was the 2nd overall selection in the 1979 NFL Draft and played 12 seasons with the Kansas City Chiefs.
- Earned the nickname the "BellDozer" in college after being featured in packages specifically designed for his ability to produce in goal-line and short-yardage situations.

HT	WT	COLLEGE	LB
6-1	250	CENTRAL MICHIGAN
BORN 5.12.89 // WHITEFISH BAY, WI // WHITEFISH BAY HS, WHITEFISH BAY, WI 5TH YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '15

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Has appeared in all 64 games throughout his 4-year career (2011-14).
- As a member of the New York Jets, led the team in special teams tackles in each of his first 3 seasons [2011 (31), 2012 (17), 2013 (27)] and finished 2nd on the team in 2014 (15).
- Registered his first career recept. vs. Ind. (10/14/12) on a 23-yd. fake punt pass by former Jets QB Tim Tebow.

GOLDMINE

- As a member of the New York Jets, Bellore hosted 'Jets Huddle' on CBS2 in New York. On the show, he would act as host and ask fan-submitted questions to his teammates. "I enjoy talking about football and even more so learning more about my teammates and the fun stuff they might be involved with off the field. And that's what the show's goal is, to show people a different side of things besides the X's and O's."
- With the Jets, Bellore lived with then teammate and lockermate K Nick Folk and his family. He served as the family's "Manny," helping the Folk's raise their twin boys by playing with them, cooking meals and changing diapers.

BELLORE'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Has made his name as a special teams ace, recording 90 tackles on special teams over the last four seasons with the New York Jets.
- Earned First-Team All-MAC recognition as a senior at Central Michigan.
- Enjoys spending time with his dog, a husky named Mya, playing golf and ice hockey in the offseason back home in Wisconsin.

GOLDMINE

- As the founder of the Safe Coverage Foundation in 2011, Bethea has made it a goal to help youth stay in school and receive a strong education. The foundation's mission statement reads, "The Antoine Bethea Safe Coverage Foundation is committed to providing access and resources for students to achieve their dreams of a higher education. We believe providing exposure opportunities, enrichment experiences and the tools needed to succeed, we can change communities, one child at a time."
- Bethea spent July 4, 2015 on the athletic fields of his alma mater, Denbigh HS, VA, hosting his inaugural "Community Day" where local kids had a chance to enjoy some bounce houses, cotton candy, and participate in a kickball game with Bethea and other NFL players. "My message to the kids is that you can't do it without the community. I want to give back to my community and have everybody come out here and have a good time. This is just my way of showing them I appreciate them for their support."

- Bethea was inducted into the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference (MEAC) Hall of Fame in February of 2015. The MEAC Hall of Fame highlights former student-athletes, coaches, university coaches and special contributors who have enriched the legacy of the conference since its inception in 1970.

- Bethea has teamed up with PETA (People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals) to spread the message about a few of their different campaigns. One was the "Ink, Not Mink" movement, in which Antoine talked about his tattoo and said no to fur. Another was the "Don't Chain Dogs" campaign, where Bethea spoke about his love for dogs and how animals that are dependent on humans shouldn't be left alone and mistreated.

GOLDMINE

- Boldin established the Anquan Boldin Foundation (Q81 Foundations) in 2004, which is dedicated to expanding the educational and life opportunities of underprivileged children. Core services of the foundation support after-school programs, full-time scholarships with the support of the University of Phoenix, and dental care and food programs. "For me it was something that I always wanted to do," said Boldin. "Even if I didn't make it into the NFL, giving back is something that is close to my heart." More information on the Anquan Boldin Foundation is available at www.Q81.org.
- Over the course of 11 years of hard work and an increase in partnerships and resources, the Q81 Foundation has showcased charitable activities in Phoenix, Baltimore, South Florida and the San Francisco Bay Area. Education is the main focus. The Foundation conducts an annual, eight-week, Q81 Summer Enrichment Program in partnership with Florida Crystals. It also serves the community by awarding great scholastic and community achievement in youth, distributing over 10 four-year college scholarships to date.
- In April of 2015, Boldin hosted the 11th Annual Q-Festival with proceeds benefiting his foundation. The weekend-long event took place at the world-renowned PGA National Resort & Spa located in Palm Beach Gardens, FL. This year's activities included a golf tournament, a celebrity basketball game at his alma mater, Pahokee High School, and a "Fun Day in the Park." "Q-Fest is more than just a fun time for me; it is also dear to my heart, because I always wanted to give back to my community that was kind to me when growing up," said Boldin.

- He was named one of three finalists for the Walter Payton NFL Man of the Year Award in 2014. The Walter Payton NFL Man of the Year Award is the only league award that recognizes a player's off-the-field community service as well as his playing excellence. He was the 49ers Walter Payton Man of the Year in 2014, the Baltimore Ravens Walter Payton Man of the Year in 2010 and 2012, as well as the Arizona Cardinals Walter Payton Man of the Year in 2004.

- In November of 2014, Boldin and his wife, Dionne, announced a $1 million endowment to the Q81 Foundation for continued distribution of college scholarships.
- The Foundation conducts annual Thanksgiving and Holiday Shopping sprees as well as collaborative efforts in supporting football camps, tournaments, and the annual Q-Festival Weekend held in South Florida each April.
- The NFL Players Association awarded Boldin $100,000 to the Anquan Boldin Foundation for winning the prestigious Byron "Whizzer" White Award, the highest honor given to a player by the NFL-PA. The award honors the player who serves his team, community and country in the spirit of Byron Raymond "Whizzer" White.
- In March of 2013, Boldin went on a trip to Senegal with Arizona Cardinals WR Larry Fitzgerald to try to help understand and change the mining policies that stripped the natives of their land and left them with nothing. "We wanted to go over there, see the entire process, see how things are run and just come back to the U.S. and advocate for the people who really don't have a voice. We have a trip scheduled to Washington D.C. so that we can actually talk to congress and try to get the policies changed."
- Boldin was inducted into the Palm Beach County Sports Hall of Fame on March 25, 2012, and was honored as a 2012 Distinguished Alumni by the Education Foundation of Palm Beach County, Inc. Another special honor that Boldin has earned in his hometown of Pahokee, FL, is the name of Pahokee High School's football stadium, Anquan Boldin Stadium.

- In April of 2012, Boldin made a mission trip to Ethiopia along with Arizona Cardinals WR Larry Fitzgerald to bring attention to the horrible drought in East Africa. "One of the villages that we went to had a canal around their crops and they had a huge problem with hippos," he said. "So they needed some kind of protection to keep the hippos out. We went there, bought fences, and built fences around the crops so that the hippos couldn't damage the crops anymore." He also helped build retaining walls in one village so that when it did eventually rain, the villagers could catch the water and grow vegetation.
- After the destruction of Hurricane Katrina in 2005, Boldin, along with several teammates, visited displaced hurricane refugees in Phoenix, AZ. He served food and drinks to the Louisiana residents, while donating money to the Hurricane Relief Disaster Fund.

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Part of an offensive line group that helped the team rush for 230 total yds. vs. Min (9/14), the most in franchise history during a season opening game. The O-Line helped pave the way for RB Carlos Hyde as he rushed for a NFL Week 1-high of 168 yds. and 2 TDs.

GOLDMINE

For fans traveling to the San Francisco Zoo, they can keep an eye out for the zoo's endangered black rhinoceros named Boone, whom the zoo chose to name after the 49ers guard. In January of 2013, the San Francisco Zoo invited Alex to be the zookeeper for a day, where he fed giraffes, polar bears and other animals, learned the tools of the trade and met the black rhino who now shares his name. The black rhinos are the most aggressive species of rhinoceros. Black rhinos are known for their power in plowing through and running over things, which matches Boone's playing style on the gridiron. "We're very similar. It's very fitting. I'm very humbled and very honored to have a rhino named after me," Boone said. "I got to feed him, got to pet him, a very soft face, the horn, unbelievable to touch that. It's an honor and a blessing to have such a beautiful animal named after me." This also earned Boone the nickname "The Rhino."

BOONE'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- A rhinoceros at the San Francisco Zoo was named after him, Boone.
- Earned the Bobb McKittrick Award in 2013, awarded to the offensive lineman who best displays the qualities of the former 49ers offensive line coach.

GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- Boone remains very active in the Bay Area community. In late November of 2013, Boone participated in the 7th Annual tree lighting ceremony in San Francisco.
- In the offseason following his rookie season, Boone returned home to Lakewood, OH, where he began working out with former NFL O-Lineman LeCharles Bentley. With Bentley's help and guidance, Alex returned for training in the best shape of his life. He dropped 40 pounds of fat before putting 25 pounds of muscle back on. "LeCharles helped me realize what it takes to be successful in the NFL," Boone said. "He has helped me with my footwork, my initial burst and my quickness. I know I'll be ready for whatever the coaches throw at me this season."
- The one person Boone always admired and wanted to be like was his grandfather. "My grandfather raised my brother and I with good morals and good values," said Boone. "He was always there for us." Alex saw him as a smart person who everyone looked up to. A very religious man, the two of them prayed together regularly and attended church every Sunday. His grandfather passed away when he was young, which left a void in his life. "It crushed me. I never really had to be by myself." Boone vividly remembers the moment he heard the news. "I remember I was eating pizza and I was 13 years old." Talking to his grandmother about him has been a breath of fresh air, reassuring Boone that his grandfather will always be with him. "He was a funny guy who loved to laugh. He was a real jokester. I try to be like him every day."

GOLDMINE

- Established the “4th & Goal Foundation,” which aims to impact the lives of children through the San Francisco Bay Area. Bowman’s goal for his foundation is to build play zones around the Bay Area that will provide state-of-the-art playgrounds to low-income elementary schools so that their students will have a safe outdoor environment to increase social, emotional and cognitive skills as well as a space for increased physical activity. The first play zone will be installed in the summer of 2016 and the hope is to impact the lives of 10,000 children by the end of 2017.

- Bowman hosted his 2nd Annual NaVorro Bowman Football Camp, a free youth camp for local children in his home community of Forestville, MD in June of 2015. He partnered with the District Height Boys and Girls Club, a group in which Bowman was a member while growing up.

- Bowman and other NFL Players joined the Wounded Warriors Amputee Softball Team (WWAST) for a game of softball at Bowie Baysox Stadium in Maryland to raise funds for Veterans Amputee Charities. This marked the third year of the event, but the first time NFL players participated. Bowman and teammate DT Darnell Dockett served as team captains for the game that ended in a 14-14 tie.

- In June of 2015, Bowman hosted the inaugural “Celebrity Steak-Out”, raising money for under-privileged youth in the community. “I wasn’t too privileged growing up,” Bowman said. “I had to scratch and claw and find things to do as a child.

And me being where I am today, I’m able to provide something, especially for kids who don’t have as much as the next kid. So I really want to provide inner-city, low-income students in the Bay Area with a safe place to play.”

- Bowman works with the Bayview Hunters Point YMCA and recently received an award for his efforts in the program. He has participated in numerous events, including a night of bowling to benefit children, and a toy drive during the holiday season.

- In 2013, Bowman traveled to Africa to participate in the Pros for Africa program, which partners with the Starkey Hearing Foundation to provide more than 4,100 customized hearing devices for those in need. NaVorro and other NFL players helped fit patients with hearing aids. “By giving hearing aids, we have blessed these people and put smiles on their faces. We were able to give them a whole new life.”

- Bowman was born and raised just outside of Washington D.C. in a high-crime area. It was a tough environment to avoid, but sports became his outlet from the streets and drugs. “My parents had been with me since day one. Also, having a support system like my high school coach. He really let me know early on that I had something special and I shouldn’t mess it up.”
- Two important and influential people in Bowman’s life abruptly passed away. His father passed away from a blood clot that reached his heart, while his high school coach died in a car accident before Penn State’s bowl game in 2009. “Dealing with as much adversity as I have in a short period of time has made me the man I am today. It’s made me stay on track and strive to do those things that will possibly help me be successful, not just on the football field, but off the field also.”
- He earned his degree in criminal law and justice and one day would like to use that to help out his hometown. With all of the violence and drugs in District Heights, MD, he believes being from the area will help others listen to him. “That’s one of the reasons I got in that field - to open doors and possibly be able to get into a young child’s head from my neighborhood.”

2013: USA Today All-Joe Team, NFC Defensive Player of the Week (Week 5)

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Registered 4 tackles, 1 INT and 2 PD vs. Min. (9/14), picking off Vikings QB Teddy Bridgewater and returning it 26-yds.

GOLDMINE

- Brock's path to the NFL was not an easy one by any means. From the small country town of Gulfport, MS, he traveled 30 miles north to Mississippi Gulf Coast Community College in Perkinston, MS, where he spent two seasons before transferring to the University of Minnesota. Why would a southern boy decide on Minnesota? "I wanted to see what a big city felt like," Brock said. After one year, he transferred back down south to Belhaven University in Jackson, MS, a small Christian NAIA school.
- In February of 2011, Belhaven retired Brock's jersey for his accomplishments on both the collegiate and professional levels. He is the only player in the history of the school's program to have played in the NFL.

- Brock's passion for sports was developed at an early age and he would like to remain in athletics either as a coach or personal trainer after his playing career is through. "I want to teach people what I know and watch them perform and compete," Brock said. His father encouraged him to join a football league in elementary school, and he also played basketball and ran track for his school's team. Recreationally, he played kick ball and baseball in his neighborhood. "My friends were all competitive with each other," he said. "We all wanted to be the best in the group."

BROCK'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Is the first player in Belhaven University's history to play in the NFL. The University also retired his jersey in 2011.
- Had a variety of part-time jobs growing up in Gulfport, MS. He worked at Sparkle Car Cleaning, a Krispy Kreme shop and a Sonic fast food restaurant.
- In 2013, finished t-5th in the NFL with 5 INTs.

- 2013: AP Second-Team All-Pro, Pro Bowl, PFWA All-NFC Team

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Registered a career-high 8.5 sacks in 2013.
- Set the 49ers record for most FFs by a LB in a single-season with 5 in 2009. The 5 FFs ranked t-2nd among all NFL LBs that year.
- Ranks t-2nd in team postseason history with 6.5 sacks.

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Brought down Packers QB Aaron Rodgers for his first sack of the season vs. GB (10/4/15). He now has 42.0 sacks for his career.

GOLDMINE

- Hosted his first youth football camp in June of 2014. His USA Football FUNdamentals clinic for area youth ages 6-17 in Woodbridge, VA introduced football by teaching basic skills in a fun and energetic environment. FB Bruce Miller and other 49ers teammates joined Brooks in Virginia for the event.
- Brooks is no stranger to the NFL. His father, Perry Brooks, played in 92 games at DT for the Washington Redskins from 1978-84. Perry ran a barber shop since Ahmad was a freshman in college, which was left to his family after he passed away.
- In 2013, Brooks returned to Woodbridge, VA, where he attended high school at C.D. Hylton High School, and was inducted into their Hall of Fame.
- Brooks was originally a 3rd-round selection in the 2006 supplemental draft by the Cincinnati Bengals. In 2008, the 49ers claimed the linebacker off of waivers, where he worked his way into a full-time starting role by 2011.

BROOKS' GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Ranks t-2nd in 49ers postseason history with 6.5 sacks.
- Has recorded 5.0-or-more sacks in six consecutive seasons. His 40.0 sacks as a member of the 49ers ranks 2nd in franchise history among linebackers.
- His father, Perry, played 92 games with the Washington Redskins from 1978-84.
- Originally entered the NFL as a supplemental draft pick in 2006 by Cincinnati.
- In 2004, while at the University of Virginia, was one of three finalists for the Butkus Award, given annually to the nation's top linebacker.
- Hosted his first youth football camp in June of 2014. His USA Football FUNdamentals clinic for area youth ages 6-17 in Woodbridge, VA introduced football by teaching basic skills in a fun and energetic environment.

GOLDMINE

- Prior to the 2012 season, Bush twice served as guest co-host with Kelly Ripa on her national morning TV show, "LIVE! With Kelly." Bush made his first appearance on the show in January as the guests included movie star Mark Wahlberg. He returned to the show on May 18, where he interviewed fellow USC alumnus and "Blue Bloods" star, Tom Selleck.

- During his time in Detroit, Bush teamed up with Carhartt, a clothing brand that is the designer of workwear, lifestyle, men's women's, kids', footwear and personal protective clothing, in an effort to give appreciation to local police and firefighters. He attended an appreciation barbeque that included the cooking of 500 steaks simultaneously, which set a world record. Said Bush, "We are honoring the men and women, the true heroes of our community; police officers and firefighters. These people, every time they step out of the house they're putting their life on the line to make our community a safer place. My mom was actually a police officer, so this one is near and dear to my heart for me and we really appreciate the work that they do for us and making the community a safer place."

- As a member of the Dolphins in 2010, Bush visited South Africa to cheer on the U.S. national soccer team in the World Cup. In the "Futbol Meets Football" campaign, Reggie and soccer star David Beckham matched skills in a great series of ads that featured Reggie taking penalty kicks and Beckham in a helmet and shoulder pads. Bush said, "That was cool. He was with Real Madrid at the time, before he came to L.A. It was cool, getting the chance to meet him and talk to him. I was kind of sizing him up a little bit."
- Following his selection by the Saints in the 2006 NFL Draft, Bush became heavily involved in the community. He donated $86,000 to resurface the field at Tad Gormley Stadium so high school athletics could be played again at the stadium. He also donated 12 vehicles to New Orleans, state and government agencies, served as a regional spokesman for the Make-A-Wish Foundation.
- Bush partnered with Ralphs and Tide to put on the "Unplug and Play Reggie Bush ProCamp" in La Mesa, CA during July of 2015. He highlighted the finer points of football as campers experienced various stations specializing in fundamental football skills and participated in touch football games.

BORN 2.18.90 // CINCINNATI, OH // TAFT HS, CINCINNATI, OH 3RD YEAR // ACQUIRED D-2A IN '13

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Registered 1.0 sack vs. Min. (9/14), giving him 5.0 career sacks.
- Recorded the first FF of his career, knocking the ball loose from QB Carson Palmer at Arz. (9/27)

GOLDMINE

- Carradine grew up in a rough neighborhood in Cincinnati, where many of the people he knew got into bad situations with drugs and violence. He grew up without much money and his family struggled to put food on the table. Through it all, he learned to walk the other way. "I saw how certain situations can end up. Talking to the older people and coaches, they told me to do the right thing," he said. "Good things happen when you try to do the right things. That was the biggest thing I learned." Football was the biggest opportunity which propelled Carradine out of the area, receiving a college scholarship and earning a degree in sociology from Florida State. "People kept telling me, 'Man, I wish I had that opportunity to play this sport.' I'd seen my opportunity and knew the chances I had, knew what I would be doing if I didn't accomplish these goals. That's why I thrive on football. I give it all I've got and I try to play every play like it's my last. I respect this game because of what this game has gotten me through. I take advantage of it by doing the right thing, being a positive player and being good to my teammates and for the organization."
- After going through a rough childhood, Carradine has a passion for telling his story to kids. He volunteers his time at charity foundations and football camps. "If kids can hear the importance of doing the right thing, if I can help them succeed in life, if they can get it when they're young, they'll live up to those things instead of trying to get knowledge as they got older," he said. "Then it might be too late, because they've already been on their own in certain situations."

CARRADINE'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Given the nickname "Tank" as a young child from his mom because he always carried a toy tank with him.
- Recorded the first two sacks of his NFL career last season at Sea. (12/14), bringing down Seahawks QB Russell Wilson.
- Visited Haiti in conjunction with Convoy of Hope, working together to teach healthy eating habits and sustainable agriculture techniques to local families.
- Loves unique animals and once owned a large collection of exotic pets, including snakes, lizards, ferrets, a monkey, a bird, piranhas and a shark.
- In 2010, earned First-Team NJCAA All-America, All-Kansas Jayhawk Community College Conference and All-Region VI honors and was named Region VI Defensive Player of the Year.
- Began collegiate career at Butler Community College (KS) before enrolling at Florida State.

GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- Along with 49ers TEs Vance McDonald and Garrett Celek, visited Haiti in conjunction with Convoy of Hope, working together to teach healthy eating habits and sustainable agriculture techniques to local families. The players also visited an orphanage and local schools to spend time with underprivileged youth. "Being able to be around the kids and see the excitement on their face. I see what kind of stuff they go through and I see how they live. I realize they can use a lot of help and I've been more than fortunate to be able to help them."

- Born Cornellius Carradine, he was given the nickname "Tank" from his mom. He always used to have a little toy army tank with him. "I could never go anywhere without that army tank," he said. "I just had to have it with me, and I used to always push people over, try to run over people." His mom still has the original toy tank.
- Just prior to entering high school, Carradine, a Cincinnati native, frequented Bengals games every chance he could. "At the time, I was playing Pee-Wee football and I was also a big fan of Justin Smith. I remember many of the players, including Justin, came and painted our youth center, so I got a chance to meet him." Carradine continued, "He was my favorite player, first-round draft pick. It's crazy that I played with him. I always wanted to talk football with him and ask him questions, I'm always asked him about how to identify run or pass, tips that the offensive line give away, things like that." Carradine also believes he helped him learn a great deal about how to make the transition from a speed-rushing defensive end to a power-rushing defensive tackle, a change that Justin Smith had to make earlier in his career as well.
- Carradine loves animals and once owned a large collection of exotic pets, including snakes, lizards, ferrets, a monkey, a bird, piranhas and a shark. "I could see myself doing animal research working in a zoo," he said.

- In the 2015 season opener vs. Min. (9/14), set a career high with 3 receipts. for 40 yds.

GOLDMINE

- Celek has a strong passion for the packaging industry, which he majored in at Michigan State and plans to go into the business after his football career is more complete. The growing industry looks to cut shipping costs on products and is commonplace in the food and medical fields. "There's so many different areas you can get into, it's crazy. I enjoy the science behind it. It was a great major for me to choose and the possibilities are endless."
- Football runs in the bloodlines of the Celek family. Garrett's older brother, Brent, plays tight end for the Philadelphia Eagles. Growing up, the brothers were constantly involved in athletics. "My dad was always pushing us just to be into sports. As long as we were doing something and we were having fun with it, he was the happiest guy in the world," Garrett said. He didn't begin playing football until high school, but Brent's success became a driving motivation for him. "He got a scholarship to Cincinnati my freshman year in high school," Garrett said. "Right then I had my goals set. I've got to do what my brother did. Honestly, I've been trying to follow in his footsteps and because of him I'm here today. I wouldn't be who I am without him."
- Along with fellow 49ers TE Vance McDonald and DT Tank Caradine, visited Haiti in conjunction with Convoy of Hope, working together to teach healthy eating habits and sustainable agriculture techniques to local families. "We've been to an orphanage, we've been to a farm, we've been to schools. It's a beautiful country and these are beautiful people. I'm glad I had this opportunity."

HT	WT	COLLEGE	RB
5-9	217	SOUTH CAROLINA
BORN 2.19.93 // ATLANTA, GA // STEPHENSON HS, STONE MOUNTAIN, GA ROOKIE // ACQUIRED D-4B IN '15

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his NFL debut at Pit. (9/20).

GOLDMINE

- He is the latest member of the University of South Carolina football team to be drafted by the 49ers organization. Davis has developed a strong relationship with former 49ers draft pick and Gamecock RB Marcus Lattimore, who provided him with some words of wisdom about the 49ers. "He told me it's a great place to stay with great people."
- Davis entered the draft early in order to help his family. Early in the draft process, Davis' mother received an eviction notice on her door. "I always wanted to help my mom out. I knew with no one else being able to help her I had to step up," said Davis after being drafted.

DAVIS' GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Finished his college career ranked in the top 10 in South Carolina history in rushing yards (2,440), rushing touchdowns (22), yards per carry (5.4) and total touchdowns (24).
- Reunites with college roommate WR Bruce Ellington on the 49ers.
- His brother, James, played RB at Clemson and was drafted by the Cleveland Browns in the sixth round (195th overall) of the 2009 NFL Draft.

DAVIS' GOLDEN NUGGETS

- The two-time Pro-Bowl selection is the 49ers franchise leader in receptions, yards and TDs by a tight end.
- Is the only TE in NFL history to record multiple seasons with 13-or-more TD receptions.
- An entrepreneur, entered the art gallery business and owns a Jamba Juice located in Santa Clara.
- Joined forces with Capes4Heroes in December of 2014 in a visit to El Camino Hospital in Mountain View. Davis interacted with the children at the hospital and laughed with them while running through the hall with super hero capes on.
- Named the recipient of the Len Eshmont Award in 2009, the 49ers most prestigious annual honor. The Len Eshmont Award honors the player who best exemplifies the "inspirational and courageous play" of Len Eshmont and is voted on by the players.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Ranks 1st in franchise history among TEs in TDs (55), receipts. (431) and rec. yds. (5,555). His 55 rec. TDs are the 4th most in 49ers history, while his 431 receipts. are 5th and 5,555 rec. yds. are 7th most in 49ers history.
- Has nine 100-yd. rec. games, which ranks 1st in franchise history among TEs (TE Monty Stickles ranks 2nd with six).
- Since 2009, Davis ranks 4th in the NFL in rec. TDs (46) among all active TEs, and ranks t-9th among all positions.
- Has tallied 600 career postseason rec. yds., ranking 6th most in NFL postseason history among TEs.
- Compiled 11 career 25-or-more yd. receipts. in 8 career postseason games, which ranks 2nd in 49ers postseason history, trailing WR Jerry Rice (14 receipts. in 23 games).
- Set single-season career highs with 78 receipts., 965 rec. yds. and 13 TD receipts. in 2009. He was one of only two TEs to lead their team in all three categories (Kellen Winslow, TB). His rec. yds. and TD totals were both single-season records among 49ers TEs all-time.
- He is the only tight end in NFL history to record multiple seasons with 13-or-more TD receipts.

Antonio Gates, 2004	13

- In 2009, his 13 TD receipts. tied the then-NFL record for most in a season by a TE (Antonio Gates - 13 TDs in 2004). Davis' TD receipts. tied for the most in the NFL with former Patriots WR Randy Moss and Cardinals WR Larry Fitzgerald, making him the third TE (TE Rob Gronkowski - 17; Jimmy Graham - 16) in the Super Bowl era to lead the league (or tie for the lead) in TD receipts.
- Registered his 4th career 100-yd. game in the postseason vs. Bal. (2/3/13) (SB-XLVII). With his performance, he tied TE Keith Jackson for the most 100-yd. rec. games by a tight end in NFL postseason history.
- Recorded 8 receipts. for a career-high 180 yds. and 2 TDs vs. Arz. (10/13/13). It marked his 6th career multi-TD game, and 2nd of the season. Davis is the only TE in NFL history to tally 180 yds. rec. in both a regular season and postseason game [180 vs. NO (1/14/12 - NFC-D)]. He became the first TE in franchise history to record a TD receipt. of 60-or-more yds. in consecutive weeks with his 61-yd. TD receipt. vs. Arz. (10/13) [64-yd. TD receipt. vs. Hou. (10/6)], and the first in the NFL since 1969. Davis registered 7 receipts. for 171 yds. and 2 TDs in the first half, marking the 3rd time in his career he had 100-or-more yds. in a half.
- Pulled in 5 receipts. for 79 yds. and 1 TD at TB (12/15/13), notching his 12th TD receipt. of the season. Davis became the 1st TE in NFL history to register at least 12 TD receipts. in two different seasons (13 in 2009).
- Tied his single-season career-high with 13 TD receipts. in 2013.

GOLDMINE

- During the holiday season in 2014, Davis teamed up with Capes4Heroes to visit children at El Camino Hospital in Mountain View. Capes4Heroes is a non-profit organization that designs capes for children with life threatening illnesses. The capes symbolize strength and courage and empower them to continue fighting. "Any time you give back, you're putting smiles on individual's faces. It's all about helping and lending your services to make things better."

- Davis opened his own Jamba Juice location in Santa Clara, CA, on March 1, 2013. "Not only are you helping people with a job opportunity, you are helping them to stay healthy and live an active and healthy lifestyle," Davis said about his business.
- On December 10, 2012, Davis celebrated the grand opening of his new art gallery, Gallery 85, which is located in San Jose's upscale Santana Row and features pieces by Davis himself. Vernon has always had an affinity for art and is an avid admirer of Michelangelo and the Renaissance period. In 2010 and 2011, he got the opportunity to give back to his passion for art. Director of Cultural Affairs for the San Francisco Arts Commission Luis R. Cancel, in conjunction with the Young at Art Festival, a project of the San Francisco Unified School District and the Fine Arts Museum of San Francisco, announced the launch of "Art Impact." Vernon was the inaugural speaker for Art Impact, and the San Francisco Unified School District created a scholarship in Davis' name, called the Vernon Davis Visual Arts Scholarship, which will provide tuition support to a San Francisco youth interested in pursuing a career in the visual arts. In May of 2011, he handed out his first scholarship to San Francisco high school student, Sheryl Quock, a promising fashion designer.
- After a breakout season in 2009, Davis was named the recipient of the Len Eshmont Award, the 49ers most prestigious annual honor. The Len Eshmont Award honors the player who best exemplifies the "inspirational and courageous play" of Len Eshmont and is voted on by the players.

- During the 2010 offseason, Davis traveled to Afghanistan with five fellow NFL players as part of the NFL-USO tour. They first stopped at Al Udeid Air Force Base, 40 miles outside of Doha, Qatar, then traveled on to Bagram Air Force Base in Afghanistan. The trip gave him perspective and knowledge of the efforts being put forth by our military in the Middle East.
- Davis is not one to sit back and relax during the offseason. In March of 2010, he joined his younger brother, Vontae, and six other NFL players on a humanitarian trip to Uganda and Rwanda. The crew spent 10 days distributing 22,000 hearing aids throughout the African regions as part of the Pros for Africa organization. "It was amazing. It was breathtaking because you look at these kids who can't hear anything and you plug these hearing aids in their ears and all of a sudden they're responding. You can't do anything but be thankful to be able to help them hear and respond. It brought a lot of emotion. I'm already an emotional guy."
- During the 2010 offseason, Davis and his brother, Vontae, hosted a football and mentoring clinic at Howard University in their native Washington, D.C. "It means a lot to me, because I know how important it is to go out and give back and share some of the lessons and just the gifts that you always wanted as a kid," Davis said. "Growing up in a low-income, poverty area in the inner city of Washington, D.C., I know what it's like. When I think of the kids, it touches me in ways you can't even imagine."
- Davis was named an honorary captain of the USA Curling Team at the 2010 Winter Olympics in Vancouver, BC, Canada. He attended the games and served as an ambassador for the team in order to help gain support for the sport.

- When he was a freshman in college, he wanted to honor the person who raised him to be the person he is today, his grandmother, Adaline. He decided to get a tattoo on the inside of his left arm with her name. His grandmother's reaction wasn't a good one at first, but she understood why he did it because in Davis' words, he could look onto the inside of his left arm just to think of her. "She's really influenced me and really pushed me, made me open my eyes and see that besides football, there are other things that I can get involved with if I don't make it." Adaline was the one who raised most of his siblings and gave Vernon direction in his life, teaching him to set goals and molding him into the person he is today.

DAWSON'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Holds the highest all-time FG percentage among kickers with 300-or-more FG made in NFL history (84.1%).
- In 2013, set the 49ers franchise record with 27 consecutive FG made.
- Is a perfect 9-for-9 on FGs made and 9-for-9 on XPA in his playoff career.
- Was part of an infamous field goal attempt against the Baltimore Ravens in 2012 that eventually led to a rule dubbed the "Phil Dawson Rule." Dawson kicked a 51-yard field goal on the final play of regulation that bounced off the left upright and caromed off the rear "gooseneck" attachment behind the crossbar. The attempt was originally ruled no good, but the officials reversed the call following a discussion even though the play was not technically reviewable. The next year, a rule change was made to allow certain field goals to be reviewed by instant replay.
- His wife, Shannon, is a professional singer, who performed as a backup singer for Wayne Newton in Las Vegas. She released her country/contemporary Christian mix album titled Redemption on September 11, 2013.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- One of 19 players in NFL history to surpass 1,500 points scored (1,511).
- Has the highest all-time FG percentage, among kickers with 300-or-more FGs made, in NFL history at 84.1%.
- Set the 49ers franchise record with 27 consecutive made FGs in 2013 (10/6/13 - 12/29/13), passing K Joe Nedney's previous mark of 18 in a row (11/26/06 - 9/30/07).
- Ranks as the Browns franchise leader in FG percentage with a mark of 84% (305-363).
- Is 1st on the Browns all-time made FGs list with 305 kicks made.
- Ranks 2nd in Browns franchise history with 1,265 career points (Lou Groza - 1,349).
- Dawson's total of 33 FGs from 50-or-more yds. ranks 6th in NFL history, while his percentage from the 50-plus yd. range of 68.8% (33 of 48) ranks 4th.
- Holds the Browns franchise single-season record with 30 FGs made in 2008.
- Is the only player in Browns franchise history to account for six 100-point seasons.
- In 2008, he became the first player in Browns franchise history to convert a 50+ yd. FG in three consecutive games.
- In 2004, he established a Browns franchise record with 27 consecutive FGs made [vs. SD (10/19/03) - vs. NYJ (11/21/04)], only to one-up his own record in 2012 with 29 consecutive FGs made [vs. Bal. (12/4/11) - at Oak. (12/2/12)].
- Finished the 2013 regular season with the 2nd most made FGs (32) and pts. scored (140) in 49ers franchise history.
- According to the Elias Sports Bureau, Dawson, who also holds the Cleveland Browns franchise record for most consecutive made FGs (27), joined K Olindo Mare (Mia. and Sea.) and Neil Rackers (Arz. and Hou.) as the only kickers who currently hold the record for most consecutive made FGs for two different franchises.

GOLDMINE

- During the 2008 and 2011 seasons, Dawson teamed up with the Adoption Network to invite families who have recently adopted children to each Browns home game so they can form new memories as a family. "The reason behind all this is my wife was adopted so we have a pretty special place in our hearts for families trying to adopt," Dawson said.
- Was active in the Cleveland community and founded the "Dawson's 4 Adoption" season ticket program which provided tickets, apparel and food for the Adoption Network Cleveland organization.
- Dawson's two main hobbies now are actually his first two part-time jobs growing up. His first official job in middle school was driving the tractor that picks up the golf balls at the driving range. "For every tray of balls I would bring in and pour in the washer, I'd get $3," said Dawson. "The busier the driving range, the more money I made." His other job was mowing lawns. He and a friend would mow about 30 lawns every week during the summers. "I love golf and I love yard work," he said.

6-6	320	MEMPHIS	OL
BORN 1.11.89 // AMERICAN FORK, UT // AMERICAN FORK HS, AMERICAN FORK, UT 3RD YEAR // ACQUIRED TR IN '15 - NE

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Part of an offensive line group that helped the team rush for 230 total yds. vs. Min (9/14), the most in franchise history during a season opening game. The O-Line helped pave the way for RB Carlos Hyde as he rushed for a NFL Week 1-high of 168 yds. and 2 TDs.

GOLDMINE

- Did not play football in high school after being diagnosed with Osgood-Schlatter disease, an inflammation of the patellar ligament in the knee, in junior high. Instead, he joined the nationally acclaimed marching band at American Fork HS as a tuba player.
- Turned down several music scholarships after performing as a tuba player in the high school band in order to serve a two-year church mission in Costa Rica for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (LDS). In 2009, after his mission trip, he discovered the disease had subsided and walked on to the football team at Snow Junior College in Ephraim, UT.
- Prior to his mission work, he took a job working security on the graveyard shift for a computer company. For twelve hours a day and five days a week, he checked diesel rigs bringing in shipments.

2014 (NEW ENGLAND)

- Saw action in seven games with the Patriots, including four starts.
- Made his NFL debut and first start at right guard in the season opener for New England at Mia. (9/7).
- Made his first career start at left guard vs. NYJ (10/16).

DEVEY'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Did not play football in high school due to being diagnosed with Osgood-Schlatter Disease in junior high.
- Turned down music scholarships as a tuba player in order to serve a two-year church mission in Costa Rica.

2013 (BALTIMORE/NEW ENGLAND)

- Signed with the Baltimore Ravens as an undrafted free agent on 5/3.
- Added to the Baltimore Ravens practice squad on 9/1 and was waived on 9/2.
- Signed to the New England Patriots practice squad on 9/3 where he spent the remainder of the season.

COLLEGE

PERSONAL

- Attended American Fork (UT) High School where he did not play football after suffering from Osgood-Schlatter Disease in junior high.
- Married to Linsey Hodgkiss, a former Snow basketball player.
- Born Jordan Devey (1/11/89) in American Fork, UT.

DEVEY'S CAREER STATISTICS

GAMES/STARTS – 11/8; 2014 (7/4); 2015 (4/4).

Milestones:

NFL Debut: at Mia. (9/7/14); First Start: at Mia. (9/7/14);

GOLDMINE

- In 2014, Dial started his own foundation called "QD Kids." The mission is "to show love and support to underprivileged kids today so they will have the best opportunity to be our leaders of tomorrow." Dial held a fundraiser at a bowling alley that also featured the raffling of autographed jerseys and held a holiday toy drive in December of 2014 to benefit his foundation.

- Dial connected with Alex Fernandez, a 20-year-old 49ers fan who lost his battle with brain cancer in July of 2015. One of the things that Fernandez wanted to do before he passed was to see a 49ers game at Levi's® Stadium. Through "QD Kids," Dial sent Fernandez a package consisting of 49ers items: A team blanket, jerseys from QB Colin Kaepernick and LB Patrick Willis, an autographed football, hats and a poster. Dial included a signed jersey of his own and also included a video message for Fernandez. After he passed, Dial said on Twitter, "I want Alex Fernandez to know that he has made a difference in my life by sharing his story," Dial wrote. "He is my hero, and people like him encourage me to continue our work through our non-profit QD Kids. I lead this non-profit in order to make 'moments' count for all children and adults who are combating challenges in their life. My first game is going to be dedicated to him for being a brave hero and for making a difference in the lives of others."
- In 2015, Dial was very active during the offseason. He spent time at the Bill Wilson Center with underprivileged youth, participated in a Special Olympics basketball game and helped a terminal cancer patient check 'attending a 49ers game' off his bucket list by visiting him in the hospital and supplying him with a bunch of 49ers gear.
- As an event for "QD Kids," Dial helped organize a fundraiser called "Bowling 4 Backpacks" in July of 2015. All of the proceeds from the event went directly to buying school supplies and backpacks for kids in need.
- Dial's church family has played a major role in his life and has positively impacted him, making him the man he is today. "They have supported me a lot throughout the years," said Dial. "They encouraged me and prayed with me. I would say my church family is my biggest supporter that I have right now and has helped me to get where I am today."

DIAL'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Earned his first career NFL start at NYG (11/16) and first career sack at NO (11/9) during the 2014 season.
- Dial's mother passed away when he was 10. His father fell on difficult times, ultimately unable to support him any longer and he was brought in by the families of his church.

AWARDS & HONORS

2013: 49ers Blue Collar Player of the Year - Defense

GOLDMINE

- In 2011, Dorsey teamed up with PETA, urging dog owners across the country to protect their pets during harsh weather conditions by bringing them indoors. "I love my dog. I don't have any kids, so he's like my best friend. PETA came to my house and did a photo shoot with myself, and my three-year-old English Bulldog, Bugsy. It was cool. It was a good deal working with PETA. It was for a good cause and it was fun."

- Had the nickname 'Putt' as an infant because he would only get up and walk when a Putt-Putt commercial would come on TV.
- Growing up, Dorsey's grandmother, Pearl Nabor, introduced him to the San Francisco 49ers, foreshadowing his future with the team, "I used to watch the 49ers all the time when they had WR Jerry Rice and all of those great players. I used to watch them with my grandma. That was her favorite team. When I came here, it was like, 'Wow, I used to watch these guys all the time.' This was my favorite team and now I get to play for them. My grandmother passed away a few years ago, but she was the person that turned me on to the 49ers."

DORSEY'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Registered a career-high 100 tackles during his first season as a member of the 49ers in 2013.
- Started the Glenn Dorsey Foundation which is "Founded on the principle that everyone, regardless of age, socioeconomic background and life circumstance should dream bigger."
- Had to wear metal braces on his legs as a 3-year old due to having severely bowed legs.

HT	WT	COLLEGE	WR
5-9	197	SOUTH CAROLINA
BORN 8.22.91 // MONCKS CORNER, SC // BERKELEY HS, MONCKS CORNER, SC 2ND YEAR // ACQUIRED D-4A IN '14

GOLDMINE

- Ellington grew up in Moncks Corner, SC, attended an in-state Division I program, the University of South Carolina, and was drafted by a team in the NFC West, the San Francisco 49ers. His cousin, Andre Ellington, experienced a very similar career path. He grew up in Moncks Corner, SC, attended an in-state Division I school, Clemson, and was drafted by an NFC West team, the Arizona Cardinals.
- He cites his religion as a major contributor to where he is today. "Just taking in every day, praying, asking Him to help me to do things and just going through it and just believing in Him," said Ellington
- Growing up in a very rural area, Ellington believes he is a product of his environment, "I grew up down a dirt road. Nothing but woods around me. A lot of dogs around and that kind of helped me get faster from them chasing after me. Me and my cousin stayed in the backyard or the front yard and played one-on-one football or one-on-one basketball."
- Ellington knows the value of hard work. When he was younger, he would spend his free time cutting lawns during the hot South Carolina summers.
- Participated in the 2nd Annual Tory Dandy Foundation Scholarship Fun Day in Woodruff, SC. Along with 49ers teammate RB Mike Davis and other NFL Players, the athletes signed autographs and raised money to support The Heart Foundation and the ALS Foundation.

ELLINGTON'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Is the cousin of Arizona Cardinals RB Andre Ellington. In July of 2015, the two hosted their 2nd Annual "Ellington Elite Football Camp," a free camp held in Moncks Corner, SC.
- Graduated from the University of South Carolina in 3 ½ years with a degree in sociology.
- Also played basketball at South Carolina, playing in 80 games (66 starts) and averaging 11.2 points, 3.0 assists and 2.7 rebounds in his career.

HT	WT	COLLEGE	LB
6-3	247	VIRGINIA
BORN 1.20.94 // VIRGINIA BEACH, VA // OCEAN LAKES HS, VIRGINIA BEACH, VA ROOKIE // ACQUIRED D-3 IN '15

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his NFL debut vs. Min. (9/14).

GOLDMINE

- Harold was "Mr. Everything" for his high school team, playing quarterback, running back, wide receiver and defensive end at Ocean Lakes HS. Racking up 1,146 yards and 20 touchdowns in a wildcat offense, he was named first-team All-Tidewater, the Beach District Defensive Player of the Year and a first-team all-district selection at wide receiver and defensive end.
- Late 2010 and early 2011 was an incredibly trying time for the Harold family. In a three-month span, Eli's brother Walter unexpectedly lost his son, Forrest, and Eli's mother, Sheila Korvette, passed away from cancer. In the wake of the family's tragedy, Eli moved in with Walter, the closest thing he had to a father figure. After becoming a highly-touted prospect and recording his first sack at the University of Virginia, Eli dedicated the milestone to his older brother.

HAROLD'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Persevered through the unspeakable tragedy of losing his mother, Sheila Korvette, to become a highly sought-after prospect.
- Finished his college career ranking 11th in Virginia school history with 17.5 total sacks.
- First-team all-district selection at Ocean Lakes (Virginia Beach, VA) HS at both wide receiver and defensive end.

6-2	220	NO COLLEGE
BORN 2.15.88 // MINTO, NEW SOUTH WALES, AUSTRALIA // WESTFIELDS SPORTS HS, SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA 1ST YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '15

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his NFL debut vs. Min. (9/14) and recorded 4 carries for 13 yds.

GOLDMINE

- In 2010, he finished third in the Gatorade Bolt, a 100-meter race between the National Rugby League's fastest players. Afterwards, he received an invitation from Olympic gold medalist and world class sprinter Usain Bolt to train with him in Jamaica.
- Additionally, he used his winnings to create a unique scholarship with the goal of putting an Australian sprinter into the 100m final of the 2016 Olympics in Rio de Janero, Brazil. The scholarship put eight sprinters into a year long training program, in a similar style to the UFC's Ultimate Fighter TV show, with one sprinter earning funding towards their dream of competing in the Olympics.
- Grew up in a housing commission in Minto, New South Wales, Australia with his two sisters and single mother, Jodie. After becoming a NRL star, he bought his mother a house. "My whole dream of being a professional athlete was to buy my mum a house and I did that. Everything else is a bonus," said Hayne during his press conference announcing his decision to head to the NFL.

HAYNE'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Spent the past nine years with the Parramatta Eels of the National Rugby League, where he won numerous accolades, including two Player of the Year awards (2009, 2014).
- Created a unique scholarship to help eight Australian sprinters train with the goal of reaching the 100-meter finals of the 2016 Olympics.
- Once he became a star in the NRL, stayed true to his childhood promise and bought his mother a house.

AWARDS & HONORS

2015: FedEx Ground Player of the Week (Week 1)

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- In his first career start, rushed for an NFL-high 168 yds. and 2 TDs on 26 carries (6.9 avg.) vs. Min. (9/14). According to the Elias Sports Bureau, Hyde's 168 rushing yds. are the most by a 49ers running back in their first start with the team, since 1970.
- Hyde's 168 rushing yds. were the most in the NFL in Week 1.
- Hyde became the first 49ers RB with 100-or-more rushing yds. and two-or-more rushing TDs in a Week 1 game since RB Garrison Hearst [20 carries for 187 yds. and 2 TDs vs. NYJ (9/6/98)].

GOLDMINE

- Hyde and the other members of the 49ers 2014 rookie draft class visited Oak Grove High School to launch the "49ers Mentorship Program." The program focuses on character development through mentorship and accountability. Hyde and his teammates spent the afternoon with the boy's varsity football team and taught them about the mentor/mentee relationship and the pros and cons of posting on social media.

- Hyde has always been a competitive person and that's helped him get to where he is today. "I think that my competitiveness came from having best friends that played the same sports. So, it's like you want to be the best at those sports because everybody recognizes the best."

HYDE'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Played on the 2007 Naples state champion football team (Naples, FL). He also played basketball, ran track and mentored elementary school children.
- Hyde credits three people in particular for helping him achieve success. "I credit my mom, my grandmother and Bill Kramer, my high school coach. He is basically the one that got me on the right path. Coming from Cincinnati, I wasn't on the right track grade-wise. So, he got me on the right track and got me caught up with my grades." In addition to helping him with everything off the field, he is directly responsible for how Hyde lines up on the gridiron. "I was actually trying to play defense in high school and he let me play running back. He's just always been there for me."

- After spending his first year of high school in Cincinnati, he moved to Naples, FL, to live with his grandparents. "It was definitely for the better. I was headed down the wrong route in Cincinnati. Moving to Naples got me on the right route and back into sports and I was fortunate enough to earn a scholarship." After scoring his first NFL touchdown against Dallas in Week 1 of the 2014 season, Hyde gave his grandmother the ball to commemorate the occasion.

6-2	200	NORTH CAROLINA STATE	CB
BORN 12.1.91 // PENNINGTON, NJ // PENNINGTON PREP HS, PENNINGTON, NJ 2ND YEAR // ACQUIRED D-4B IN '14

GOLDMINE

- Johnson, a sports management and business administration major, spent the summer prior to his senior year as a sports marketing intern with French West Vaughan, a marketing/public relations firm based out of Raleigh, NC. During his internship, he worked with some high-profile athletes and clients which provided great experience. "I actually got to do a few things with MoGo, the flavored mouthpiece that [49ers QB] Colin [Kaepernick] wears. I did that and then I did a few things for [Cincinnati Bengals DT] Geno Atkins, getting him some suits for the ESPY's." Johnson believes if he weren't a professional football player, that he had found his calling in sports marketing. He said, "That was definitely something I would do. Just the interaction with players and businesses, I felt like that was cool."
- Hauling in 50 passes for 600 yards and 13 touchdowns is an impressive stat-line for a two-way player, which is exactly what Johnson was in high school. He split time as a receiver and defensive back during his time at Pennington Prep (NJ) High School. What made Johnson focus his attention on the defensive side of the ball moving forward? He credited a defensive mentality. Johnson said, "I was more of a physical player. Just the fact that I liked playing defense better. Playing basketball, I had a defensive mindset. So, I guess it just translated to football. I always had a defensive mindset."

JOHNSON'S GOLDEN NUGGET

- When he got the call that he was being drafted by the 49ers, San Francisco's 2014 first-round draft pick DB Jimmie Ward was one of the first phone calls that he received to congratulate him and tell him how excited he was that the two were going to be teammates. Ward and Johnson were roommates at the 2014 Senior Bowl.

2013: USA Today All-Joe Team

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Completed 17-of-26 passes for 165 yds. in the win vs. Min. (9/14) to become the first quarterback in 49ers franchise history to begin his career 3-0 in season openers. Additionally, Kaepernick moved to 5-0 in his career on Monday Night Football, become just the fourth QB in NFL history to begin his career with 5 straight wins on MNF.
- Registered his 4th career 300-yd. passing game, completing a career-high 33 of 46 atts. for 335 yds., 2 TDs and a QB rating of 106.7 at Pit. (9/20). His 33 completions were the most by the 49ers since QB Tim Rattay completed 38 of 57 atts. vs Arz (10/10/04), and the first 30-or-more completion game since QB Shaun Hill connected on 30 of 46 atts. at Mia. (12/14/08).

KAEPERNICK'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- In 2015, Kaepernick and fellow 49ers participated in the 3rd Annual "Against All Odds" golf tournament which raised more than $500,000 to benefit Camp Taylor. "It's a reality check every time I'm around these kids," said Kaepernick. "You have kids that go through so many different things, struggles that I have no idea about. They run around with smiles on their faces and having a good time. It helps me realize how blessed I've been. I feel very blessed to be around these kids and be their friend and try to help them out."
- Set the NFL record for single-game rushing yards by a quarterback (regular and postseason) with 181 vs. GB on 1/12/13.
- Became just the fourth quarterback in NFL history to win each of his first three playoff starts on the road (2012).
- In 2014, set career highs in passing attempts (478), completions (289), passing long (80t) and rushing yards (639).

GOLDMINE

- In July of 2013, Kaepernick held the inaugural "Against All Odds" golf tournament at Del Rio Country Club in Modesto, CA, to benefit Camp Taylor, a camp for children with heart defects. The inaugural event raised over $200,000 to assist children and their families through Camp Taylor. In 2015, Kaepernick and fellow 49ers participated in the 3rd Annual tournament which raised funds in excess of $500,000. "It's a reality check every time I'm around these kids," said Kaepernick. "You have kids that go through so many different things, struggles that I have no idea about. They run around with smiles on their faces and having a good time. It helps me realize how blessed I've been. I feel very blessed to be around these kids and be their friend and try to help them out."

- Held the 2nd Annual Citi Colin Kaepernick Football ProCamp for boys and girls in grades 1-8 at St. Ignatius College Preparatory School in San Francisco. Throughout the camp, Kaepernick offered tips and instruction, highlighting the finer points of football. Campers were able to experience various stations specializing in fundamental football skills and participated in touch football games.
- In 2010, Kaepernick was drafted by the Chicago Cubs in the 2009 MLB Draft and was offered $30,000 to go to Arizona for a month and throw a few bullpen sessions. Looking ahead to his senior season as Nevada's quarterback, he declined the offer saying, "What would that say about me as a leader of the team?"

- Even as a 4th grade student at Dutcher Elementary School in Turlock, CA, Kaepernick knew he was going to play for the 49ers. In a letter that students had to write to their future selves, despite his small stature at the time, he saw something special in himself. He wrote, "I'm 5-2, 91 lbs and a good athlete. I think in 7 years i will be between 6 ft. to 6-4, 140 lbs. I hope I go to a good college in football, then go to the pros and play on the Niners or the Packers, even if they aren't good in seven years."

I'm 5ft 2 inches 91 pounds. Good athlete.
I think in 7 years I will be between

- Kaepernick, along with teammate Torrey Smith, attended Cleveland Browns CB Joe Haden's Second Annual Joe Haden & Friends Celebrity Softball Game in June of 2015. Part of the proceeds went to the support of Special Olympics while the athlete's jerseys were auctioned off after the game to support local youth sports from the Lake Health Foundation, who sponsored the event. Kaepernick also participated in the event's home run derby and took time to visit with a terminally ill 14-year-old along with the signing of numerous autographs.
- During the holiday season of 2013, Kaepernick paid a surprise visit to families at the San Francisco Ronald McDonald House. Through the giving spirit, he donated an Xbox One to the house for kids of the house to enjoy. "I think there's something special about kids that's uplifting. You see how pure-hearted kids are," said Kaepernick. Following the donation, Kaepernick spent time with the children, including friendly competition on the brand new console.
- One of Kaepernick's hobbies and favorite activities off the field is collecting and watching movies. "I own around 250 movies," said Kaepernick. His favorites are no surprise; action and comedy, specifically the movie Step Brothers. What might be a surprise to some people is that the 6-4, 250 lb QB also enjoys watching cartoons and Disney movies. "Some movies I own that most people wouldn't think I like are The Incredibles, Finding Nemo, Despicable Me and How To Train Your Dragon."

GOLDMINE

- While Kilgore was preparing for the NFL Draft in 2011, he was also serving as a student-teacher at Hardin Park Elementary School working with special-education students in adaptive physical education classes. The day following his graduation from Appalachian State, Daniel hosted a field trip for his special-education students at ASU. The field trip included a tour of the school's athletic facilities, activities in the Sofield Family Indoor Practice Facility, lunch on the club level of the Appalachian Athletics Center and taking in a few innings of the Appalachian State-Western Carolina baseball game. While football is Daniel's next chapter in life, he aspires to be a coach and special-education teacher following his NFL career. "I'm very happy that I was drafted, but I absolutely love working with these kids," said Daniel. "I have had a great student-teaching experience and I know when my NFL career is over, I will get to work in another field that I love and that is working with special-education students and coaching."

KILGORE'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Following his senior football season at Appalachian State, he stayed in the area to serve as a student-teacher at Hardin Park Elementary School (Boone, NC), working with special-education students in adaptive physical education classes.
- During his time at Appalachian State and with the 49ers, Kilgore spends his off days volunteering his time working with special-education students.

GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- Kilgore returned to his hometown of Kingsport, TN to support the 2015 Tribe Games, a series of athletic competitions for special needs kids from bowling to swimming to track and field. Kilgore's heart for special needs kids grew from volunteering in adapted physical education classes in the Watauga County (NC) School System while playing at Appalachian State. Kilgore wasn't just a casual observer at the games either, as he was a coach, motivator, fan and cheerleader for all 85 participating kids.

GOLDMINE

- Lemonier has traveled to Haiti multiple times, where both of his parents were born. Following hurricanes and earthquakes in Haiti, a few members of Lemonier's family on his father's side were hit hard, but they all remained safe. When the Lemoniers moved to Florida, many sports, including football, were new to them. Corey started out watching football and basketball on television. He played hoops through his sophomore year of high school before switching to football when he was a junior.

LEMONIER'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Pronounced lemon-YAY.
- Despite the fact that his parents knew little about football, his father, a former offshore welder, and his mother, a nurse, instilled the value of hard work in Lemonier through their example and have supported him throughout his career. When discussing with his parents about the possibility of playing football, his father's advice was consistent with his hard-work mentality. He said, "I told him, 'OK, that's your choice. You can do whatever you want as long as you give it all you have.'"

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Registered a sack of Vikings QB Teddy Bridgewater, the seventh of his career, on fourth down late in the 4th quarter to seal the victory vs. Min. (9/14).
- Recorded the first multi-sack game of his career vs. GB (10/4/15), taking down QB Aaron Rodgers twice for a total of 15-yds.

GOLDMINE

- Lynch draws his passion for the game from his mother, who had a much more difficult task than competing in football. "She was a single mom for 19, 20 years. I learned a lot of morals and values from my mother." As the oldest of three children, Lynch was forced to grow up quickly, "I was basically the dad of the family."

LYNCH'S GOLDEN NUGGET

- Notes his grandfather's passing as a reason to strive to be the best football player he can be. "It made me want to work harder, push myself harder." He wants to carry himself in a manner that his grandfather would be proud of.

MARCUS MARTIN

HT	WT	COLLEGE	C
6-3	321	SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA	C
BORN 11.29.93 // LOS ANGELES, CA // CRENSHAW HS, LOS ANGELES, CA 2ND YEAR // ACQUIRED D-3A IN '14

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Part of an offensive line group that helped the team rush for 230 total yds. vs. Min (9/14), the most in franchise history during a season opening game. The O-Line helped pave the way for RB Carlos Hyde as he rushed for a NFL Week 1-high of 168 yds. and 2 TDs.

GOLDMINE

- Martin grew up in a large family with two brothers and two sisters. Despite being the youngest of the five children, Martin is the first member of his family to go to college. He credits two of his family members in particular for making him the man he is today, "Having the guidance and the leadership that I had from my brother and my father, they kept me off the streets, they kept me from doing everything that was wrong and doing positive things."
- One particular charitable organization caught the attention of Martin back in college - "The Starkey Foundation is an organization that creates hearing aids for kids that are deaf. They go around the country and also out of the states. I had a great time." The Foundation uses hearing, "as a vehicle to reflect caring and sharing and improve the lives of individuals, families and communities around the world."

MARTIN'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Started all 8 games he appeared in during his rookie season in 2014.
- Served as a team captain and earned First-Team All-Pac-12 recognition in 2013 at USC.

GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- Martin has a passion for charity work and believes in giving back. Starting from his rookie season, he's already had big plans for community work in his hometown of Crenshaw, CA. "I plan on opening up my non-profit and I want to help as many people as I can, touch as many lives as I can," explained Martin. "Coming from where I come from, there's not a lot of hope. So, if I can do anything, I'll pass on some words of advice to the youngsters." He continued, "It's a non-profit that's going to facilitate tutoring and mentorship and kind of act as a safe haven for kids to come after school."

MARTIN'S CAREER STATISTICS

GAMES/STARTS – 12/12; 2014 (8/8); 2015 (4/4).

Milestones:

NFL Debut: vs. StL (11/3/14); First Start: vs. StL (11/3/14)

L.J. McCRAY

HT	WT	COLLEGE	S
6-0	210	CATAWBA	S
BORN 6.18.91 // CHARLOTTE, NC // HARDING UNIVERSITY HS, CHARLOTTE, NC 2ND YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '14

GOLDMINE

- McCray and 49ers head coach coach Jim Tomsula originally met at Catawba's senior game in 2012. The rookie safety still recalls the meeting between the two. "He kept telling me, 'Keep doing what you're doing. Keep working hard and keep shining and they'll notice you.' He gave me a lot of encouragement."
- McCray is the all-time leading kickoff returner in Catawba school history. He holds the school mark with 2,212 kickoff return yards and set the single-season record in 2012 with 1,022 yards. In one game, he amassed 304 kickoff return yards with two touchdowns.
- Even though his name is James by birth, McCray has chosen to go by L.J. during his time in the NFL. He also decided to have "McCray II" on the back of his uniform to honor his father. "I'm named after him, so to be able to put the '2nd' behind my name, it means a lot to my family."

McCRAY'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- One of two undrafted rookie free agents to make the 49ers roster in 2014. Registered 7 special teams tackles in 14 games played.
- Originally met 49ers head coach Jim Tomsula at Catawba's senior game in 2012. Tomsula both played and coached at Catawba.
- Became just the 12th player from Catawba College to play in the NFL.
- Earned First-Team All-South Atlantic Conference honors three times during his collegiate career at Catawba College.

GOLDMINE

- Along with fellow 49ers TEs Garrett Celek and DT Tank Carradine, McDonald visited Haiti in conjunction with Convoy of Hope, working together to teach healthy eating habits and sustainable agriculture techniques to local families. The players also visited an orphanage and local schools to spend time with underprivileged youth. "What I've seen here is just the impact everyone can have. We truly can come together and make a difference for people."
- Growing up, McDonald spent a lot of his time at the Drake Plantation in Winnie, a large open land full of wildlife such as ducks, geese and deer, which his uncle owned. He went fishing, caught crawfish and rode four-wheelers. "I loved just being an outdoorsman," he said. "It's a big agricultural town."
- McDonald grew up in Winnie, Texas, which was discovered to have a large oilfield and currently has about 3,500 residents. "We have three stop lights and any fast food restaurant you can possibly imagine and a bunch of hotels," McDonald said to describe Winnie. "It's a place for truckers to stop off and get some rest and a bite to eat driving off to Louisiana. The whole town is just one highway. Everyone knows everyone's business."

McDONALD'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Hosted a charity event in June of 2015 featuring all 49ers tight ends with proceeds going to the Nicaragua Mission Trip team.
- Spent his draft day at home in Winnie, TX, with his family and closest family friends. "It was a big thing for the small town," he said.

- Following his playing career, Miller hopes to go back and coach his high school's football team. He said high school is the most crucial time where athletes need good coaches. "There's a big development stage between freshman and senior year of high school," he said. "Many important parts of kids' lives happen in that time. When you get to college, pretty much what you come in with is what you have. It'd be fun to be a part of." However, Miller described himself as a late bloomer who really developed athletically in college rather than in high school. "My coaches were very influential and played a big role in my life."
- Miller wasn't the most highly recruited player coming out of high school. In fact, saying he was under the radar was an understatement; Bruce wasn't even on the radar. UCF defensive coordinator Dave Huxtable, however, was evaluating other Georgia players and noticed Bruce on film. "He was playing tight end," Huxtable said. "Running and catching balls and making players miss. He was on the kickoff cover team and he was the first one down there on the kickoff cover team plays. Then I got to watch him play basketball. He's a 6-2 center, but he's underneath there just battling on the boards. He's a special guy." Huxtable was one of Bruce's major influences in becoming the two-time Conference USA Defensive Player of the Year. "He played a huge role for me," said Bruce. "I always looked at him for motivation and help. I went to Coach Hux because of the bond we made during recruiting and then playing for him at linebacker."

KYLE NELSON

HT	WT	COLLEGE	TE/LS
6-2	240	NEW MEXICO STATE
BORN 10.3.86 // CHINA SPRINGS, TX // CHINA SPRINGS HS, CHINA SPRINGS, TX 4TH YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '14

GOLDMINE

- The Nelson's family secret to football longevity? Become a specialist. Kyle says the story goes like this: "My grandfather told my dad to learn how to long snap and my dad said, 'No, I'm okay. I'll play linebacker.' He played six years in the CFL, but said if he had learned how to long snap, he would have played a little bit more. It's gotten me where I am today, so I owe a lot to my snapping coach, my grandfather and my dad for getting me started."
- Always around football, in the summers, Kyle would help his dad, Mark, when he was coaching in the NCAA and CFL. He worked as ball boy and assisted the equipment staff with laundry. At a young age, Kyle got to see tight knit locker rooms and learned how successful teams work together on and off the field. Mark's career as a football coach meant many moves for the Nelson family. Kyle was born in Norman, OK and growing up, the family moved between Tulsa, OK and Canada three times and Kyle spent time living in George, Kentucky, Arkansas, Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico before coming to California.
- In the past, Nelson has worked with middle school football players in Phoenix, AZ, teaching them the craft of long snapping as colleges begin recruiting students specifically to fill that role. "It helps the kids get into school," he said. "We do it to get them scholarships, get their school paid for so their parents don't have to."

NELSON'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Comes from a football family where he is a third generation member. His father, Mark, is the linebackers coach for the Montreal Alouettes in the Canadian Football League, with a quarter-century of coaching experience. Mark played in the CFL for six seasons and spent time coaching in the NCAA at Louisville, Arkansas Tech, Baylor and Kentucky. Kyle's grandfather, Roger, was drafted by the Washington Redskins in 1954. He played offensive tackle for 13 seasons for the CFL's Edmonton Eskimos from 1954 to 1967 and was elected into the CFL Hall of Fame in 1985.
- Growing up in Canada, the first sport he played was ice hockey. Following a move to the United States in middle school, he began playing soccer before playing football for the first time his junior year of high school.

GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- In his spare time, Nelson enjoys drawing, reading and going hiking. When Kyle was growing up, his family planned hikes on the weekends where he was able to witness the landscape of Arkansas, Georgia, Texas and Arizona. It translated to painting, where Kyle draws pictures of the outdoors such as oceans, forests and mountains. "I like turning color pictures into black and white, charcoal, Sharpies," he said. "It's a nice, relaxing hobby."

HT	WT	COLLEGE	WR
6-0	204	LOUISIANA TECH
BORN 8.9.90 // LAVERGNE, TN // LAVERGNE HS, LAVERGNE, TN 3RD YEAR // ACQUIRED D-4A IN '13

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Registered 2 receipts for a career-high 53 rec. yds. (26.5 avg.) vs. GB (10/4/15). His previous career high was 35 rec. yds. vs. Arz. (12/28/14).

GOLDMINE

- Patton grew up in a couple of rough neighborhoods around Nashville, TN, where drug use and violence ran rampant "I probably have seen everything, people getting shot, all of it," he said. Quinton's friends realized his athletic abilities and made sure he stayed on the proper path. "They'd always tell me, 'No, you're not going to get into anything because we can see you have something that we don't.'"
- Patton learned to cook from his father, Herman, who worked as a chef at Country Pride, a truck stop restaurant in Antioch, TN. "I always used to be in the kitchen, watching and learning them cook everything." Quinton's favorite dish to make is baked chicken with yams, sweet potatoes and brownies for dessert.
- At the 2011 Poinsettia Bowl, Patton showed leadership and maturity when he selflessly gave his bowl gift (a $300 Best Buy gift card) to a Make-A-Wish Foundation kid during the bowl's community service event. Why? The child's wish was to go on a shopping spree and Patton was happy to be able to grant that child's wish.
- In addition, football helped Patton stay out of trouble. "I put so much time, so much effort in, believed in myself, and wasn't afraid to take a chance," he said. "My chance is football and I always have fun." Patton lives by advice he received from his junior college football coach: "When hard work becomes fun, success will follow. If you aren't working hard and having fun, you're not going to get anything out of it." It's evident on the practice field and in the locker room. Patton makes his friends, teammates and anyone else he encounters, put on a smile and laugh.

PATTON'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- He and fellow teammate, WR Bruce Ellington, visited Aspire East Palo Alto Charter School in May where the two spoke to K-12 students and took part in playground activities and arm wrestling.
- His football journey started at Coffeyville Community College (Coffeyville, KS) before transferring to Louisiana Tech to becoming a fourth-round draft pick by SF in 2013.

HT	WT	COLLEGE	G/T
6-8	316	COLORADO STATE	G/T

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Has started all 16 games in 3 of the past 4 seasons as a member of the Buffalo Bills.
- Part of a Bills offensive line in 2013 that helped the offense rank 2nd in the NFL and led the AFC in rushing yds. per game (144.2).
- In 2012, helped block for just the 2nd Bills RB duo in franchise history to reach 800-or-more rushing yds. in a season.
- Started 16 games in 2011 as the offensive line allowed a NFL-low 23 sacks.

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Part of an offensive line group that helped the team rush for 230 total yds. vs. Min (9/14), the most in franchise history during a season opening game. The O-Line helped pave the way for RB Carlos Hyde as he rushed for a NFL Week 1-high of 168 yds. and 2 TDs.

GOLDMINE

- Between the 2005 and 2006 NFL seasons, Pears headed across the pond, starting in each game of a 10-game stint with the Cologne Centurions of NFL Europe. That season he earned All-NFL Europe honors as a standout offensive lineman. Behind the Pears-led offensive line, the Centurions rushed for 1,453 yds. and 9 TDs, while going over 100-or-more yds. as a team in 9 of 10 games.

PEARS' GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Has started 55 games over the past four seasons (2011-14), including all 16 games in three of those years.
- Was a preseason Outland Trophy candidate in 2003 at Colorado State, given to college football's best interior lineman.

GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- Active in the community during his time in Buffalo, Pears teamed with the Buffalo Public Schools Closing the Gap Program, taking 20 young men on a shopping spree during the holiday season, as well as the Teammates for Kids Foundation, which provides recreational, educational and health-related opportunities for underprivileged youth.
- Pears also participated in the Bills Community Ticket Program, where he was able to assist numerous young fans throughout the season. A group was on hand from the program during each game and also received food and beverage coupons compliments of Pears.

BRADLEY PINION

HT	WT	COLLEGE	P
6-5	229	CLEMSON	P
BORN 6.1.94 // CONCORD, NC // NORTHWEST CABARRUS HS, CONCORD, NC ROOKIE // ACQUIRED D-5 IN '15

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Punted three times in his NFL debut vs. Min. (9/14), placing two inside the 20-yd. line with an average of 46.7 yds.

GOLDMINE

- Every player has their own unique superstitions and quirks that get them ready for a game of football. For Pinion, it is all about his most important piece of equipment: the shoes. For every practice and game since high school, Pinion has tied his shoes the same way. He takes the laces on his right shoe and wraps them around the bottom, ties them and pushes the knot off to the right side, out of the way. "I like to take care of the important foot first," he says.
- While getting ready for the NFL draft, Pinion added Bikram yoga to his training regimen. In 105-degree heat with 40-percent humidity, he dropped 20 pounds. Pinion also added training at Madabolic Inc. in North Carolina, a hybrid of Cross Fit and Nine Rounds training techniques. "I really started to focus on the small things," said Pinion. "All the small things make the big picture."
- Pinion credits his longtime kicking coach Dan Orner as being the most influential person in his life. While preparing for the NFL Draft, Orner worked out side by side with Bradley, pushing him to get better every step of the way. "Just the way he handles his business and the person that he is," Pinion said. "It's something I try and mimic."
- If he wasn't playing football, Pinion would be earning his doctorate in management. With his father, Robert, being a CEO, he has always been interested in owning his own business and building relationships with consumers. However, he wouldn't be the first member of his family with a doctorate. His brother, Chris, is top five in his field and is getting his doctorate in physical chemistry at North Carolina, after earning two degrees as an undergrad at South Carolina. Pinion is two classes away from earning his degree, and after he has settled into his NFL career, he plans to finish what he started at Clemson.
- Pinion's family has a long history of serving in the military. Both of his cousins have served in Iraq, where one worked on tanks and the other went door to door assessing threats. His grandfather on his dad's side, Earl Mason, was about to have a tryout with the Dallas Cowboys as a punter, but he was drafted to serve in the Korean War, where he earned a purple heart. Pinion cites his grandfather as one of his heaviest influences in becoming a punter.

PINION'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- During his time at Clemson, Pinion worked closely with the "Be The Match Foundation," an organization that works to find matches within the bone marrow registry.
- After never playing pee wee football, Pinion received a football as a Christmas gift from his mother, Lorie, in middle school. His father took him out to the field and asked if he wanted to throw the ball. "I wanted to kick it. I grew up playing soccer," said Pinion. His dad put the ball on his foot like a tee, and Pinion knocked through a 35-yard field goal on his first try. "Do that again," he said. Second try, same result. "I guess you could say that it was a Christmas gift that turned into a dream," he said.

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his NFL debut vs. Min. (9/14).

GOLDMINE

- The strength and conditioning part of football is nothing new to Reaser. He grew up a track star in high school and credits the conditioning of the sport to his success on the field. "I definitely improved my speed. I would give that advice to anybody playing football coming up that wanted to improve their speed, track definitely helps. I definitely think that's the reason I can run the way I do now." In addition to his speed, he displayed his strength at the 2014 NFL Combine. Reaser's 22 reps in the bench press were tied for the most by a cornerback.
- Growing up on the coast in Miami, FL, Reaser enjoyed both fresh and saltwater fishing. The hobby provided a challenge similar to football. "I like the competition of fishing. I don't just go by myself. I don't know exactly what I like about it. Just the challenge of catching fish. I enjoy it."

REASER'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Cousin of former Washington Redskins Safety Sean Taylor. Acker was 16 when Taylor passed away. The two would run and train together.
- At the 2014 NFL Combine, he registered 22 reps in the bench press, tied for the most by a CB.
- When he first arrived at FAU, he began on the scout team. He eventually worked his way up for the Owls and became a 5th-round draft pick by SF in the 2014 NFL Draft.

ERIC REID

HT	WT	COLLEGE	S
6-1	213	LOUISIANA STATE	S
BORN 12.10.91 // GEISMAR, LA // DUTCHTOWN HS, GEISMAR, LA 3RD YEAR // ACQUIRED D-1 IN '13

AWARDS & HONORS

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- In 2013, Reid was one of only three players in the NFL to record 4-or-more INTs and 2-or-more FRs (LB Kiko Alonso 4 INTs/2 FRs; CB Alterraun Verner 5 INTs/2 FRs).

GOLDMINE

- In May of 2015, Reid hosted his inaugural "Eric Reid Invitational," a golf tournament which raised money for the Baton Rouge Sickle Cell Anemia Foundation. The event brought in more than $70,000 throughout the weekend.

- Ironically, after choosing to stay local for college, Reid hoped to be drafted by the 49ers so he could be in Northern California's Bay Area. Eric's mother, Sharon Guillory-Reid, works as a traveling nurse. Since Eric was in middle school in 2004, she has been traveling back and forth from Baton Rouge, LA, and the Bay Area, working in hospitals in Oakland, San Jose and San Leandro, staying in each city two to three weeks at a time. Now, Eric remains close to his mother and has insight on the area.
- Growing up, Eric's parent's taught him the importance of hard work, the value of money and focusing on strong academics. His mother expected him to earn straight A's. When Reid wanted money to buy things, his parents made him get a job. He worked at a water park when he was 15 and at Wal-Mart at age 16. He would work four to eight hours a week, even between his regular high school football practices. Sharon bought him a 2001 Honda Civic, which the family still owns. But Eric had one ultimatum, if he wanted gas to be able to drive the car, he'd have to learn to budget his expenses.
- In addition to instilling high character into Eric, his mother made an impact on the gridiron. Sharon also played tackle football, spending one season for the Baton Rouge Wildcats of the Women's American Football League. She played tight end and defensive end in the full-contact, tackle league. However, the Wildcats only lasted one season when the team folded due to Hurricane Katrina.

REID'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Was the recipient of the Thomas Herrion Memorial Award in 2013, given by the 49ers coaches to the rookie or first-year player who has taken advantage of every opportunity and turned it into a positive situation.
- Prior to WrestleMania 31 held at Levi's® Stadium, along with WWE Superstars, spoke to students about being an ally along with bullying intervention in March of 2015.
- A 2013 Pro Bowl selection, he was the first 49ers rookie safety in franchise history to be named to the Pro Bowl.

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his NFL debut vs. Min. (9/14)

GOLDMINE

- Silberman was named one of 28 first-team recipients of the Academic Momentum Award in conjunction with the National Consortium for Academics and Sports (NCAS) in 2013. The NCAS “provides opportunities for current and former student-athletes to continue their pursuit of higher education, while working in the community with children to address social issues.”
- Silberman wants to stay around the game of football after his career is over by becoming a coach. Currently, Silberman visits high schools in his hometown and volunteers his time teaching students the techniques he has learned in the weight room, during film study and on the field in practice.

SILBERMAN’S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Began his collegiate career at Florida before graduating with a degree in family, youth and community science and used his final season of eligibility at Boston College where he earned Third-Team All-ACC honors.
- His parents each spent more than 20 years serving in the Navy as is mother, Stephanie, served 24 years and his father, Warren, served 21 years.

6-2	190	COASTAL CAROLINA
BORN 2.4.86 // REIDSVILLE, NC // REIDSVILLE HS, REIDSVILLE, NC 6TH YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '15

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Set a career high of 726 rec. yds. in 2013 with the Vikings, and was 2 recpts. shy of his career best (50).
- Caught a pass in 27 of the 28 games he played with Minnesota, including a string of 26 straight games with a recpt. (10/21/12 vs. Arz. to 12/29/13 vs. Det.).
- Had a career-high 50 recpts. with Cin. in 2011. Also ranked 2nd on the team in rec. yds. (725) and TDs (4) and 3rd in recpts.

GOLDMINE

- During the 2013 offseason, Simpson began designing and making his own clothes. From printing patterns to sewing the actual garments, he involved himself with all facets of the clothing industry. He later established Simpson's Custom Apparel which offers many different varieties of clothes and other accesories for men, women and kids. For more information, visit JSimpso.com.
- A versatile athlete at Coastal Carolina, he set school records for the long jump and high jump on the team's track & field team.

SIMPSON'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Became well know for his 19-yard touchdown reception against the Arizona Cardinals on December 24, 2011 as a member of the Cincinnati Bengals. He executed a full front flip, landing on his feet after leaping over Cardinals LB Daryl Washington across the goal line for the touchdown.
- Involvement in the community has been a passion for Simpson throughout his NFL career. He often would host football camps for kids in his hometown, helping them with their 40-yard dash times and broad jumps along with receiving drills.

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his NFL debut vs. Min. (9/14).

GOLDMINE

- Originally born in San Francisco, it took a move to Guadalajara, Mexico, for Shayne Skov to find his love for football. After following the lead of his younger brother, Patrick, Skov joined a local team called the Carneros, or Rams. Teaming up with his brother, Shayne helped lead the Carneros to multiple championships amongst the teams in the private leagues of Guadalajara, Monterrey and Mexico City.
- In March of 2015, Skov visited Aguascalientes, Mexico to volunteer at the NFL Tochito, a national flag football tournament, a program sponsored by NFL Play 60. In addition to giving all the participants football tips in the clinic, he gave a motivational speech to all of the under-14 participants, took photos, signed autographs and presented teams with awards.

SKOV'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- In his spare time during college, he would be on his computer "coding" as part of his interest in computer science.
- Is a descendant of the famous Ghiradelli chocolateer, Domingo Ghiradelli.
- With his hispanic background, joins an exclusive list of hispanic players to make it to the NFL.

GOLDMINE

- Smelter joins QB Colin Kaepernick and TE Blake Bell as one of three players on the current roster to be drafted in both the National Football League and Major League Baseball. Smelter was selected in the 14th round of the 2010 MLB Draft by the Minnesota Twins, but elected to play collegiately before pursuing his professional career.
- Smelter originally attended Georgia Tech on a baseball scholarship before joining the football team during the summer of 2013. Smelter played baseball at Georgia Tech from 2011-13, where he pitched and played in the outfield. In 2010, he started 15 games in the outfield and one game on the mound for the Yellow Jackets. He allowed just one earned run in 17.1 innings of work on the mound for a team-best 0.52 ERA among regular relievers and also pitched scoreless ball in 13 relief outings.

SMELTER'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Joined Georgia Tech's football team during the summer of 2013 and earned his way to a Second-Team All-ACC selection as a senior wide receiver.
- Originally attended Georgia Tech on a baseball scholarship after helping Tattnall Square Academy HS win two state titles.
- A highly-touted baseball prospect, he was named Georgia Independent Schools Associated Player of the Year in 2008 and 2010.

GOLDMINE

- In April of 2015, Smith participated in the 137th edition of the White House Easter Egg Roll, which is the largest annual public event at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue. More than 35,000 people gathered on the South Lawn to participate in egg hunts, live storytelling and fitness zones in conjunction with the First Lady's "Let's Move!" initiative.

- During his time in Baltimore, Smith started the Torrey Smith Foundation, which was established to provide support to at-risk youth with physical, educational and financial challenges. Visit TorreySmith.org for more information in regards to Smith's numerous efforts throughout the community.
- Smith's Foundation provides a full thanksgiving meal for children and families in need during "Torrey's Turkey Day," where he partners with local organizations, and prepares the meal and celebrates the holiday season with selected families. This program is meant to provide families with a night to take their minds off of the stress of their daily lives and to provide these families with a holiday meal and fun evening.

- In 2014, Smith held his Fourth Annual Celebrity All-Star Basketball Game. The "Battle of the Beltway" featured Smith and his former Ravens teammates taking on Washington Redskins LB Ryan Kerigan and his teammates where all proceeds benefited each player's respective foundations.
- After losing his brother in a motorcycle accident the morning of a Sunday Night Football game against the New England Patriots, Smith went on to register 6 recpts. for 127 yds. and 2 TDs as the Ravens defeated the Patriots, 31-30. It marked Smith's third game with 100-or-more rec. yds. in his career.

- Smith has annually hosted his "Teaming up with Torrey" holiday toy drive, which benefits youth from the Baltimore area's Dogwood Elementary School, Sarah's Hope at Hannah Moore homeless shelter and the Boys and Girls Club of Metropolitan Baltimore.
- In May of 2015, Smith transformed a room at Gardenville Elementary (Baltimore, MD) into a literacy oasis with the focus on improving literacy in area schools. He later did the same for Moravia Park Elementary School (Baltimore, MD) two months later in July.

- When asked about having such a passion for community involvement and the inspiration behind it, Smith said that it goes back to his youth. He said, "For me, I've been giving back to the community since middle school. I actually won an award in middle school, the Martin Luther King Make a Difference Award. I've been giving back since day one, even when my family was the one receiving the help. I always felt like your time was just as important as your money. I've always given back to the community whether it's schools or shelters or whatever. I know what a lot of these families are going through and a lot of these kids are going through. I wanted to be that support system for them and that's why it's important for me to give back."
- In July of 2015, Smith joined the First Lady of Virginia, Dorothy McAuliffe, to visit Hollin Meadows Elementary School in Alexandria, VA to promote the Summer Food Service Program (SFSP) and recognize the important role schools play in providing healthy meals to children during the summer.

- After a fire destroyed his hometown elementary school in January of 2014, Smith held a school supply drive in Fredericksburg, VA. He also has "Torrey's Back to School Program," held each August with the purpose of ensuring that 600 low-income elementary and middle school students have the basic items needed to begin the school year. Each kid is able to meet Torrey and, with Walmart's help, receive backpacks filled with all of the necessities to start off the school year successfully.

- 2012: AP Second-Team All-Pro, NFC Pro Bowl selection (Starter), 2012 Madden Most Valuable Protectors Award, Madden Most Valuable Protectors Award (Week 5), Madden Most Valuable Protectors Award (Week 7), Madden Most Valuable Protectors Award (Week 12)
- 2013: AP Second-Team All-Pro, Pro Bowl, PFWA All-NFL Team
- 2014: Pro Bowl, Bobb McKittrick Award

STALEY'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- During the 2015 offseason, he and his teammates invited Anthony Pineda, a 13-year-old who battled Leukemia, to be a "Captain for the Day" as part of ESPN's "My Wish" program.
- In 2014, Staley was selected as the Bobb McKittrick Award winner, which is given annually to the 49ers offensive lineman who best represents the courage, intensity and sacrifice displayed by the longtime offensive line coach, during his 21 years of service to the 49ers. The award was established by the 49ers in 1999, and is voted on by the offensive line.

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Became the first 49ers rookie O-Lineman to start every single game in a season since Cas Banaszek (1968-77), who started all 14 contests in 1968.
- Was 1 of only 3 NFL rookies (former 49ers LB Patrick Willis and Browns LT Joe Thomas) to line up for every single snap in 2007, and was 1 of 35 NFL players overall to accomplish the feat out of 1,898 total players.
- When Staley recovered a fumble for a TD [vs. NYJ (12/7/08)], he became the 6th offensive lineman in 49ers history to register a TD.

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Part of an offensive line group that helped the team rush for 230 total yds. vs. Min (9/14), the most in franchise history during a season opening game. The O-Line helped pave the way for RB Carlos Hyde as he rushed for a NFL Week 1-high of 168 yds. and 2 TDs.

GOLDMINE

- In 2013, Joe was an ambassador for San Francisco's first Electric Run, a 5K race that benefits Smile Train, the world's largest cleft lip and palate charity. The race, which was held at Candlestick Park, raised $10,000 for Smile Train and more than 8,000 people participated in the event. "Anything that benefits children is just a great cause and I was very excited to put my name down for the charity and the event itself," Staley said.
- Entering his sophomore season at Central Michigan, Staley and the football program experienced a coaching change. New head coach Brian Kelly and offensive line coach Jeff Quinn asked the young tight end to make the switch to offensive tackle. He agreed and the transformation began. The 250-pound tight end began to wake up at 2 a.m. to consume a 2,000 calorie weight-gaining shake and would later work out twice a day to prepare his body for its new life in the trenches. In the first offseason, Staley added 20 pounds to his lean frame. By the time he was a senior, he reached 290 pounds and went on to become the first Chippewa to be drafted in the first round of the NFL Draft.

BORN 2.12.92 // MOBILE, AL // DAVIDSON HS, MOBILE, AL ROOKIE // ACQUIRED D-2 IN '15

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his NFL debut vs. Min. (9/14) and recorded his first career sack, taking down QB Teddy Bridgewater for a 14-yd. loss.

GOLDMINE

- A two-time All-American and All-Southern Conference selection, Tartt was the first player in Samford school history to be invited to play in the Reese's Senior Bowl. Just the sixth player selected in the NFL draft in school history, Jaquiski holds the distinction of being the first player drafted in the second round or higher from Samford University.
- Tartt's young football career has been heavily influenced by his family. He played his first year of organized football in 2009 at Davidson HS in Mobile, AL to honor his grandfather, Alfred Lewis, who passed away during the summer before his senior year. "The football coaches and my friends wanted me to come out and play, and he really wanted me to play. I really wanted to play again ever since he passed away, so I do this for his memory." Additionally, Jaquiski chose to attend Samford University at the urging of his mother, a traveling nurse who wanted to go there herself because of their pharmacy program. Initially, Tartt was wary of the traveling between Mobile and Birmingham, but his mother and coach Pat Sullivan convinced him Samford was the right choice for him.
- Drafted by the 49ers in the second round of the 2015 NFL Draft, Tartt reunites with best friend and former high school teammate DB Jimmie Ward. Both products of Davidson High School in Mobile, AL, the pair won the Class 6A Region 1 football championship as the school's starting safeties in 2009. "We talked about this day and how it would be crazy to be on the same team," Tartt said after hearing his name announced at the 2015 NFL Draft. "For it to actually happen, it's crazy."

TARTT'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Pronounced juh-KWAH-skee.
- Became the sixth player selected in the NFL Draft in Samford school history and holds the distinction of being the first player drafted in the second round or higher.
- Reunites with high school teammate and 2014 49ers 1st round pick DB Jimmie Ward. Both are products of Davidson HS in Mobile, AL. The pair won the Class 6A Region 1 football championship as the school's starting safeties in 2009.

BRANDON THOMAS

60

HT	WT	COLLEGE
6-3	317	CLEMSON	G
BORN 2.8.91 // SPARTANBURG, SC // PAUL M. DORMAN HS, SPARTANBURG, SC 1ST YEAR // ACQUIRED D-3C IN '14

GOLDMINE

- The word versatile has been used frequently to describe Thomas on the football field. During his days at Paul M. Dorman (Spartanburg, SC) High School, Thomas played guard his freshman and sophomore years, tackle his junior year and tight end/fullback his senior year. He took that versatility with him to Clemson, where he predominantly played tackle, starting 30 games at the position, but he also started nine games at guard for the Tigers. Through all of his experience, Thomas knows what it takes to be successful at both the tackle and guard positions and will use that to his advantage with the 49ers. "Basically, out there (at tackle) you have to have quick feet and good hips," Thomas said. "But inside (at guard), you have to be strong and have a solid base."
- Despite a knee injury late in the draft process, Thomas was aware of the positive situation that surrounded him with the Niners. He understood that there was an established offensive line that would work with him to improve. "This injury could be a blessing in disguise," Thomas said. "To take a year to learn from those guys, and get stronger, get better, get my knee stronger. So, it's going to be a fun process."

THOMAS' GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Earning his degree in secondary education from Clemson, Thomas spent five months in 2013 as a student-teacher at Liberty High School in South Carolina. Part of his responsibilities were to create lesson plans that allowed students to interact, participate in group projects, and grow as young adults.
- Following his student-teaching experience, he went on to intern at Trammell & Mills, Law Firm, LLC where he was involved in client meetings and worked in general case management.

THOMAS' TRANSACTIONS

Originally the third of three 3rd-round (100th overall) draft choices by SF in 2014...Placed on the Reserve/Non-Football Injury List on 8/25/14.

JIMMIE WARD

HT	WT	COLLEGE	DB
5-11	193	NORTHERN ILLINOIS	DB

2015 HIGHLIGHTS

- Registered a career-high 5 tackles vs. GB (10/4).

GOLDMINE

- Growing up in Mobile, AL, Ward knew when to separate himself from others in his neighborhood. Said Ward, "From where I come from, the neighborhood that I grew up in, a lot of people don't make it out. There's a lot of stuff. They either flunk out of school, end up having a child so they have to drop out of school and raise that child, or end up going to jail. It really just made me want to do something more than what my peers were doing." Ward would surround himself with positive influences to help combat the negative. "As I got older I hung out with positive guys. The guys I was hanging with, they wanted to do something with their life too. That really helped me out."
- While playing youth football, Ward went by the nickname 'Nico' and was teammates with former Alabama QB AJ McCarron with the Mobile Youth Football's Municipal Raiders. He played linebacker for the team that won multiple Youth Bowl Championships in Mobile.
- Ward's family is no stranger to professional athletics. He is the cousin of current NBA player, Caron Butler.

WARD'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- On the day he was selected by the 49ers in the 1st round of the 2014 NFL Draft, drove three hours to New Orleans to purchase a new purse for his mother's birthday. He said, "I never really bought her anything expensive, because you're a kid. Growing up you would write a card, color a card or just buy a card or simple flowers. That's the most I ever did. She likes purses, so I just decided to get her a purse. It really didn't matter how much it cost, you just wanted to see that smile." His act of generosity shows his true character. "I'm not a selfish person. I just like to see and make other people smile too. It makes me feel better as a person."
- Was best friends growing up with 49ers 2015 2nd round draft pick, S Jaquiski Tartt. The two were teammates at W.P. Davidson High School in Mobile, AL.

6-0	192	ALABAMA
BORN 10.16.91 // HOUSTON, TX // NORTH SHORE HS, HOUSTON, TX ROOKIE // ACQUIRED FA IN '15

GOLDMINE

- Made his NFL debut at Pit. (9/20) and recorded the first receipt of his career, an 8-yd. pass from QB Colin Kaepernick.

GOLDMINE

- Has a strong relationship with DT Quinton Dial. Since first meeting during their college days at Alabama, the two have formed a brother-like bond. "He's like a bigger brother to me. When I got here, he welcomed me, he kind of tried to show me the way and I couldn't ask for a better relationship."

WHITE'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- First undrafted WR to make 53-man roster since Dontavia Bogan and Joe Hastings in 2011.
- Developed a strong relationship with DT Quinton Dial after both playing college football at Alabama.

AWARDS & HONORS

2012: Thomas Herrion Award

GOLDMINE

- Wilhoite took an interesting road to the NFL that began at Division II Washburn University in Topeka, KS. With two redshirt years, one due to an injury, Wilhoite spent six years developing his skills as a safety. Despite playing in the Cactus Bowl, the Division II all-star game, he did not latch on with a NFL team following his final season, in 2010. He later signed with the nearby Omaha Nighthawks of the UFL. "I had never played linebacker in my life until I got to the UFL. I used that experience as a research project. There were former first round picks on the team that I could learn what the NFL was like. The coaches had all worked in the NFL, so I made sure to pay attention to them in case I ever got a shot."

WILHOITE'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Played collegiately at Washburn University, a Division II school located in Topeka, KS.
- Began his professional football career with the United Football League's (UFL) Omaha Nighthawks in 2011, where he appeared in four games.
- Following the UFL season, he went back home to work at Finish Line. A motivated Wilhoite earned a spot on the 49ers practice squad after a workout in 2011.

GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- Wilhoite and his teammates visited San Mateo Juvenile Hall in collaboration with Fresh Lifelines for Youth (FLY) during a 49ers Community Monday event during the 2014 season. The players opened up about their stories of struggle and perseverance, and split into small groups with the youth to discuss emotional triggers, alternatives and goals. “If you put your mind to something and you’re focused on something and you want something bad enough, you’re going to get it. And for a lot of these kids, they haven’t had anybody encourage or motivate them or show them how to get to that point,” said Wilhoite. “For us to come and show these kids support and show there are people who care, that’s important.”

- A mass media major at Washburn, Wilhoite would one day like to be a sports commentator. While in school, he completed an internship at WIBW radio where he did everything from pre- and post-production to occasionally participating on air.
- Wilhoite worked several part times jobs growing up, including Red Lobster. “I loved the job. I got to talk to people and I really wanted to make sure that their experience was really nice. They were spending good money, so I wanted to take care of them.”
- He was the recipient of the 2012 Thomas Herrion Award. The award is presented annually to a rookie or first-year player who has taken advantage of every opportunity, turned it into a positive and made their dream come true like Thomas Herrion and is voted on by the coaches. After signing with the 49ers as an undrafted free agent from Washburn, Wilhoite made the 49ers practice squad and became a special teams captain after he was promoted to the team’s active roster in December.

HT	WT	COLLEGE	NT
6-1	305	NOTRE DAME
BORN 8.31.89 // LONGWOOD, FL // LYMAN HS, LONGWOOD, FL 5TH YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '11

GOLDMINE

- Williams learned that one of the most important things you have to learn when entering the NFL is time management, and attributes much of the early lessons he's learned to the older veteran players. "Just seeing the older players has helped me. You'd think once you've been in the league for a few years, guys start to relax, but that's not the case here."
- Having relationships with people who have played in the league served extremely valuable to Williams. Former 49er Bryant Young coached Ian during his junior year at Notre Dame. "Just to have him as a reference and to be able to talk to him about stuff is huge, especially since he was out here for so long. He's like a legend and is going to be a Hall-of-Famer. It's great to have somebody like that who you're able to talk to and just run things by him."
- Teamed up with WWE Superstars leading up to WrestleMania 31 at Levi's® Stadium for the Make-A-Wish WrestleMania pizza party. Each kid in attendance was inducted into the WWE's Circle of Champions. The 49ers and WWE partnered to provide 26 tickets for kids at the event.
- Williams attended the 15th annual 49ers Foundation Winter Fest in March of 2015. The San Francisco 49ers organization spent a weekend in late March surrounded by the beautiful mountain vistas of Olympic Valley, CA, where they joined Olympians and other celebrities to raise over $1.7 million for the San Francisco 49ers Foundation at the 15th annual Winter Fest. The weekend-long event celebrated football, family, philanthropy, and food and wine, while supporting youth in the Bay Area through the 49ers Foundation and their outreach programming. The highlighted beneficiary for 2015 was the 49ers STEM Leadership Institute.

WILLIAMS' GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Was coached by former 49ers DE Bryant Young during his playing days at Notre Dame.
- Assists 49ers Head Coach Jim Tomsula at the annual "Football Camp for the Stars," a camp for athletes with Down Syndrome who love football. Campers learn the fundamentals that put them in the middle of the action, resulting in an authentic football experience.

5-11	182	SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA
BORN 4.8.87 // COLTON, CA // COLTON HS, COLTON, CA 5TH YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '15

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Registered a career-high 58 tackles with SD in 2014, ranking 3rd on the team among DBs.
- Returned the first INT of his career 41 yds. vs. NYG (12/8).
- In his first career playoff game, had five tackles and 1 INT for 30 yds. at Cin. (1/5/14 - AFC - WC).

GOLDMINE

- Wright began working with the Juvenile Diabetes relief Fund (JDrF) when his Godsister, Isabella, was diagnosed with Type 1 Diabetes when she was a toddler. She's thriving now, due in part to the JDrF and the help of her hero. "Just to be able to give back is awesome," said Wright. "It feels good to be able to help with an issue that a lot of people deal with, having diabetes. Whenever you can give back and have a personal involvement is even better."
- As a member of the Chargers and a local product from Colton, CA, Wright supported the After-School All-Stars program (ASAS). The goal of ASAS is to provide students with after school activities that give them the skills and confidence to become productive members of society.

WRIGHT'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Has played his entire football career in the state of California. From high school to college and now in the NFL, he loves being close to family.
- A homebody, he enjoys spending time with his family and the ones he loves, especially his son, Elijah James.

LEVI'S® STADIUM

Behind five sacks and an interception from a swarming defense, and 168 rushing yards and two touchdowns from RB Carlos Hyde, the 49ers defeated the Vikings, 20-3, in the season opener on ESPN's Monday Night Football at Levi's Stadium. Head Coach Jim Tomsula made his head coaching debut after previously serving as the team's interim head coach in 2010 for one game. At the onset, both the 49ers and Vikings defenses held the upper hand. After Minnesota blocked 28-yard FG attempt by K Phil Dawson, the San Francisco defense held strong to force a missed FG attempt by the Vikings to keep the score knotted at zero. The defensive battle continued over the next six possessions, as both teams were held scoreless through the midway point of the second quarter. Starting on their own 7-yard line, QB Colin Kaepernick and the 49ers offense found their rhythm and executed an 11-play drive. RB Carlos Hyde, making his first career start, capped off the impressive sequence with a 10-yard touchdown run to give San Francisco the lead heading into halftime, 7-0. The 49ers defense continued to stifle the Vikings offense, as they forced their fourth punt of the night to open the second half. On the 49ers first offensive possession of the third quarter, a key 12-yard scramble on third down by Kaepernick kept the drive alive and allowed Dawson to convert his first FG of the night, a 30-yard attempt to push the 49ers lead to 10-0. Minnesota would finally find their way onto the scoreboard early in the fourth quarter, as K Blair Walsh knocked through a 37-yard FG attempt. After a touchback, the offense embarked on its second long touchdown drive of the night. After Kaepernick hit TE Vernon Davis on a 19-yard crossing route, the 49ers QB found WR Anquan Boldin for the 94th reception of his career, moving him into 13th place on the all-time NFL career receptions list. Hyde finished off the 10-play drive with his second touchdown of the night, a 17-yard run to put the 49ers up 17-3. Hyde finished his first-career start with 168 rushing yards and two touchdowns. His 168 rushing yds. are the most by a 49ers running back in their first start with the team, since 1970. The San Francisco defense would come up big once again as CB Tramaine Brock intercepted QB Teddy Bridgewater on the ensuing drive and returned it 26-yards to the Vikings 30-yard line. Making good on the field position, Dawson converted his second FG of the night, a 25-yard attempt to put the 49ers up for good at 20-3. On the Vikings final possession, LB Aaron Lynch took down QB Teddy Bridgewater on fourth down to seal the win for the 49ers. With the win, the 49ers have now won their fifth consecutive season opener for the second time in franchise history (1992-96) and have won seven straight games on Monday Night Football, each of them by 10-or-more points. Head Coach Jim Tomsula became the seventh 49ers head coach to win the season opener in his first year as head coach. He is just the fifth coach to do so at home.

SAN FRANCISCO 18, PITTSBURGH 43

HEINZ FIELD

The 49ers fell to the Pittsburgh Steelers in their first road game of the season 43–18 at Heinz Field. Despite the loss, 49ers QB Colin Kaepernick had one of the most prolific passing days of his career as he registered a career–high 33 completions and 335 yds. passing, the fourth time in the regular season he has thrown for 300–or–more yds. On the first offensive possession of the game, Pittsburgh QB Ben Roethlisberger connected with TE Heath Miller for a 2–yd. TD and then found WR Antonio Brown for the 2–point conversion to put the Steelers up 8–0. As the 49ers offense took the field, Kaepernick orchestrated a 17–play drive deep into Pittsburgh territory, and K Phil Dawson would cap off the long drive with a 47–yd. FG. On the ensuing drive, Steelers RB DeAngelo Williams would find the end zone on a 2–yd. run, and Roethlisberger converted the 2–point conversion on a pass to Miller to give Pittsburgh a 16–3 lead. After a fumbled handoff exchange between Kaepernick and RB Carlos Hyde in 49ers territory gave the Steelers good field position, Roethlisberger found WR Darius Heyward–Bey from 35–yds. out to extend the lead to 22–3 midway through the second quarter. With just under two minutes left in the half, Williams found the end zone for the second time, giving the Steelers a 29–3 halftime lead. After no scoring in the third quarter, Kaepernick marched the offense down the field, covering 64–yards in 1:51, and found WR Anquan Boldin for a 14–yard touchdown pass, bringing the score to 29–10. Boldin would finish the day with 6 rec. for 60 yds., with the TD being the 71st of his career. The Steelers would answer right back however, as Williams reached the end zone for the third time on the day, a 1–yd. run to push the lead back up 26. On the 49ers next possession, Kaepernick connected with WR Torrey Smith on a 75–yd. TD strike, and converted the 2–point conversion to Smith to cut the deficit to 18. The 75–yd TD marked Smith’s first TD as a member of the 49ers and the longest recept. of his career. However, Roethlisberger continued his strong performance, finding Brown for a 7–yd TD pass to close out the scoring at 43–18 in favor of the Steelers.

NOTES: WR Torrey Smith took a QB Colin Kaepernick pass 75 yds. for his first TD as a member of the 49ers ... It marked the longest recept. of Smith's career and his longest TD since 9/25/11 at StL (74t), as a member of the Baltimore Ravens ... Smith finished the game with 120 yds. on 6 receipts., going over 100 yds. receiving for the first time with the 49ers. It was the 7th 100–yd. game of Smith's career and first since 10/6/13 at Mia. (6 receipts. for 121 yds.) ... WR Anquan Boldin recorded his first TD of 2015 and 71st of his career, as he found the end zone on a 14–yd. pass from Kaepernick ... Boldin finished the game with 6 receipts. for 60 yds. and 1 TD ... Kaepernick registered his 4th career 300–yd. passing game, completing 33 of 46 atts. for 335 yds., 2 TDs and a QB rating of 106.7 ... Kaepernick's 33 comps. were the most by a 49ers quarterback in a single game since 10/10/04 vs. Arz. [Tim Rattay (38 of 57 for 417 yds., 2 TDs, 0 INTs)].

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 27
SAN FRANCISCO 7, ARIZONA 47
UNIVERSITY OF PHOENIX STADIUM

In their first NFC West battle of the season, the 49ers lost on the road to the Arizona Cardinals 47-7 in front of 63,663 fans at University of Phoenix Stadium in Glendale. The Cardinals defense set the tone early, as CB Justin Bethel and S Tyrann Mathieu returned interceptions of QB Colin Kaepernick for TDs on the 49ers first two offensive possessions. After the two teams traded punts in the first quarter, Cardinals RB Chris Johnson finished off a 10-play drive with a 6 yd. rushing TD on the first play of the second quarter to extend the lead to 21-0. On Arizona's next offensive possession, Johnson found the end zone for the second time in the quarter, this time from 1-yd. out, giving the home team a 28-0 advantage. Late in the half, the 49ers offense would get on the board, which was set up by a 37-yd. punt return by RB Jarryd Hayne. A few plays later, Kaepernick sprinted to his left and reached the end zone for a 12-yd TD with just over 2 minutes remaining in the second quarter. On the Cardinals next possession, 49ers CB Kenneth Acker registered the first INT of his career, picking off QB Carson Palmer at the San Francisco 19-yd. line. However, Mathieu grabbed the ball right back for the Cardinals, intercepting Kaepernick with 42 seconds remaining. As time expired in the first half, Arizona K Chandler Catanzaro knocked through a 22-yd. FG, giving the Cardinals a 31-3 half time lead. Arizona continued it's strong play to open the second half, as Palmer connected with WR Larry Fitzgerald for a 4-yd TD early in the third quarter. After RB Carlos Hyde was taken down in the end zone for a safety, Palmer rounded out the scoring with an 8-yd. TD pass to Fitzgerald midway through the fourth quarter to bring the final score to 47-7.

NOTES: WR Anquan Boldin recorded 2 receipts. for 16 yds. against the Cardinals. He moved passed WR Andre Reed (951) and now ranks 13th in NFL history with 952 career receipts. ... CB Kenneth Acker registered the first INT of his NFL career ... DL Arik Armstead recorded the first sack of his NFL career ... QB Colin Kaepernick registered the 11th rushing TD of his career.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 4

GREEN BAY 17, SAN FRANCISCO 3

LEVI'S® STADIUM

The Green Bay Packers defeated the 49ers 17–3 at Levi's® Stadium in front of 70,799 fans. The San Francisco defense held strong all game, giving up just 224 yards passing to one of the league's most explosive offenses. LB Aaron Lynch kept the pressure on QB Aaron Rodgers, registering 2 of the 49ers 3 sacks, giving him the first multi-sack game of his career. On the opening possession, Rodgers drove the Packers offense 80 yards on 12 plays, eventually finding TE Richard Rodgers in the back of the end zone from 9 yards out to give Green Bay an early 7–0 advantage. The next six combined offensive possessions for both teams resulted in punts, until QB Colin Kaepernick and the 49ers offense took the field with 10:48 remaining in the second quarter. WR Quinton Patton would come in motion as the ball was snapped, and Kaepernick made a quick forward shovel pass to Patton behind the line of scrimmage, who turned the corner around the left end and sprinted for a career-long 40-yard reception. Patton finished the game with 53 rec. yards, a new career-high. The explosive play from the 49ers offense set up a 33-yd. FG from K Phil Dawson, making the score 7–3. With 12 seconds remaining in the first half and the Packers inside the red zone, LB Ahmad Brooks sacked Rodgers for a 9-yd. loss, the 42nd sack of his career. Packers K Mason Crosby would miss the 44-yd. FG as time expired, keeping the score at 7–3 heading into half time. After San Francisco punted on the opening possession of the second half, Rodgers led the Green Bay offense 61 yards on 9 plays, as FB John Kuhn dove into the end zone from 1-yard out to extend the road team's lead to 14–3. On the ensuing Packers possession, Crosby knocked through a 31-yd. FG to round out the scoring at 17–3 in favor of Green Bay.

NOTES: The 49ers defense registered 3.0 sacks of Packers QB Aaron Rodgers, marking the most sacks against him in a game since 11/30/14 (3.0 sacks by New England) ... LB Aaron Lynch registered 2.0 sacks on the day, marking the first multi-sack game of his career ... 49ers make grief-stricken fan's wish come true

By Tom Friend
ESPN.com
July 20, 2015

SANTA CLARA, Calif. -- My Wish morphed into My 49ers last month. A 14-year-old who brought along a story of love and football took center stage at a Niners team meeting, asked Colin Kaepernick and company to follow him on Instagram ... and then admonished them for losing to the Raiders last season.

New 49ers head coach Jim Tomsula then facetiously told young Anthony Pineda to tone it down, saying "Hey Anthony, we gotta get another spin on this." The 75 or so players in the room laughed, but this was anything but spin. Fourteen-year-olds who just beat cancer don't hold back the truth -- especially when they are there speaking for one of the biggest 49ers fans on Earth. Or, specifically, the one who used to be on Earth.

The most popular NFL team in San Bernardino, California, 61 miles east of L.A., is probably the Oakland Raiders, which used to bug Robert Sandoval to no end. Robert had been a fan since the Steve Young/Jerry Rice 49ers era in the 1990s and would wear his San Francisco gear wherever and whenever he pleased. He even wore it to his new job at Del Taco, where one night he met an effervescent young woman named Desiree Segura.

Robert was a cook there, while Desiree worked as a cashier, but whenever they crossed paths, he noticed her easy-going smile. Robert's cousin also worked the grill and offered to give Desiree a ride home one night. Robert tagged along.

Robert wasn't shy. He asked Desiree all about herself, and when she realized he was flirting, she said, "Oh, OK, I have two kids. Like, really?"

The fact that she had two young sons -- Anthony and Daniel -- never deterred Robert. He asked questions about the boys, asked her who their favorite football team was. Eventually, he asked for her phone number. She gave it to him.

The phone calls turned into dates, and then the dates turned into football Sundays at Desiree's home. And that's when Anthony, Desiree's oldest son, began pulling his chair up close to Robert's. At first, Robert and Anthony had bonded over their love for paintball, which thrilled Desiree. She had given birth to Anthony when she was 15, and she felt her son needed a male to emulate. But Robert's passion for the 49ers reeled Anthony in even more.

Anthony was around 10 at the time. He would see Robert living and dying with every 49er win or loss, howling at the TV set, sitting in his same lucky seat on the couch, always dressed in a Niners jersey, always reveling in Raiders defeats. Eventually, Robert and Desiree moved in together, and Anthony proclaimed right about then that he was unequivocally a 49ers fan.

"You're not a fan," Robert would rib him.

"Yes, I am," Anthony would shout.

"Prove it," Robert would say. "Who's the quarterback?"

Admittedly, Anthony's knowledge of the team was limited. He didn't know a Bill Walsh from a George Seifert or a Joe Montana from a Dwight Clark. So he began to read up on franchise's history, studied its all-time stat records, memorized its Super Bowl years. He even dressed their dog in a 49ers jersey, and Robert's work was done.

From there, the Sundays at the house were raucous -- Robert and Anthony two peas in a pod. Robert would wear his "lucky" white Michael Crabtree jersey, while Anthony would be decked out in a Patrick Willis get-up. "Watching the games got me, like, real excited," Anthony says. "... Like once he gets mad, I'll get mad. ... We're jumping up, yelling and screaming. ... We, like, bonded when we watched 49er games. ... It was just, like, he was my dad."

The 2012 season was then the time of their lives. As the 49ers began riding Colin Kaepernick's coattails to the playoffs, Anthony -- now an extroverted sixth-grader -- would mimic the quarterback and kiss his biceps after Niners touchdowns. Robert would belly-laugh at the sight of it.

The Super Bowl against the Ravens in February 2013 was bittersweet. Desiree and Robert hosted a party that day, and Robert and Anthony each took their "lucky" seats on the couch. When Anthony got up midgame to fetch a drink, someone stole his place, and Anthony swears that's why the 49ers lost the game 34-31. "It was horrible," Anthony says.

On the other hand, both figured there'd be more 49ers Super Bowls to come. Their wish was to eventually fly to San Francisco for a game. Maybe they'd even get to meet the players.

A few months into the 2013 season, something about Anthony was off. At first, he would come home from school every day, close his bedroom door and sleep. Desiree thought it was the grind of seventh-grade homework catching up to him. But on 49ers Sundays, Robert also noticed that Anthony's energy was bottoming out early in the afternoon. Anthony didn't want to go to school sometimes, and Robert ribbed him that he was faking to get out of class.

But next came the headaches and the nausea. One day, Anthony fell at school and vomited. He seemed pale, and his grandmother urged Desiree to take him to a doctor. It was early November, the beginning of the cold and flu season. They figured he had a virus. But to be safe, Anthony's doctor ordered blood work.

A few days later, the doctor called back and left a voicemail in the middle of a 49ers game. "It's not like a doctor to call somebody on a Sunday," Desiree said. "So I knew, like, something was really wrong." The message was to get Anthony to the nearest hospital right away, that his blood cell counts were low. That was disturbing enough. But once they got to St. Bernadine Medical Center, the front nurse asked Desiree, "Does cancer run in your family?"

Her answer was no, but Anthony was still transferred in an ambulance to nearby Loma Linda University Medical Center. After a battery of tests, it was confirmed that he had acute myeloid leukemia, a cancer that requires an aggressive course of chemotherapy. Anthony didn't realize at first what leukemia was. "You mean, it's cancer?" he asked. He wondered if there was a cure, and the hospital staff told him there was every reason to believe he could be cancer-free in six months. "Oh, I'm going to fine then," he said. His goal was to be home for the Super Bowl.

More than ever, Desiree needed Robert to be her rock. By then, they had three children together -- two girls and a boy -- and he had recently asked her to marry him. They set a date: July 5, 2014. Here she was, just 29 years old, with five children under the age of 14. They also had six pit bulls -- three puppies, three grown. So Robert did what he could. He would work his job as a tire technician, help with the kids, feed the dogs, visit Anthony and get back to work.

He got run down, and perhaps that is why he fell ill. No one knows exactly how these things happen. But the more wiped out he got, the more stubborn he was about not seeing a doctor. Compared to what Anthony was going through, he thought a little headache was nothing. Eventually, his fever grew too persistent and too high to ignore. He was having trouble breathing, and in January 2014, Desiree ordered him to the hospital.

He was evaluated for his flu-like symptoms, then sent home with medication. But overnight, his condition worsened. She drove him back to the ER, and he was diagnosed definitively with the potentially deadly H1N1 flu.

Desiree was a wreck. Her son and husband were at separate hospitals, and she was frightened of visiting Anthony and contaminating him with the germs from the ICU, where she had visited Robert. So she sent her mother, Josephine, to stay with her son and hung closely by Robert's bedside. When Anthony asked where his mom was, Josephine told him she was taking care of an ill Robert. Josephine didn't want to say much more -- for fear of how Anthony would react -- and put Anthony on the phone with his mom. That's when she told Anthony that Robert was terribly sick in the hospital.

"I was like, 'Man, I can't do this,'" Anthony remembers. "I was just so sad. I just wanted to hurry up and get out of here. ... I wanted to open the window and climb out. ... I just felt like I had to go see him. Because, like, he was always there for me. ... When I first heard about it, I was like, 'Why, why does it have to be him? Just put me through the pain he's going through. Just make my pain twice as bad, like, not him.'"

During all of this mayhem, the 49ers were in the midst of another Super Bowl run, minus Robert and Anthony. They were each in their hospital beds when San Francisco fell to Seattle in the NFC title game 23-17, although Robert was not lucid enough to watch. By then, doctors were urging him to be placed on a respirator, something he refused to do over and over.

"Robert didn't want to be put to sleep with the breathing machine," Desiree says. "He didn't want to. And then finally he was like, 'You just do what you gotta do to make me feel better.' So they sent him up to ICU and they put him to sleep. That's the last time I ..."

In February 2014, almost exactly a year after the 49ers-Ravens Super Bowl, Robert Robert died. An inconsolable Anthony was released from the hospital to attend the funeral, and upon return, his blood work came back pristine. He was cancer-free.

"When I found out I beat it, I was like, 'Whoa, for really?'" Anthony says. "They're like, 'You beat it two months early. I was like, 'Oh my God.' I was like, 'I knew I could beat it. I told you guys. You didn't believe me.'"

That was a day that the entire family could not stop thinking about Robert. They were convinced it was Robert who cured Anthony, Robert who had rescued young Anthony one more time.

"It was just wonderful," Desiree says. "Like a lot of my friends -- they feel like Robert lost his life so Anthony could gain his."

Somehow, some way, Anthony wished he could repay him.

The doctors, just to ensure the cancer wouldn't return, ordered an extra course of chemotherapy. It meant more time in the hospital, and it also meant a visit from Make-A-Wish.

Anthony being Anthony, he joked around with the foundation's officials at first. He asked if they would buy his family a house and was told, "We don't buy cars, we don't buy houses and we don't give large amounts of money." Then, without batting an eye, he told them he had a better idea, anyway.

"My wish is to meet the 49ers," he said. "For Robert."

This is ESPN's 10th year of My Wish, a partnership with Make a Wish, granting sports wishes to kids with life-threatening conditions.

But he would not learn that his wish had been granted until his eighth-grade graduation day, where a video was played in front of the entire school. Niners tackle Joe Staley -- backed up by several teammates -- announced in the video that the team was inviting Anthony to be a 49er-for-a-day.

The middle school principal asked Anthony if he would accept, to which the 14-year-old replied: "Heck yeah!"

The student body chanted, "Anthony ... Anthony ... Anthony." A few days later, he and his family were off to the Bay Area for the 49ers' June minicamp. Anthony had never been on an airplane and had never stayed in a hotel. But he packed up Robert's favorite Michael Crabtree jersey, hoping the entire team would autograph it -- even though Crabtree was no longer a 49er.

The day began with a limo ride to the 49ers practice facility adjacent to Levi's Stadium. He ate breakfast with Reggie Bush, Torrey Smith and head coach Jim Tomsula. He was then directed toward the locker room, and out walked his favorite player, Kaepernick.

"Hey Kaepernick, what's up?" Anthony said, eyes wide, wide, wide open. "Me and you gotta play catch."

Anthony had his iPad with him -- although the screen was cracked -- so he could snap a photo of whomever and whatever came his way. His locker was set up in between offensive linemen Alex Boone and Joe Looney, and after dropping his backpack in his cubicle, he was invited to the equipment room. He was fitted with a helmet, shoulder pads, cleats and gloves. After trying it all on, he flashed a Heisman pose.

From there, he was ushered to the office of general manager Trent Baalke, who asked him to sign his one-day contract. He puffed out his chest and asked Baalke for $3 million, although Baalke told him the contract was for $3 -- take it or leave it. "Three dollars is close enough," Anthony said

When he then bumped into 49ers owner Jed York, he asked for a Lamborghini.

When he addressed the players in the team meeting, he was dead serious about that 2014 loss to Oakland, saying he took abuse the next day from all the Raiders fans in school.

When he was asked by 49ers employees to sign autographs, he signed every one of them "A" -- short for Anthony.

When he ended his day playing catch all by himself with tight end Vernon Davis, he told Davis, "Sign my forehead."

It all was over-the-top, but Anthony thinks it was exactly what Robert would have wanted him to do. Robert wouldn't have been shy around 49ers players, coaches and executives. Robert would have treated them like buddies, would have told them what was on his mind, would have wanted to be one of the Niners himself.

As the afternoon was winding down and after tight end Vernon Davis and Anthony had played catch at Levi's Stadium for nearly a half-hour, Davis told Anthony he was headed back to the locker room. Anthony followed him.

"Hey Anthony, you're not coming with me!" Davis told him facetiously. "I'm not signing anything else!"

But, still, Anthony followed him.

"You're signing this," Anthony said, pointing to Robert's lucky Michael Crabtree jersey.

Davis took one look at the jersey. It sat on a table, already autographed by every 49er but him. The tight end signed it, and a beaming Anthony folded it up and brought it back with him to San Bernardino.

My Wish had morphed into Robert's Wish, and Anthony had it all planned out. He would have the jersey framed, and he would make sure it hung over the couch -- for every football Sunday.

49ers in Haiti

By Tyler Emerick
49ers.com
July 16, 2015

A Haitian boy sits cross-legged on a Port-au-Prince sidewalk sipping water out of a tiny plastic bag.

His feet are bare, his shirt is tattered and dirt smudges his skin, from his forehead to his ankles.

Stopped at an intersection a few feet away is a van full of NFL players and their wives and girlfriends. The American travelers peer out of the backseat window and make eye contact with the stone-faced boy.

As the passengers begin to wave, the boy lifts his arm to block his eyes from the sunlight. He looks both ways, then back at the van before revealing a soft, warm smile. He gestures back at the visitors for a few more moments before the van accelerates out of view.

The story of the San Francisco 49ers contingent driving along this empty street in this forgotten country began with the word of a pastor, the action of another and – in between – the inspiration of a few football players.

Late in the 2014 season, the 49ers invited Bay Area native and world-renowned preacher Francis Chan to speak to their players at the team's facility in Santa Clara. Second-year tight end Vance McDonald felt particularly moved by Chan's charitable work in Africa, so he enlisted two of his best friends, tight ends Garrett Celek and Derek Carrier, to take similar action.

The trio approached team pastor Earl Smith with their offseason objective: Travel to a foreign country and make an impact.

Pastor Earl, an 18-year veteran in the organization, took the reins from there, eliciting support from the team's front office to make the trip possible.

Haiti was one of the first countries discussed. Nobody knew much about the nation – the poorest in the western hemisphere – but they all knew what occurred in January 2010.

Undeveloped and unprepared, Haiti was hit by a catastrophic magnitude 7.0 earthquake just a few miles off of the coast of its capital and most populous city, Port-au-Prince. More than three million people were affected by the earthquake, and although the exact number is not known, an estimated 230,000-to-316,000 people lost their lives.

In a third-world country with many complex sociological and economic problems, the devastation exacerbated Haiti's existing wounds. Global aid has helped the country in the five years since the earthquake – but only marginally. According to The World Food Programme, two out of every three Haitians live on less than two dollars per day.

When the 49ers chose Haiti, a partnership was formed with Convoy of Hope, a U.S.-based organization that feeds children in 11 countries and responds to disasters around the world.

Convoy of Hope organized a three-day itinerary for the 49ers players to learn about the issues facing Haiti, work on the front lines of the recovery effort and spend time with local children affected by the earthquake.

Arrangements were made for the traveling party – comprising the three tight ends, defensive lineman Tank Carradine, Pastor Earl, staffers from Convoy of Hope, the players' significant others, a videographer and a reporter – me. We met in Miami in early April and flew to Haiti from there.

What occurred over that spring weekend left those involved not with a sense of guilt, but with a sense of responsibility.

“We went there thinking we were going to be the ones helping them,” McDonald said. “But they helped us way more than they’ll ever understand.”

Day 1: 'Convoy Moving out'

9 a.m. EDT, Port-au-Prince International Airport: The first step off the American Airlines jet is like stepping through a portal. It’s almost as if there’s an invisible wall leading from the airplane cabin into the main terminal of the airport.

Sure, I can see a striking contrast in infrastructure between Haiti and the neighboring Dominican Republic during our descent, but until my feet hit the concrete, I don’t really know what to expect.

The heat and humidity hits me first. A dusty, ineffective swamp cooler welcomes passengers into a tapered hallway.

Kimarie Paige, the director of special events for Convoy of Hope, tells us that chickens freely roamed the terminal just a few years back.

Paige, a veteran of these trips whose Staten Island accent is simultaneously commanding and comforting, ushers the group through various security checkpoints with three words that become our marching orders over the next few days, “Convoy moving out!”

At baggage claim, Carradine is an instant attraction. The 6-foot-4, 273-pound pass-rusher draws several curious glances before a brave bystander approaches him. The Haitian man cranes his neck up to meet eye-level and begins speaking in Creole French, his country’s official language.

Carradine, who has three half-brothers of Haitian decent, removes his Beats by Dre headphones, flashes an uncomfortable smile and politely tells the man he only speaks English. He then turns to the group and says, “Man, I think I’m some kind of celebrity here.”

Carradine was a late addition to the traveling party. When Pastor Earl first announced the trip to the 30 players in his 49ers chapel, many expressed interest but only Carradine ultimately joined the three tight ends.

He stuck with his commitment even after friend and fellow defensive lineman Quinton Dial withdrew from the trip due to the birth of his first child.

“I texted and called Pastor Earl and let him know that I still really wanted to go,” Carradine said later. “This was something I just needed to do.”

After we collect our luggage, we link up with the rest of the Convoy of Hope staff accompanying us on the journey. The crew includes field teams director Matt Wilkie, vice president of philanthropy Dan Clark, and Rocky Lewis-Martin, a Haiti native and the head of our security detail.

As we near the doors to the parking lot, a Haitian woman in a long floral dress notices the players and speeds up her walk to cut them off at the exit. “What are you guys doing here?” she asks them. “Are you some famous football or basketball players?”

“No, Ma’am,” McDonald replies, “We’re just here to work.”

2:30 p.m., Turpin, Haiti: After lunch and a bumpy drive through the chaotic streets of Port-au-Prince, we arrive at a small community called Turpin tucked away in the Cul-de-Sac Plain mountain range surrounding the country’s capital city.

Here, boys and girls ride donkeys for transportation, carry heavy bags of grain and produce atop their heads and bathe in water runoff caught in small ravines.

The players and their significant others emerge from our vehicle caravan and circle around Wilkie, a former Christian radio station host whose broadcast experience is evident even without a microphone. Wilkie tells us that the small town was one of the first communities to embrace Convoy of Hope's agriculture initiative, which teaches local farmers techniques that not only increase yields but promote sustainability.

The program has trained more than 3,600 farmers, all of whom are required to give 10 percent of their harvest to Convoy of Hope's children's feeding initiative. Since 2013, roughly three million meals have been locally grown and purchased in Haiti.

"Our plan is unique because it includes a built-in exit strategy," Clark, a Midwestern father who brought along his teenage daughter, Megan, to learn about Haiti's plight, said later. "We're happy to be feeding these kids, but we don't want to be feeding their children's children."

"In fact, if that happens, we've failed. One day, we want Convoy of Hope to work itself out of a job."

The players follow along as the Convoy of Hope staff details the area's transformation, pointing to renovations at the church and its adjacent school as examples of progress. Many parents allow their children to be educated here solely because their kids will be fed at least once during the day. Otherwise, they'd stay at home and work.

The tour continues. The group walks on a narrow path surrounded by lush fields of sugarcane. Pastor Earl, a graying 59-year-old whose soulful eyes pierce even the toughest exteriors, helps each person cross a puddle on a steep incline before taking the elongated step himself. The hike stops under the shade of massive mango tree, and we learn about how farmers grow crops without the use of expensive and harmful pesticides.

"Did you know one caterpillar can kill three stocks of corn?" one Haitian guide asks us.

To combat the infestation, Convoy of Hope instructs farmers to cook spicy peppers in water, and then spray the concoction onto the leaves. The alternative, which Carradine seemed to prefer, is crushing the bugs between your fingers.

"What are we waiting for?" Carradine asks the group. "Let's go squeeze some caterpillars."

Paige leans over and whispers to me, "I love his heart."

Back at the church entrance, we meet the local pastor who tells the group that he has brought several orphan children into his home. He thanks Convoy of Hope for its aid work before emphasizing the need for additional support.

"How many more kids are there to help?" Carradine asks.

Eyes widen and lock onto the middle-aged Haitian man as the players wait for an answer. He tells the group that resources are stretched far too thin to reach every child in the area. Ambassadors are needed to champion the cause.

"More than what you do and see," Wilkie says, "it's about what you set in motion."

The group huddles in prayer with the pastor, returns to the vans and drives back into the city to rest for the night.

Day 2: 'An Inspiration to Us'

9:00 a.m., Mission of Hope warehouse: It's a picturesque day in Titanyen (pronounced Ti-ta-yen by the locals). It's the type of day tourists across the island in the Dominican Republic might spend sunbathing on the beach. No clouds are in sight. The temperature is in the mid-80s. And off on the horizon, it's difficult to tell where the sky ends and the ocean begins.

Here, we travel in our eight-seater white vans to a compound on the outskirts of Port-au-Prince fortified by cement walls and armed guards. We are just a few miles away from a mass grave site of earthquake victims.

The sprawling grounds, owned by a non-profit partner of Convoy of Hope, houses and educates orphaned children. Our destination, however, is the site's 35,000-square foot warehouse, which serves as a hub for the imported food that feeds 70,000 Haitian children daily.

As we walk into the building, we again huddle around Wilkie, who tells us that $120 nourishes one child for an entire year. With those funds, truckloads of food leave the facility every morning, destined for five of the 10 provinces in Haiti.

"We keep this warehouse filled," Wilkie says.

The group (minus me, cameraman Nick Burton and the Convoy of Hope staff) is then instructed to put on hair nets and gloves. The learning portion of the trip is complete. The NFL players have new jobs: to help process a shipment of crops.

The fresh hires are positioned down a makeshift assembly line with workers on each side. At one end, Carradine scoops perfectly-portioned servings of uncooked rice from a plastic container and dumps the grain into a packaging funnel.

Further down the line, McDonald does the same with black beans, filling the plastic bag before passing it to the final station. There, Carrier operates a sealing machine to keep the food fresh.

Celek oversees the operation as floor manager, checking for quality control and stepping in whenever someone needs assistance. This isn't Celek's first experience in a warehouse. He studied packaging in college at Michigan State and thought about a career at The Kroger Company if football hadn't panned out.

One bag doesn't quite seal properly and splits open, spilling its contents across the floor. The team stops its work and proceeds to pick up every last morsel before returning to the stations.

When the containers are empty, 76 ready-to-ship bags sit at the end of the assembly line. The packaged food represents 300 meals that will eventually reach the mouths of hungry children.

"We should do something like this back at home and get the whole team involved," Carradine says.

"I can help organize," Pastor Earl replies. "There's no reason we can't do that."

11:00 a.m., Pastor Samuel's: Our next stop is at a school and church located in a recently-reconstructed neighborhood off of one of Port-au-Prince's main arteries. Stray dogs clutter the streets, wet laundry flutters in the wind and homes are not much more than four concrete slabs positioned together.

We're told that the church, simply referred to as Pastor Samuel's, has been rebuilt since the earthquake. It sits just across the street from the partnering school that teaches elementary-aged children.

Inside the antiquated schoolhouse, narrow hallways make for a tight fit as the players move from classroom to classroom. The walls are painted bright blue and green. Small, grated windows provide the only lighting – there is no electricity. And the flooring is not carpet or wood, but concrete.

Students begin swarming the group. They know we are there to serve a hot meal, but for now, the children just want attention – and to be picked up by the larger-than-life Americans.

“Wow, is he really on TV? Can I see a picture of him?” one child asks Lewis-Martin, the head of our security detail, in Haitian.

“Why would they come here and help us?” another asks.

“Because Jesus loves you,” Lewis-Martin replies. “Did you know these football players pray to God just like you do? And they feel your hunger and they know your need. They’re here to help. They’re here to be kids with you and feed you.”

Lunch is cooked inside a wooden shed in the school’s backyard. An elderly woman stirs a large metal cauldron filled with rice, beans and meat. An open fire is the “cafeteria’s” only appliance. The meal is heavy in island spices and smells akin to Jamaican cuisine.

Players take turns filling plastic bins with the food and hauling it back into the school. There, the group serves each child a plate at their desk.

A few of the students hide their initial helpings beneath their seats. Pastor Earl’s wife, Angel, watches one boy walk up from his desk at least four times to ask for more food. Today’s bounty is a rare treat.

“We want to thank you for allowing us to be here,” he says. “You’re an inspiration to us. We will remember you. The love you show to us, we will share with others.”

One young girl, donning a Rastafarian hat and dress, asks Lewis-Martin to translate a message of her own to the players.

“Thank you for all you’re doing for our school,” she says in her native tongue. “You left your country for us. Thank you not only for coming, but for serving.”

12:00 p.m.: In the grass lot behind the church, we hand out 49ers T-shirts. The white tees hang loosely off the children’s lean frames.

“How many of you have ever seen an American football?” Wilkie asks.

Only a few kids raise their hands.

Carradine chases after a few kids running with a ball, McDonald and Celek play keep-away with another group and Celek lifts several children onto “monkey bars” – a metal cross post that typically is used as a soccer goal.

Many kids have no shoes, but that doesn’t stop them from kicking the ball around barefoot. One boy attempts to dribble it the length of the field. Frustrated by the foreign shape’s bounce, he picks it up and fires a spiral to McDonald.

Once the children leave for the afternoon, the 49ers swap footballs for shovels and pickaxes. In the same lot behind the church, a construction crew is digging out a basketball court. The players join the Haitian workmen while Burton and I document their lighthearted conversations.

“The goal is to finish this today so I can dunk on Derrek,” Carradine says.

“We all know that’s not possible,” Carrier responds. “You can maybe put a telephone book under Tank’s ups. Maybe.”

Inside the church, we meet up with the players’ better halves, who are teaching conversational English to a youth group. A teenager walks in unannounced and sits off to the side. He raises his hand a few times, knowing more English than most of the other kids in the class.

It’s then that we notice he’s wearing a green 49ers hat.

The boy has no idea. Lewis-Martin points to the players sitting in the adjacent pews, and then points to the logo on the kid’s hat.

“Ohhhh,” the teenager says.

The boy says later that he had never heard of the 49ers. He showed up on a whim only after friends told him that American travelers would be hosting an English class. And as he readied to leave home, he simply grabbed his favorite cap.

The players shook the boy’s hand and took turns autographing the bill of the hat.

The twist of fate nearly had Paige, the New York-born special events director, in tears. She never took her eyes off of the boy’s beaming face as he mingled with stars from his new favorite team.

Day 3: 'So Much for So Little'

2:00 p.m., Foyer des orphelins d’haiti: The final stop on our trip takes us to the place we know the least about. We arrive at the gates of the Port-au-Prince orphanage, again constructed entirely of concrete, and our vans’ rumbling engines are the only breaks from the silence.

Outside, Wilkie tells us that close to 75 children live here. The building, no bigger than an average Walgreens, looks far too cramped to house that many kids – especially when we learn that the orphanage is also a school.

We meet Madame Jeannette, the owner. A lawyer by trade, she was kidnapped by Port-au-Prince teenagers a few years back. During her captivity, she found out that her abductors were orphans and needed the ransom money to buy food. When she was released, she left her job and started taking in wayward children.

“It brings me great joy to see you,” she tells the group. “Please come in and make yourself at home.”

A corridor divides the orphanage into two parts. On the left are classrooms similar to the ones we saw a day earlier. On the right are the living quarters, where 10-by-10-foot rooms are filled to capacity with bunk beds. The smell of urine-soaked sheets is overwhelming. Many of the beds are shared.

“This is crazy,” Celek whispers to McDonald.

Carradine peaks his head into one of the rooms and sees curious eyes gazing back at him.

“What you see with the kids, it’s hurtful,” Carradine said later. “Seeing them live like that, it hit me hard.”

The players expect the kids to be dejected and distant but are instead welcomed with smiles and raised arms. At one point, McDonald has one kid on his shoulders, one on each arm and one hanging from each leg.

But as the kids lose steam, the commotion from the initial excitement dwindles into comfort.

Pastor Earl takes the reigns of a kite. Nearby children laugh as his string gets tangled with another.

Celek takes out his Apple iPhone 6 and turns on “Guardians of the Galaxy.” At least a dozen kids surround him, huddling close together to get a better view.

McDonald collects Dum-Dum lollipop wrappers, walks up to an overhanging balcony and pelts his teammates with the wadded-up paper.

Carradine approaches a few of the older residents and challenges them to dominoes. The teenagers are much more reserved than the younger kids, but Carradine waits his turn and earns a seat at the table. The third-year pass-rusher talks a big game but loses every time. The children use an interpreter to gloat.

Near the end of our visit, they line up single-file by age. Pastor Earl addresses them.

“Our hearts are blessed to be with you,” he says. “We hope you’ve enjoyed us as we’ve enjoyed you. We care about you, and we will tell everyone about you.”

The players begin handing out presents: crayons, pencils, puzzles, Nerf footballs and more. The parting gifts aren’t much, but the kids clutch them like lottery tickets.

The sun sets, and we load into the vans. Several children hurry to the orphanage’s roof to watch us depart. One lingers a little while longer than the rest, waving until our caravan is finally out of sight.

7:00 p.m., Hotel Montana: We drive up switchbacks to a resort atop a hillside overlooking the capital. During the car ride, I read on our itinerary that we are having a “celebration dinner.” But our last meal in Haiti is actually about reflection.

We eat our food, enjoy conversation and share a laugh as Celek recalls a moment during the trip when a local mistook him for Tim Tebow.

Soon after, we spot a celebrity sitting nearby that we know is no doppelgänger. Wilkie met the bearded man earlier in the evening, and boldly invites him over to our table. It’s Rainn Wilson of “The Office.” And although he’s wearing a Seattle Seahawks hat, the actor turns one player into a star-struck mess.

Wilson turns his head and deadpans, “OK, stalker.”

The players tell Wilson about their first trip to Haiti. This, however, is far from the actor’s first visit. He started an educational initiative called Lidè with his wife in 2013 to empower at-risk adolescent girls through creative arts.

“You can do so much for so little,” Wilson says. “You can change someone’s life for $450. What can you get in the United States? I love the United States, but I’m a world citizen, and I love this country too. So I’m glad you guys could come down. It’s awesome.”

When Wilson returns to his family and our dinner comes to an end, Clark stands up from his chair and addresses the group. He wants to every person around the table to talk about what they took away from the trip.

Carradine, the 26-year-old on his first relief trips overseas, catches us off-guard.

“Sometimes you need to see something to know it’s true,” he says. “And what I’ve seen is incredible. But once you’ve seen it, what are you going to do about it? Are you going to talk to your friends? Are you actually going to do something about it? How are you going to make an impact? Ask yourself what you can do to help.”

Tears stream down several faces as the spotlight moves around the table. McDonald talks about the fleeting nature of football careers and their accompanying pedestals. Pastor Earl tells the group that he and his wife have already discussed a monthly donation for the children of Haiti.

“We’re going to have a Convoy of Hope team,” Pastor Earl says. “I think four people, plus four people, plus four people, can have a big impact. The big thing isn’t what you’ve done. It’s what you’re going to do.”

The group sets a goal of raising $120,000 to feed 1,000 Haitian kids. Everyone has an idea to reach that mark, and they usually start with outreach. Next year’s trip will have more than four players, this much is certain. The next chapters, however, are still being written.

Family comes first for 49ers coach and West Homestead native Tomsula

By Chris Adamski
Pittsburgh Tribune-Review
September 20, 2015

This time, when Little Jimmy from West Homestead comes home, he won't be coming home.

Jim Tomsula's trip to his beloved Pittsburgh this weekend isn't just to see his beloved ones. He won't be crashing at the same brick ranch house he grew up at in Calhoun Manor, the same place his parents still live and the same place that up to about a dozen family members regularly gather each Sunday to watch San Francisco 49ers games.

"This isn't a family trip," Tomsula, the 49ers rookie head coach, said through a Pittsburgh accent that hasn't deserted him despite living away from Western Pennsylvania for virtually all of the past 30 years.

Of course, Tomsula's family and friends won't congregate at the home of Jim Sr. and Betty Jo Tomsula on Sunday as they routinely have for the past eight years, either. That's because they'll be at Heinz Field to watch Tomsula lead the 49ers against the Steelers.

"We're all so very excited," said Tomsula's mother, a breast cancer survivor who has beaten the disease five times. "And we're very proud of him. He's a very good young man. Very good.

"He's our Jimmy. That's what I always say, 'Little Jimmy from West Homestead.' Lil' Jimmy Tomsula."

At 5-foot-10, Tomsula is little only by defensive end standards — certainly not little by measure of personality or heart. After taking part in a football instruction clinic for athletes with Down syndrome in Northern California early in his tenure as a 49ers assistant about seven years ago, Tomsula immediately knew he wanted to bring the multiday Football Camp for the Stars to his hometown.

So he invited close childhood friend Bill Cherpak; their former high school coach, George Novak; and his uncle, Robert "Tic" Cloherty, to take part in a camp so they could help run one in Pittsburgh.

"You walk around with him, and everybody from the owner and the president of the team to all the coaches and people who worked in office, secretaries, chefs at the dining hall, all the waiters — every one of them he knew them all by name, and they knew him," said Novak, who has won five of his six WPIAL championships at Woodland Hills but won his first at Tomsula's alma mater, Steel Valley.

Tomsula's popularity among so many within the organization — particularly the players, who had come to know him well since he became defensive line coach in 2007 — helped him get the head coaching job after Jim Harbaugh and the team parted ways after last season.

"If he was here and there were people he didn't know, he'd walk up to them and (say), 'Hi, my name is Jim,'" said Cherpak, who has won four WPIAL titles as a coach. "Being a coach is not who he is. That's his job, but that's not who he is. That hasn't changed anything about him."

The Tomsula family, which includes a brother and sister along with Jim, plus three aunts (and their eventual husbands and children), is a football family. Tomsula's sister, Jill Conway, has a son, Jackson, who is a freshman on Cherpak's Thomas Jefferson team. Her daughter cheers for the junior high teams.

"It's all about football in our family," Jill Conway said with laugh. "Of course it is."

Not quite all the time, though. Conway said her brother calls regularly just to chat about family.

“Work your tail off. Take care of your family,” Tomsula said. “That’s my family. That’s what they do.”

Tomsula is an unabashed proud Pittsburgher. During a meet-and-greet style interview session at the owner’s meetings last spring, he lit up when he detected a Pittsburgh accent and promptly spent the next hour chatting with media members from his hometown.

“I can guarantee you,” Cherpak said, “that if it was him and a reporter from the McKeesport Daily News, or like (ESPN’s) Adam Scheffer, you know whom he’s going to first. There’s no question.”

Tomsula’s annual two-week trip home — the one where he has stayed at the house he grew up in, and his kids and his sister’s kids sleep over at each other’s — is planned around the Football Camp for the Stars.

Like everything else for Tomsula, it’s a family affair. Some cook, some welcome the families, some decorate. The children serve as waterboys and cheerleaders. Friends help run it, donating food, equipment and their time.

“We look forward to it every year,” Betty Jo said. “We get so excited. Those children are just wonderful.”

Sunday at Heinz Field, Novak will be as proud to have a former player — Tomsula — on one sideline as an NFL coach as he is to have Steve Meyer on the other. A former receiver at Woodland Hills, Meyer is in his first season as a Steelers coaching assistant after spending two years as a scouting intern.

Meyer met Tomsula through Novak.

“(Tomsula) is an awesome individual,” Meyer said. “He’s someone you kind of always knew about because he is a Pittsburgh guy. He’s hard-working and has that Pittsburgh mentality.”

Both Meyer and Tomsula were shaped by Novak, who said he was brought to tears when he heard from Tomsula the day he was going to help coach the 49ers in the 2013 Super Bowl.

“I was in church, and I got a message from him that said, ‘Coach, I just wanted to thank you for everything,’” Novak said.

“I’m just so proud of him. He doesn’t forget where he came from. Nothing about him is fake. He’s really just an honest and sincere, caring person. And nobody is going to outwork him.

Pittsburgh cradle of coaches grows with 49ers' Jim Tomsula

Jim Tomsula loves the drive through the Fort Pitt Tunnel to Downtown, especially the way the city opens its arms on the other side. "The only city in the world with an entrance," Tomsula says with more than a sprinkle of hometown pride.

And he especially enjoys going home to West Homestead, to his parents' home on Dogwood Drive, to sit in the backyard, drinking a beer and eating pizza, probably from Pizza King in Munhall.

"My mother and father are the world to me," Tomsula said. "My father worked three jobs my whole life. My mother took care of the family. Our mother was diagnosed with breast cancer when she was very young. Five times later, she is still with us. Talk about tough and fighting.

"Those things stick with you. Don't let your pride get in the way of a day's work. Work your tail off. Take care of your family. That's my family. That's what they do. They all just go to work. They have a responsibility, like everybody in that area. That's why we are so proud to be from Pittsburgh."

Coming back to his hometown is nothing rare for Tomsula, a Mon Valley kid through and through. He does it for a couple of weeks every summer with his wife and three kids, embracing the steps he took as a youth that ultimately led him to where he is today as the rookie head coach of the San Francisco 49ers.

Tomsula, 46, went to St. Therese Grade School in Munhall, spent two years at Central Catholic High School because Father Joseph Nee said he needed a little discipline, then transferred to Steel Valley, where he played football for George Novak and learned a lot of what he knows about coaching.

Today, though, when he is on the sideline at Heinz Field, approximately seven miles from where he grew up, none of that will matter to Tomsula, the grandson of a Hungarian immigrant.

"This isn't a family trip," Tomsula said. "We got a game to play."

Tomsula might seem out of the place in San Francisco, which is as much like Homestead as the Golden Gate bridge is to Hi-Level Bridge. His Pittsburgh accent, unmistakable to this day, draws quizzical looks in the Bay Area. But, so far, he is undefeated as head coach of the 49ers, bearing a 2-0 record that includes his one-game stint as an interim coach in 2010 when Mike Singletary was fired.

And he is focused on facing the team he worshipped when he was a kid in the Mon Valley.

"Yeah, I am from there, I love it there, but I am not making that kind of connection on this," Tomsula said. "This is a football game. We have to go. I am going to try to make sure I don't let myself go there. I am not there now. There's no social activities scheduled."

Join the club

Tomsula is the latest Western Pennsylvania native to become a head coach in the NFL, joining a list as long as it is impressive.

He joins two other current coaches who are from the area — Mike McCarthy of the Green Bay Packers, who grew up in Greenfield, not far from Tomsula, and went to Bishop Boyle High School; and Marvin Lewis of the Cincinnati Bengals, who grew up in McDonald and went to Fort Cherry High School.

Tomsula's brother-in-law went to high school with McCarthy, who is in his 10th season with the Packers. Lewis, the second-longest tenured coach in the NFL, and McCarthy worked on the same Pitt staff under Paul Hackett.

“There are two types of people — people who are from Western Pennsylvania and people who wish they were from Western Pennsylvania,” McCarthy said.

They are just the latest wave. Before them, the list includes Bill Cowher (Crafton), Mike Ditka (Aliquippa), Marty Schottenheimer (McDonald), Jim Haslett (Ben Avon), Dave Wannstedt (Baldwin) and Todd Haley (Upper St. Clair). They were all NFL head coaches in the 1990s and 2000s.

At one point, Western Pennsylvania products made up nearly 16 percent of the head coaches in the NFL. In 2006, five from that list — Cowher, McCarthy, Schottenheimer, Lewis and Haslett — were running NFL teams.

In 2003, Lewis and Schottenheimer had a rare meeting when the Bengals played the San Diego Chargers — two head coaches from the same high school. It is believed to be the first time in NFL history that has happened. Lewis and Schottenheimer went to Fort Cherry. When Schottenheimer was young, his babysitter was Lewis' aunt.

But that's not all. Go back further and the list grows some more: Joe Walton (Beaver Falls), Joe Bugel (Munhall), Chuck Knox (Sewickley) and Ted Marchibroda (Franklin) were NFL head coaches. So was Mike Nixon (Masontown), who coached the Steelers and Washington Redskins in the 1960s.

It used to be that Western Pennsylvania was known as the cradle of quarterbacks. Now the area has become a cradle of coaches.

“They were talking about all the quarterbacks from Western Pennsylvania one time and they asked Joe Montana what's with all the great quarterbacks,” Wannstedt said. “Joe said, ‘I don't think it's the water, it's the Iron City beer.’ So that's my statement and I'm standing by it.”

Wannstedt coached two NFL teams — he compiled an 82-86 regular-season record with the Chicago Bears and Miami Dolphins — before becoming the head coach at Pitt, his alma mater. Like so many of the other coaches, he came from a working-class family — his dad was employed at J&L Steel — and learned the importance of work ethic and commitment.

“We all kind of came up with the mentality that nothing was for nothing,” said Wannstedt, who graduated from Baldwin High School in 1970 and was the head coach at Pitt from 2005-2010. “You had to earn everything. If it was tough times, you had to work your way for it.”

“My dad worked in the J&L steel mill. My way out of the steel mills was going to be in athletics. If I was going to college, it was going to be through football.”

Cowher, McCarthy and Ditka are the only coaches from Western Pennsylvania to win a Super Bowl. Tomsula's 49ers have won five of them — one fewer than the Steelers — but they were all before he first joined the franchise as a defensive line coach in 2007.

“When someone grew up here, you just kind of know the environment they grew up with,” said Cowher, who won his only Super Bowl in 15 years with the Steelers in 2005. “We all had the same environment, the same work ethic, the same values, and they're very strong values. They kind of permeated in us and led us on our paths. It all started back here and how you were brought up.”

They all came from working class families. Tomsula's dad taught at Boyle High School among his several jobs. McCarthy's dad, Joe, owned a bar in Greenfield. Cowher's dad was an insurance auditor.

"We all know there's a little bit of a pulse here in Western Pennsylvania," said Cowher, who went to Carlynton High School. "Football is very important, it's important to the communities. You see football around the country, but in western Pennsylvania it kind of represents your area.

"Those suburban cities are identified through its football teams. You're kind of brought up that way. You represent more than your team, you represent your community. It's bred in you early."

Big break

That's what happened with Tomsula.

Too small to play offensive line at a Division I-A college after high school, he accepted a scholarship to Middle Tennessee State and later transferred to Division II Catawba College in North Carolina.

He began his coaching career as a high-school assistant under Novak at Woodland Hills, then coached in volunteer positions at Catawba and Charleston Southern, all the while working odd jobs at night to make extra money to support his family.

Tomsula finally got a break when Lionel Taylor, a former NFL player who worked as an assistant coach with the Steelers in the 1970s, hired him to coach in NFL Europe. He spent nine years coaching in Europe, eventually rising to defensive coordinator and finally head coach of the Rhein Fire in 2006.

One year later, he was in the NFL as a defensive line coach with the 49ers. Eight years later, he is returning home to the city he loves, where his mom and dad and sister Jill still live, as their head coach.

"It's good people, tough-nosed people," Tomsula said of Western Pennsylvania. "If they have a problem with you, they are going to let you know. Other than that, they are going to be good people and help you out. They aren't going to play around with a lot of B.S. You do things because they are the right thing to do. That's what I get from my family. My family is straight Pittsburgh."

So is Tomsula.

The Big Interview: Jim Tomsula

By Neil Reynolds
NFLUK.com
September 8, 2015

After driving six hours through the night for an early morning meeting with Jim Tomsula in August, I'm in dire need of a caffeine boost as I enter the office of the 19th head coach in the history of the San Francisco 49ers.

Following the obligatory rib-busting hug that he has been dishing out since we first met on an England Monarchs practice field in 1998, Tomsula cuts straight to the chase and offers me some "fancy s*" coffee from a machine in his office, while he goes in search of his preferred "rocket fuel" that sits off to one side in a well-used pot.

And there, in a nutshell, is the essence of a man who has been much talked about during this past off-season. There are no airs and graces when it comes to Jim Tomsula. There is no façade or false front – what you see is very much what you get from the man charged with holding the 49ers together following the franchise's high-profile parting of ways with Jim Harbaugh.

Tomsula is an excellent teacher and a great motivator of players. It is rare to find a Tomsula-coached player who would not run through a wall for him. But he has, largely, operated in the NFL shadows. A bit of grunt work is perfectly fine with this former defensive tackle – he is at home among the expletives, blood, sweat and tears that frequent the world of the defensive lineman.

With that in mind, it should not have been that surprising to see the former defensive line coach struggle through his first few media duties after being named the new leader of the 49ers on January 14, 2015. Thrust into the spotlight, Tomsula had some new challenges to tackle.

"The biggest thing I've needed help on is dealing with the media," Tomsula admits. "I'm not an eloquent speaker. If it comes into my mind, it comes out of my mouth. And I'm fine with telling you, 'I don't like you' or 'I don't like your shirt.'"

"Now I understand that if I stand up in front of a microphone and say that, I've just spilled a whole lot of stuff on a whole lot of people. So there is a responsibility that goes with being a head coach. I don't read the newspaper and I don't turn on the TV because I stay in my little football la-la land. But I have to get better at that."

Tomsula learned very quickly that there is a lot of attention on an NFL head coach. Sitting with us in his office as we chat about life in the NFL is 49ers Vice-President of Communications Bob Lange. One of the very best in the business, Lange has offered plenty of tips to Tomsula but also understands that while his new head coach may become more polished in the coming months, his true personality and approach will not change all that much because of a job title.

"Bob comes in every morning and tells me what I need to know," Tomsula reveals. "I've never been an internet guy and I'm not a newspaper guy. And he came in the first couple of weeks and months I was here and his face would be down. Then he would laugh and say, 'You really don't know? You're getting crushed!'"

"I said, 'Well, my wife was happy with me and the six friends I have were happy with me. My family's good, my friends are good and I'm watching how hard my players are working. I'm not worried about all that stuff.'"

When you consider Tomsula's long and globe-trotting route to the NFL, it's little wonder he refuses to let some media criticism get him down. The 47-year-old has coached in America, England, Scotland and

Germany and there have been plenty of sacrifices made along the way. He has gone from working in relatively small schools in the United States to holding one of the 32 most coveted coaching jobs in the world.

“Nothing I have done in my coaching life has been traditional,” Tomsula laughs. “It’s not a clean path like going to college and then taking the next job and so on. That’s not happened – it’s all non-traditional.”

Tomsula’s coaching journey has been well documented, if not a little over-hyped, in his opinion. After playing as an unheralded defensive lineman at Middle Tennessee State and then Catawba College in North Carolina until 1988, Tomsula took a graduate assistant job at his alma mater for the 1989 season.

In 1990, he spent a year coaching defensive line at Woodland Hills High School in Pennsylvania but then moved away from the gridiron, opting instead to take a six-figure job selling medical equipment for a company called Thera-Kinetics.

But he wasn’t happy.

The coaching bug never stopped nipping away at Tomsula and in 1992 he eventually relented and took an assistant’s job at Charleston Southern for a mere $9,100 per year, supplementing his salary by working as a janitor, a newspaper delivery man and a wood-cutter.

After another two years out football during which time he worked as a sales rep for Cisco Foods, Tomsula dived fully into coaching as an unpaid volunteer assistant at Catawba College during the 1997 season. It was a time that required great sacrifice from Tomsula and his family.

Tomsula refers to that season as “the homeless period.” He packed his wife, Julie, and their young daughters, Britney and Brooke, off to family in Florida and then lived out of the back of an old red Cadillac that had been given to him by an uncle.

Tomsula would coach during the day and return to his car at night to sleep, with only his black Labrador dog and his cat – complete with litter box in the car – for company. He would hang his suits on a rail in the back of the Cadillac, slept in car parks and showered in the school’s locker rooms.

But he refuses to believe it was a tough time, even to this day.

“Some people live in their car because they have to,” Tomsula stresses. “I did not and that is the point I like to make. That was a choice we made. That is a big difference. There are some people who have terrible times and deal with terrible hardships. I did not.

“People try to take those who are going through terrible things and put me in that category. That’s not where we were.”

Tomsula worked his way back onto the pay roll in 1998 and called his family back from Florida. They lived in a modest house without heating but they did have a phone and when he received a call from England Monarchs head coach Lionel Taylor, his European adventure was about to begin.

For the next nine seasons, the always-energetic Tomsula would work his springs in Europe and his college football campaigns at Catawba College. He started out with the Monarchs in 1998, served as defensive line coach for the Scottish Claymores from 1999-2003, defensive coordinator of the Berlin Thunder in 2004-2005 and as head coach of the Rhein Fire in 2006 before the 49ers and the NFL came calling in 2007.

Every step of the way, Tomsula’s reputation as a teacher grew and he became a favourite – with his players, the fans and the media in each of those markets. He always gave his time freely and made everyone who met him feel important and special.

“Football is 100 per cent about people,” Tomsula states. “Why did you get in it? Why did I get in it? Because this game – if you let it – teaches you so much about life. It affects your life. It teaches you all those wonderful things that people like to talk about... teamwork, doing something bigger than yourself, helping your buddy, giving somebody a hand and picking them up off the ground, fighting through something and having mental toughness.

“All those wonderful bastions in life that you get sappy about, you can get from the game of football. It’s all personal relationships.”

As he built relationships across Europe, Tomsula learned from some wise mentors and constantly filled notebooks with ideas ranging from blitz packages on certain downs to how to run a practice and even an entire football team. While he was teaching his players on the field, Tomsula was learning and growing as a coach.

So how much did NFL Europe help him get to where he is today?

“That was my entire development,” Tomsula insists. “Think about some of the coaches I worked with... Lionel Taylor, Tony Allen, Jim Criner, Rick Lantz, Bob Valesente, Don Lawrence, Ray Willsey. Think about how many hotel lobbies – I don’t want to say bars – I was sitting in with those guys who had been in Super Bowls and had spent their coaching lives in the NFL.

“I would be sitting in a town in Germany or in a pub outside London and they would sit there and teach me football for three or four hours at a time. We were running plays with cups and napkins and salt shakers and pints. We’re moving all these things around on the table and those guys were teaching me football. Everybody was getting developed in that league from the PR intern to the general manager.”

As they travelled around Europe, the entire Tomsula family embraced the experience, which made their sometimes-nomadic lifestyle much easier to handle.

“I had it easy,” Tomsula states. “I was coaching football and I had that group that no matter where I went in the world I instantly had a connection to those people. My wife did not. So my wife had to move to a lot of different places. I thought it was great but she would tell you that she thought it was great, too.”

As someone who worked hard to develop the sport of American football and to help locate and tutor international stars such as Sebastian Vollmer, of the New England Patriots, Tomsula is delighted to see the NFL’s growth and success overseas – but he is not all that surprised.

“We lived it and we can’t expect everybody else to see it through our eyes,” Tomsula suggests. “They can’t fathom it. I’m not blown away by it because I’ve seen it. The British fan base is passionate, it’s there and they want it. They want to grab the NFL and run with it and they want their own.

“Right now, we’re talking London and that city in itself is awesome and the venue is great. But it’s there in all of Europe and those fans want something. I happen to be excited about the fact the NFL is not knee-jerking. I refrain from getting into the business side of things because those people have been doing it every day and I’ve been away from it, but the one thing that excites me is that it’s not a quick decision type of thing. It’s very methodical, it’s thought through and it’s being rooted for the long term and that excites me.”

When I met Tomsula in Santa Clara in August, the start of the regular season was still a few weeks away. But his excitement and enthusiasm for the task at hand was clearly evident, even though the 49ers have been rocked by more than a dozen high profile departures including the likes of Patrick Willis, Justin Smith, Aldon Smith and Chris Borland since last season.

“We’re really excited about the roster we have,” Tomsula insists. “We talk about outside the building and inside the building – I’m only concerned about what’s inside the building. I see the energy levels of the guys who are here and I couldn’t ask for any more.

"I am not a perception guy, I'm a reality guy. When we talk perception, we're worrying for no reason. If we can just handle the reality, we're good. The reality is that we have enough older guys to keep everybody on the tracks and we have enough young guys to bring that energy and to fly around. It's a great mix."

One young player who will be key for the 49ers is fifth-year quarterback Colin Kaepernick. Like Tomsula, Kaepernick made plenty of headlines during the off-season for working out with Kurt Warner in Arizona. The media talk suggested Warner was heavily involved in making Kaepernick more of a pocket passer with greater awareness through the playing of flag football.

Again, keeping it as real as ever, Tomsula cut that relatively big story down to size when he revealed that Kaepernick spends every off-season working on some aspect of his game and his work with Warner has been no different in that regard this time around.

"Colin Kaepernick was not broken," Tomsula stresses. "He was not a guy who was broken and who had to go and get fixed. Every year he works on the things that he and (offensive coordinator) Geep Chryst talk about. He and Geep make a list and then Colin goes and finds somebody to work with because he can't be here doing it because of the Collective Bargaining Agreement and the timings associated with that.

"We were 8-8 last season and Colin Kaepernick was our quarterback. He's going to get way more credit than he deserves when we win and he's going to shoulder all of it when we lose. That's just the way it is. But Colin is very intelligent and he works like crazy – he is one of those guys you have to throw out of the building. He works like crazy with the physical and he works like crazy with the mental."

As we wrap up our time together, I think about some of the great names associated with the 49ers over the years... Joe Montana, Steve Young, Jerry Rice and the great Bill Walsh. And part of me wonders if Tomsula will take time to think about his place in this great franchise's history when he serves as San Francisco's full-time head coach for the first time when they host the Minnesota Vikings on Monday September 14.

I should have known Tomsula would be all business and have little time for such sentiment. He cannot waste a single second thinking about himself when he is adamant his team comes together and fights for each other in Week 1 and every day beyond that during the 2015 season.

"I feel a sense of responsibility and this team is getting everything I've got," Tomsula concludes. "I don't have a confidence problem and I think I enjoy every day. If it's funny we laugh, if we're sad we cry and if we're mad we yell. But we have to make sure we dot every 'I' and we don't go screwing it up.

"I've got to be able to do my job. People are depending on me to do my part and I'm depending on everyone else to do their part. We all just need to do our part. I don't care who comes up with the right answer, so long as we get the right answer. That's a team, isn't it?"

"I'm so fired up because we have good men who are really good at what they do. We're the San Francisco 49ers and we're a collection of people coming together.

"This is not the Jim Tomsula Show."

49ers coach Jim Tomsula: Man of steel

By Matt Barrows

SANTA CLARA -- "Just pop it back in."

Bill Cherpak heard that request perhaps a half-dozen times while playing football at Steel Valley High School a few meandering miles down the Monongahela River from Pittsburgh. The appeal came from his best friend and fellow defensive lineman, Jim Tomsula, whose shoulder had come out of its socket yet again.

Nowadays that type of injury would halt the game. Tears would flow. Trainers and doctors would rush onto the field. The player would see a specialist, and his arm would be in a sling for weeks.

During the early 1980s in steel-forged Homestead, Pa., if your shoulder came out, you merely got the guy next to you to shove it back with the palm of his hand as if he was jamming a loose floorboard back in place.

"If Jimmy's shoulder popped out today, he'd be sitting on the oak for the rest of the game and maybe two or three more," said Tomsula's uncle, Robert Cloherty.

In the working-class neighborhoods where Tomsula grew up, everyone had a nickname. Cherpak was, and still is, "Cherp." Cloherty is called "Uncle Tic."

"My name is Cloherty – C-L-O-H-E-R-T-Y," he said. "And everybody would pronounce the name 'Clock-erty.' Clock. Tick-tock. That's how I got this name."

The population is African American, German, Hungarian, Irish, Italian, Polish, Slovak and every combination in between. It's egalitarian and emphatically without pretense. (For example, while Tomsula and his groomsmen wore tuxedos to his wedding, they didn't wear shoes.)

The unifying force: Homestead Steel Works.

At its peak during World War II, the mill employed 15,000 people who made the armor plate that fortified tanks and battleships. Homestead steel forms the backbone of the Empire State Building, the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge and the Willis Tower, still commonly referred to as the Sears Tower, in Chicago.

The sports teams at Steel Valley High are the Ironmen.

"His parents, my parents all grew up around the mill," Cherpak recalled. "That's what you did. I remember when we were young, we'd go pick up our grandparents at the mill after they worked 4 (p.m.) to 12 (a.m.). Everyone had that work ethic from early on because you saw that all the time. It was instilled in you. It was expected more than anything."

After the war, the mill began a slow decline, and the sprawling facility closed in 1986. But the ethic remained.

It's what impelled Tomsula to mop floors at a Piggly Wiggly supermarket, split wood for $55 a truckload and deliver newspapers to boost his $9,000-a-year income when he was an assistant coach at Charleston (S.C.) Southern in 1992. It kept him going when he was living out of a red Cadillac Deville – given to him by Uncle Tic – when he took a post as an unpaid volunteer coach at Catawba College in Salisbury, N.C., in 1997.

“He’s a worker,” Cherpak said. “It never bothered him, and he never complained. If something needed to get done, he did it.”

The 47-year-old Tomsula, who stands 5-foot-10, has the out-of-central-casting physique of a plumber or a worker eating from a metal lunch pail high atop a steel girder. Knee and hip injuries from his college playing days give him a waddling gait. He keeps the top of his shirts decidedly unbuttoned, showing off a mane of hair and a gold chain. He has an impressive Tom Selleck-like mustache that has inspired not one, but two, parody Twitter accounts.

He got into weightlifting at an early age and used the power he gained to become a standout high school wrestler and interior lineman on both sides of the football.

“Jim Tomsula is a very, very strong person physically,” said Uncle Tic, who recalled that Tomsula, Cherpak and their buddies used to get around town in an orange, 1979 Chevy Chevette with racing stripes. Once, when they encountered a particularly tight parking spot, the guys stepped out of the car, lifted it and walked it into the space.

Tomsula’s coach at Steel Valley High was George Novak, who has coached in the area for 38 years. Twelve of his former players have reached the NFL, and more than 100 have received Division I scholarships.

Novak – ‘Nov’ to those who know him – noted that Tomsula was neither his most talented nor his brightest pupil.

“He clowned around a lot,” he said.

One of his favorite stories involves a playoff game in which Tomsula and Cherpak were given 15-yard penalties because they weren’t wearing the proper pads. Novak had warned them of the infraction many times. He figured they didn’t want to wear their girdle padding because they didn’t want to seem lumpy to the girls watching from the stands.

Cherpak laughed at the coach’s interpretation.

“We didn’t want to wear any pads in our pants because we just didn’t like them,” Cherpak said. “We just pretended like we didn’t know. We felt like we were he-men, (that) we didn’t need them.”

Cherpak went on to play offensive guard at Pitt. He’s now the head coach at Thomas Jefferson High in nearby Jefferson Hills, Pa. He said that if Tomsula had been a few inches taller, he would have been in high demand from all the top schools. Instead, he went to Division I-AA Middle Tennessee State before transferring to Division II Catawba.

Still, he was one of Novak’s favorites because he was tough, tenacious and had strong morals.

“He never backed down from a fight, and he always stood up for the right side,” Novak said. “If someone was being a bully, he wouldn’t stand for it.”

When Tomsula’s college career ended, Novak hired him as an assistant. Tomsula spent only a season there but honed perhaps his greatest coaching gift, his compassion and understanding for his players. Apologies to Vince Lombardi, but winning wasn’t the only thing in the neighborhoods downriver from Pittsburgh.

Early that season, Tomsula grouched about one of the team’s defensive players. He was bad news and a poor fit in the locker room. Get rid of him, he told Novak.

The older coach first calmly dismissed the complaint. But when Tomsula persisted, he called the young assistant into his office and spelled out the situation as forcefully as Tomsula had ever witnessed from his former coach: As long as the player was on the team, he stays in school, Novak said. If we take football away from him, then he drops out and he's back behind the bar on Braddock Avenue selling drugs.

Novak closed with this: "He's going to be here tomorrow. Are you?" Then he turned and walked out the door.

Tomsula said he'll never forget the conversation and the lesson.

"George Novak looked through his decisions – what's going to happen afterward? What's the domino effect? Where do the dominoes fall?" he said. "I think that's why I look at things the way I do. He really gave me the true essence of what sports should be about, the purity of it that makes it awesome. Sadly, in this day and age ... well, we've got to get back to it."

Like Novak, Tomsula has a soft spot for the underdog. Players with odd backgrounds or atypical body types never are dismissed outright. Tomsula says it means you just have to work a little harder to develop them, something he did first at Catawba, then NFL Europe and finally with the 49ers.

The team's roster has been filled with late-round or undrafted defensive linemen, from Ricky Jean Francois to Ian Williams to Tony Jerod-Eddie, all of whom credit Tomsula with their NFL careers.

And it isn't only players who are loyal to him.

Tomsula was universally roasted in January for his introductory news conference in which he seemed to go off on a bizarre tangent in recognizing "Joan in payroll," "Vilma at the front desk" and "the boys downstairs making that great Mexican feast at Christmas."

The delivery may have been awkward, but the sentiment was real.

Cherpak spent time with Tomsula in Santa Clara after his friend became the 49ers' interim coach at the close of the 2010 season. One night, they watched game film for hours in his office before going downstairs to the equipment room.

"The maintenance guys were down there in the pool," Cherpak said. "And Jim's like, 'Oh, these are my guys!' So we went in and talked to all those guys. He turns to me and goes, 'This is where you find the real people.'"

The 49ers went on to beat the Cardinals in the season finale, 38-7. Among the first to greet Tomsula after the game were the same crew from a few days earlier.

"There they were waiting for him to congratulate him," Cherpak said. "And that's just him. Everybody's the same to him. It doesn't matter who you are, if you're on top of the world or struggling. That's who he is."

Tomsula learned to connect with players at tiny Catawba

By Ann Killion
San Francisco Chronicle
August 23, 2015

Catawba College is a small Division II school and, as such, not a place with a lot of amenities. But when Jim Tomsula was on the coaching staff, he made sure his players had a training table and an academic tutoring center. Of sorts.

The training table was a loaf of bread, a bunch of bananas, and jars of peanut butter and jelly that Tomsula would bring to the field to feed his players.

The academic center? That was Tomsula's dining-room table, where 19- and 20-year-old football players would study alongside his 7- and 9-year-old daughters, learning geography together on a light-up globe.

"This wasn't USC or Notre Dame, with a $4 million tutoring center," Tomsula said. "They just needed a quiet place to study. They needed to eat some real food to gain weight. At Division II Catawba, kids — no matter where they came from — they don't have money."

Universal lessons

Tiny Catawba College, enrollment 1,300, is certainly not USC or Notre Dame. Nor is it a traditional launching pad for a head-coaching career in the NFL. But Tomsula's approach to coaching and to players, developed at Catawba, is the same one he brings into his first season as head coach of the 49ers.

The 49ers promoted Tomsula, who never spent a season as anything more than a position coach, in large part to heal a culture the bosses had decided was broken. To be a friendlier, more nurturing presence than his predecessor, Jim Harbaugh. While Tomsula's mastery of the technical side of the job is unknown, his credentials as a motivator and mentor are strong. And that path began at Catawba.

Tomsula once described himself as "Jim nobody from nowhere," and while Catawba isn't quite nowhere, you might be able to see nowhere from its front porch. The school was founded in 1851 in Salisbury, a sleepy southern town most famous for being the site of a prisoner-of-war camp during the Civil War. Catawba sits outside of town on West Innes Street — if you cross Grants Creek, you've gone too far.

Non-traditional path

The little school is the incubator for Tomsula's career, first as a player and then as a coach.

"There's nothing about my path that's traditional," Tomsula said. "I just wanted to coach and pay the bills. I never said, 'I want to get to the NFL.'"

Tomsula, 47, grew up in a mill town outside Pittsburgh. He became noteworthy among his childhood friends because he could cornrow hair. He went to Middle Tennessee State out of high school, but a shoulder injury derailed his career there. He found a landing spot at Catawba and played for two years. There, he met his future wife, Julie, who was in the school's sports medicine program. When a knee injury ended his career for good, Tomsula became an assistant in his final year of school.

He tried coaching after college — high school, then at Charleston Southern. But he had two young daughters and felt the need to make better money than coaching could offer. Finally the pull of coaching was too strong, and with Julie's encouragement, he packed up his car and drove back to Catawba to become an unpaid assistant, working with the defensive line.

One-car apartment

Julie and their daughters went to Florida to stay with family. Tomsula — the story is now lore — lived in his car with the family dog, the cat ... and the cat's litter box. His suits were hung in the back seat for his day job selling entryway matting on straight commission, and he did his best to make sure the cat hair didn't stick to his work clothes.

"I parked under a nice shade tree," he said. "I'd take the dog out to the field. Walk across the parking lot to the gym and have a shower."

His players didn't know he was living in the car.

"I just knew he had a lot of stuff in there," said Radell Lockhart, now an assistant coach at Catawba.

Lockhart said Tomsula was one of the best coaches he ever had.

"He was a very good teacher," Lockhart said. "But it's more than what he does on the field. He was like a father figure."

Eventually, Tomsula moved out of his car and into a rundown little house across the street from campus, owned by the school. Julie and the kids joined him, and they became part of the Catawba family.

"My main takeaway with him is how he interacted with players," said Curtis Walker, who was an assistant on the staff alongside Tomsula and is now the head coach at Catawba. "He has the ability to get the best out of players. He truly cared for them and would do everything to make them successful. Not just on the field."

Tomsula didn't want his players wasting their money on unproven supplements, so he brought them peanut butter sandwiches. Julie would bring cookies and snacks to the field after practice. Their front door was never locked, and players would walk right in, to chat or study. At Thanksgiving they would invite the entire team and line up tables through the living room and dining room, into the kitchen, commandeering neighbors' ovens for multiple turkeys as well as china and silverware because Julie wanted a properly set table, not paper and plastic.

"I've always said the greatest gift I could give my children was to raise them with football players," Tomsula said. "And I think my wife and children brought out the best in them."

Hands-on approach

Tomsula began spending his summers coaching in NFL Europe, also living in the same hotels with his players. That path eventually brought him to the 49ers in 2007.

But no one back at Catawba expected him to end up as head coach of the NFL team.

"I didn't," Lockhart said. "He doesn't have the personality. He doesn't like a lot of attention. But he'll get used to it."

Tomsula's hands-on approach to his players, his strongest asset coming into his new challenge, was developed at Catawba.

"Due to limited resources available at schools this size, you have to interact with so many different circles in a young man's life," Walker said. "It's very intimate, personal. How to schedule class, handle their academics. You have to be involved in all aspects of the development of a player."

“You can give a player a great sense of family,” Walker continued. “Of home and comfort. And Jim did that, along with Julie and Britney and Brooke. The players saw that he was more than just a guy on the field. That he was the best father and husband he could be.”

Lockhart said he thinks what Tomsula perfected at Catawba was “connection.”

“You’ve got to make people want to run through a brick wall for you,” Lockhart said. “And everyone he coaches, that’s what they do. If you show respect to players, they’ll show respect to you. He has the knack of getting anyone to do stuff.”

New 49ers fans

In this small Carolina hollow, most residents are Panthers fans or Steelers fans. But on Sundays this fall, many will be rooting for the 49ers.

“We here at Catawba appreciate the level of exposure that Jim Tomsula and his association with the 49ers have brought to Catawba,” Walker said. “We’re very proud of him having this opportunity.”

An opportunity that few along this untraditional path expected.

Football: 49ers coach Jim Tomsula talks social media & more at high school media day

By Darren Sabedra
San Jose Mercury News
July 24, 2015

For nearly five hours in the 49ers' plush interview theater at Levi's Stadium, representatives from one high school football team after another were ushered onto the stage that the pros use.

It was media day, for high school football.

In those nearly five hours Wednesday at the MaxPreps/USA Football/49ers Youth Football event, we learned that coaches take the sport's increasing safety standards seriously, that virtually everyone is optimistic in the weeks leading up to preseason practice and that Serra is certain its season will end when the regular season does because of section sanctions.

We also learned that 49ers coach Jim Tomsula is frightened to death of social media and willing to share his views about the dangers of off-field troubles — something that has put his team in the headlines far too often.

The rookie head coach entered the theater a couple of hours into the program and spoke for about 10 minutes.

"Be careful, gosh, be careful," Tomsula said about social media. "I'm learning a lot about it. I don't know a lot about it, other than my children, my daughters, are teaching me something about it. I'm a paranoid mess with it. But I'm learning about it, and there are ways to use it the right way, and there are things you can do with it that are good, and I am learning that side of it.

"But it still scares the heck out of me. So please, please, please, please, please be careful and go back to your guys and the things you're learning, pass it on."

Tomsula reminded the players, most of whom senior captains, that leadership includes a lot of responsibility.

"The big thing we talk about with the 49ers is what happens between 5 o'clock in the afternoon and 8 o'clock in the morning," Tomsula said. "Guys, that affects what happens on the field. Can't separate it. You don't live like a champion for two hours.

"You don't live like a special guy. People think they can take this hat off, put another hat on. You can't do that. It's all about one way of living. Unfortunately, we learn too hard in our society right now. It's good to wake up in the morning and not try to figure out what you did last night. It's good to wake up in the morning and not try to figure out, oh gosh, that sinking feeling in your stomach because you did something wrong.

"Try to do the right things. Listen to your coaches. They're trying to help you. But you guys have been put in a position to help the other guys. This is huge, man. This is high school football, senior year. It's huge. It's exciting. It should get you fired up. You should enjoy every minute of it. It's the last thing you think about when you fall asleep and the first thing you think about when you wake up in the morning."

Tomsula, of Pennsylvania roots, said he had just spent time in his home state, visiting his high school head coach and assistants.

He noted that they had a "profound effect" on his life.

So much that Tomsula still goes to high school games even now. He said it is the one level of football he pays to see.

“What we do, used to do it with my daughters, now we do it with my son, on home games on Friday nights, we get in the car and we look for lights,” Tomsula said. “Don’t know where we’re going. I’ve been out here nine years now, but I am from the East Coast.

“We get in the car. We look for lights. We start about 6:30, 7 o’clock, sometimes I’m running late, gotta work. Then we find a field. We go to a game. We get out, we go to a snack bar and that’s dinner and then watch high school football. I usually know one team that’s playing because it usually says so on the scoreboard of the stadium.

“Then we figure out who they’re playing against. Does’t matter. It does not matter. You are playing the game at its greatest time. High school football. Friday night football. That is just the absolutely perfect time. Enjoy the heck out of it.”

Don't Bludgeon the Man

By Emily Kaplan
MMQB.com
July 22, 2015

The most recognizable man in San Francisco is going unnoticed in his hometown. It's an overcast Friday in late June, and new 49ers coach Jim Tomsula is nursing a 31-ounce coffee on the patio of a Starbucks in Homestead, Pa., just on the outskirts of Pittsburgh. He's packing a wad of tobacco in his left cheek (a regular habit), wearing a nylon tracksuit (his sartorial preference) and sporting the kind of thick, dark mustache that harkens back to the leading men of 1980s TV shows ("a mustache to be reckoned with," according to his mustache's parody Twitter account). A group of teens loudly gossips at an adjacent table, and a steady stream of shoppers walk through the strip mall. Nobody stops to look twice at Tomsula.

If he had his way, this would be the norm. No fame, no media attention, no conjecturing about who he is or what his team will be.

"I don't care about perception, I care about reality," Tomsula says in a husky voice that sounds like the natural bark of football coach. "I try not to read what's out there, but sometimes I do and just laugh. I mean, some of the reports out there couldn't be further from the truth. It's the exact opposite of the reality that I'm dealing with. The exact opposite! Seriously, the exact opposite!"

He spits out the tobacco.

"But, I guess, that's the NFL."

In a league in which perception is everything, Jim Tomsula was a nobody before mid-January, when he made the gargantuan leap from defensive line coach to one of the NFL's Chosen 32. After being introduced to the press, he sat down for an exclusive one-on-one with the TV network CSN Bay Area that had all the makings of an SNL skit. Like his press conference, this four-minute interview was full of uncomfortable pauses, mutterings, contradictions and non-answers. To one question he replied, "I wouldn't not say that. I wouldn't say it either." His predecessor—the gauche and irascible Jim Harbaugh, he of the khaki pants and beige answers—suddenly seemed as eloquent as a Shakespearean actor. Asked to define a successful first season, Tomsula said, "Uh...that's yet to be determined. I mean, uh, we're gonna, uh, we're gonna, we're gonna win today. That's, our, uh, uh, you know, it's, it's one week calendars once you get into the season. So that's the way I look at it."

And so everyone looked at Tomsula for what he was: an unpolished assistant who had been promoted so far out of his depths that it was impossible not to wonder if the front office, having grown tired of clashing with Harbaugh, had installed a puppet whom the powers-that-be could control. As Tim Kawakami from the San Jose Mercury News wrote, "Tomsula will say the things the 49ers want him to say, in the way they want him to say it."

Then, as if perception couldn't get any worse, Tomsula's players started bailing on him.

General manager Trent Baalke shoots down the idea of a "mass exodus" or a "domino effect," but it was hard not to wonder about the sudden departures.

In March, stalwart linebacker Patrick Willis said a teary goodbye to football. A week later his heir apparent, Chris Borland, stunned everyone by retiring at 24. In May, defensive lineman Justin Smith walked away from the game after 14 seasons. A month later, 25-year-old offensive tackle Anthony Davis cryptically quit. The 49ers also bid farewell to wideout Michael Crabtree, guard Mike Iupati and the franchise's alltime leading rusher, Frank Gore, in free agency. Rumors that quarterback Colin Kaepernick was being dangled for a trade only added to the offseason malaise. "Let's put that to rest," Baalke told The MMQB in June. "That's absolutely untrue."

What's undeniable is that Tomsula, who has never been a coordinator in the NFL, is now juggling the most intense expectations of his career. San Francisco's run of three straight trips to the NFC Championship Game went sideways during a tempestuous 2014 season, and fans aren't likely to give the least qualified of eight coaching candidates an extended honeymoon period. But Tomsula isn't fazed. With pop music blaring through nearby speakers and threatening skies looming overhead, he retraces his unlikely journey and ascension, never at a loss for words when describing the obstacles he's already overcome.

"I feel bad when people talk about the grind of coaching," Tomsula says. "My people? They work. That's all they know. And they weren't working for a job they loved, just for the responsibility for their family. Growing up, I was always told never to let pride get in the way of a job."

His great-grandfather was a Hungarian immigrant who worked in the coal mills of Indiana, Pa, where he was hit by a coal pulverizer and died on the job. Despite not knowing how to drive, his widow packed her four kids in the car and crashed twice on her way to Homestead, where she was able to find work washing the floors of churches. Years later Tomsula's grandfather opened a restaurant, Hungarian Village, in the shadow of Forbes Field, the one-time home of the Steelers and Pirates. Tomsula's father worked in the kitchen. When Forbes Field closed in 1970, so did the business. Everyone had to find new jobs.

"I never had a dream to coach in the NFL in my life," Tomsula says. "I'd be happy coaching at any level, anywhere. I just wanted to coach and pay the bills."

Jim Tomsula himself has always been a worker. Uncle Dave taught him how to weld stainless steel in third grade—"that was a big deal," Jim says—and his teenage summers were spent laying bricks, a back-breaking trade that helped mold him into a stout defensive end in high school. In 1985, he left home to play football at Middle Tennessee State, then transferred to Catawba College, a Division II school in North Carolina. That's where he met his future wife, Julie, a student athletic trainer.

"When he graduated, everyone said he should become a coach," Julie says. "He said, 'No, I'm going to go make a lot of money.'"

So Tomsula got a six-figure job in Greensboro selling medical equipment. But it didn't take long for Julie to realize he wasn't happy, and at her urging he walked away from the money. In 1992, Tomsula became an assistant football coach at Charleston Southern for $9,100 a year.

"They also said we could get our masters," Julie says. "So we thought it was a great deal."

But they couldn't afford books or much else. Tomsula supplemented his income with side gigs, working as a janitor, delivering newspapers, and chopping wood for $55 every third truckload. It still wasn't enough. His father visited and was flabbergasted to find the cabinets bare. Not even a jar of peanut butter. "What are you doing?" he asked. "You can't provide for a family like this!"

After three seasons, Tomsula returned to Pittsburgh and became a sales rep for a food distributor. But, he says, "I wasn't good at the whole networking thing." Division II and III college teams often called about coaching opportunities, but Tomsula always passed on them—until Julie intervened again. "Life is too short," she said. "Do what you love."

In 1997, Julie took their two daughters, Britney, 4, and Brooke, 2, to stay with relatives in Florida while everything they owned was put in storage. And so began the year that Tomsula lived in a car, a red Cadillac given to him by his Uncle Tic. Tomsula drove the 430 miles down to Catawba and became an unpaid volunteer assistant at his alma mater, charged with strength and conditioning. He slept in parking lots and cleaned himself up in the locker room. To combat loneliness, he kept a black lab and a cat as roommates. Tomsula hung his suits in the back seat, right above the litter box.

"Ah, the homeless period," he says. "Everyone makes it out to be a bad thing, but it really wasn't."

Tomsula sold carpets for commission on the side. The next season, he became a salaried coach. His wife and daughters joined him, and Tomsula moved his family into a $650-a-month fishing cottage 25 miles away from campus. They didn't have heat.

But they did have a phone line, and former NFL wide receiver Lionel Taylor cold-called Tomsula in 1998 and asked him if he'd be interested in joining his staff in NFL Europe. Tomsula had never met Taylor, but Tomsula had established a reputation as a teacher of fundamentals, making him a desirable assistant for the developmental league.

For the next nine years, the Tomsulas spent their autumns in Catawba, where the school provided on-campus housing, and their summers overseas. He was the defensive line coach for the English Monarchs for one season, the defensive line coach for the Scottish Claymores for five, the defensive coordinator for the Berlin Thunder for two, and then the head coach of the Rhein Fire in 2006.

Every August, Tomsula toured about a dozen NFL training camps, looking for fringe players who might play in Europe. Some teams allowed him to sit in on personnel meetings, and he'd walk away with dozens of notebooks filled with observations of how coaches talked, what they talked about, how they conducted themselves.

In January 2007, Tomsula received a most unexpected call: 49ers coach Mike Nolan was looking for a defensive line coach. Though they played on the other side of the ball, offensive linemen Harvey Dahl and Tony Wragge had returned from Europe raving about Tomsula's mentorship. The 49ers flew Tomsula out for an interview; it was the first time he ever rode first class. Tomsula accepted the job, but first asked Nolan an important question: "I don't know anything about money. Can I live with my family in California and provide for them with that salary?"

Nolan told him yes, and then boosted his salary $10,000 on the spot.

"I never had a dream to coach in the NFL in my life," Tomsula says. "I'd be happy coaching at any level, anywhere. I just wanted to coach and pay the bills."

It's true that Jim Tomsula knows very little about money. One of the first people he thanked during his introductory press conference on Jan. 15 was Joan from payroll, who doubles as his personal finance adviser. Tomsula has come a long way from that $9,100 a year job. The 49ers signed him to a four-year deal worth $3.5 million a year, but the new riches haven't changed him. He also gave shout-outs to Vilma at the front desk and the kitchen crew—the "boys downstairs [for] making that great Mexican feast at Christmas." Every day at 8 a.m. ET, the coach calls his parents at their home in Pennsylvania. He is usually in his office, and he has usually just pulled an all-nighter.

Over the course of Tomsula's eight seasons coaching the defensive line in San Francisco, the 49ers ranked fourth in rushing yards allowed (98.4 per game) and third in points allowed (19.4). He molded Ahmad Brooks (supplemental draft), Isaac Sopoaga (fourth round) and Ian Williams (undrafted) into productive starters. Justin Smith never made a Pro Bowl until he worked with Tomsula.

"As an X's and O's coach, there's nobody better," Smith says. "But he's not going to be doing as much of that anymore. As head coach, he has to do the stuff he hates: dealing with media, dealing with ownership."

Tomsula knows he didn't handle his introductory press conference or the ensuing CSN Bay Area interview with the greatest aplomb. He didn't sleep the night before and was in crunch mode trying to assemble his staff. The communications department carved out an hour to go over any possible questions that reporters might ask, and Tomsula aced the run-through. But he froze in the spotlight. Tomsula says he was singularly focused on returning to his office to continue calling potential assistants. Plus, he didn't want to say anything that could be used against him. If, for example, he said he preferred a certain blocking scheme, would Tony Sparano be hesitant to become the tight ends coach?

The next day, 49ers CEO Jed York told his new coach, “Don’t act or try to be someone you think the media wants you to be. From now on, just be yourself.”

“If there’s ever a time I mess up or seem awkward in an interview, it’s because I don’t want to lie,” Tomsula says. “Really, that’s all it is.”

“As an X’s and O’s coach, there’s nobody better,” Smith says. “But he’s not going to be doing as much of that anymore. As head coach, he has to do the stuff he hates: dealing with media, dealing with ownership.”

Tomsula handled himself with greater authority in assembling his staff. His first call was to Bill Naves, the longtime director of football operations under Mike Holmgren in Seattle and Mike Singletary in San Francisco. The job is essentially a chief of staff: part-assistant, part-confidant. From booking travel to scheduling mini-camps, Naves knows the minute-to-minute needs of a coach. This was crucial for Tomsula, whose only previous head-coaching experience in Europe doesn’t quite translate to the NFL. When Tomsula first joined the NFL, he told friends, “It’s amazing, I no longer have to carry the equipment!”

Tomsula sought out assistants who would challenge him. Eleven of the 19 have been head coaches or coordinators either in the NFL or at the elite levels of college football. The next order of business was logistical. The head coach’s office was on the second floor. Tomsula felt it was too far removed from the action, especially during the summer months when the NFL limits the contact he can have with players. The locker room, training room and meeting rooms are all on the first floor, so Tomsula chose a new space in the middle of a hallway where players would have to pass by him every day. While maintenance crews prepared the room this summer, Tomsula set up shop in a small enclave next to the showers.

“Culture is huge. That’s the difference between a championship-caliber team and a championship team,” York says. “You look at the Golden State Warriors. They were the dumbest team in the NBA for letting Mark Jackson go, who won the most games in the franchise’s history. How could you be so dumb? They bring in Steve Kerr, who has been around the game for a long period of time but has never coached before. Kerr changes the culture, comes in with a different perspective, and look what happens.”

But Tomsula actually has been an NFL head coach before. During the final game of the 2010 season, he served as the interim head coach after Singletary was fired and rallied the 49ers to a 38-7 win over the Cardinals. A year later, according to York, the team identified a few internal candidates who could be potential future head coaches. Tomsula was on the list.

Players love him, too. He’s fiery when he needs to be—just do a quick search for “Jim Tomsula Bludgeon”—but tries to be low-key in meetings rooms to avoid overloading players with information. He’ll often say, “Hey, here’s what I’m thinking. What do you think?” Last season, when Frank Gore was distraught after losing a fumble in a 13-10 loss to the Rams, it was Tomsula who sat hunched on a stool by the running back’s locker to console him.

Even still, there was a nervous energy in the auditorium just before Tomsula was set to address his players for the first time as the head coach during April’s minicamp. “Everyone kind of looked around like, How’s it going to be?” says defensive end Ian Williams.

Was it going to be the same Jimmy T. who struts around the facility yelling to no one in particular, “We’re going to do some ass-kicking this week!”? Or would this be a buttoned-up Jim Tomsula?

The coach opened his mouth to speak and was loud, passionate and even a bit goofy. The nervous energy dissipated. He was exactly the same.

"I've only been here a short time," says veteran running back Reggie Bush, a free agency addition. "But I can already tell how much respect this team has for him."

Jim Tomsula, 47, spent his first summer vacation as an NFL head coach crashing at his parents' split-level colonial in suburban Pittsburgh. His wife, Julie, and 8-year-old son Bear, came along. Britney and Brooke, now college-age, stayed in the Bay Area. Tomsula woke up to mom's bacon and eggs, threw the pigskin in the backyard with Bear, and washed loads of workout clothes emblazoned with 49ers logos in the basement.

On one humid afternoon in June, he loaded two sedans with three generations of Tomsulas and headed to Thomas Jefferson High School for the highlight of his homecoming: his sixth annual football clinic for teenagers with Down syndrome. The coach knows he could ask the NFL to help sponsor the event, but says, "It's a Tomsula thing." Campers dine on burgers flipped by Jim Tomsula Sr. and cookies baked by the coach's aunts. They even prepared a gluten-free batch, to which Tomsula Jr. scoffs: "Kids these days."

Camp for the Stars began in San Francisco, in 2007, to give kids who have Down syndrome an authentic football experience. Tomsula loved it so much he brought the camp back home to Pennsylvania. Throughout the two-day camp, Tomsula co-leads drills with his old football coach from Steel Valley High. Even though the campers wear nametags, Tomsula remembers most of their names without looking. He puts players through one drill that has them catching a ball in the air before falling onto a thick mat. For those wearing red bracelets, signifying a greater risk of injury, Tomsula holds them up in the air and then flops onto the foam with them to brace their fall.

While Julie is off scouring two Targets and a Michael's to make sure every participant leaves with a framed certificate, Bear is working the field as a water boy. Two 49ers scouts are also here volunteering, as well as retired defensive tackle Dana Stubblefield, who never played for Tomsula but says, "He's just a really good dude." So Stubblefield booked a cross-country ticket and a room at the local Spring Hill Suites.

It's all smiles until the scrimmage. Before one snap, a camper tells another that he is stupid. The recipient of the slight responds with an uppercut. He then rips off his own hat and storms off into the locker room.

Tomsula tells Stubblefield to continue coaching and follows the player into the locker room. He sits the boy down and talks about the importance of sportsmanship. "The game teaches us to become men," Tomsula says. "And we need to act like that." Fifteen minutes later, the camper and Tomsula emerge. The boy walks to his opponent, says he's sorry, and shakes his hand.

Around 10:30 p.m. on Friday, once the last camper has hugged Tomsula goodbye and once the cafeteria has been wiped clean, an after-party commences at the house of Tomsula's sister, Jill. Nearly 50 relatives, neighbors, friends and one 300-pound former All-Pro lineman grab Miller Lites from a porch cooler and munch on potato chips and leftover burgers in the kitchen. There's a glow inside the house. No music, but laughter. Old stories are retold about karaoke nights gone awry and summers at the Jersey Shore. When midnight strikes, Jill notices something isn't quite right.

"Where the heck is Jimmy?" she asks. "He's the toast of this damn thing!"

Soon the door swings open. It's Jimmy, and he's wearing one of his signature nylon tracksuits that leaves him perpetually sweaty. "I'm sorry, I'm sorry," he huffs. "I had to drive Uncle Tic home."

"It took that long?" Jill asks.

"It's late! It's dark!" he says. "I had to make sure he got in OK." Consider it part of Tomsula's code: When someone gives you a car, the least you can do is make sure he always has a ride. And this too: he downs a beer and devours an Italian hoagie with the urgency of a two-minute drill. Then he goes about working the room with salami-and-suds-doused breath, doling kisses and pats on the back.

“We did great work today,” he says. “I love you people.” He grabs another beer. “Really, I love you people.”

Tomsula’s mother, Betty Jo, beams with pride.

“Folks in San Francisco or around the country might say this or that about Jim Tomsula the football coach,” she says, “but I know this is the real him.”

The NFL Team That Is Solving Millennials

By Kevin Clark
Wall Street Journal
June 16, 2015

The San Francisco 49ers are getting ready for the fall, when they'll face their most daunting opponents. The Seattle Seahawks and the Arizona Cardinals come to mind. At the moment, however, they are preparing to face a force many find truly terrifying: millennials.

The 49ers coaching staff, led by new head coach Jim Tomsula, realized that they are dealing with the same problem as millions of parents, even if they are dealing with massive, athletic millionaires. The issue is how to relate to a generation—generally described as 18-to-34-year-olds—that has been raised on smartphones and instant information.

So the team consulted with experts ranging from Stanford University researchers to advertising executives to learn how, exactly, the young brain works.

As players arrived for voluntary workouts and minicamps this spring and summer, they noticed sweeping changes designed to cater to how research shows millennials learn. That means making concessions for people with shorter attention spans, a desire to multitask and, yes, a need to check their phones all the time.

Facing this new reality, the 49ers turned the typical meeting, which on some teams can go for as long as two hours, into 30-minute blocks, each followed by 10-minute breaks that allow players to do what young people do. That is, as Tomsula puts it, to “go grab your phone, do your multitasking and get your fix” before returning the meeting.

“The [experts] are telling me about attention spans and optimal learning,” he said. “I’m thinking, ‘My gosh, we sit in two-hour meetings. You are telling me after 27 minutes no one’s getting anything?’ ”

The bulk of the changes—from enhanced digital playbooks to weekly briefings on social media—have a common theme. Instead of the coaches making millennials change, the coaches are changing to better work with the millennials, even if that means allowing some necessary evils.

“You’d hate to think someone would want to bring a phone in and text in a meeting...but that’s what you’re facing,” running-backs coach and former 49ers fullback Tom Rathman said of the youngest generation of NFL players. “So Jimmy is doing a great job giving them enough time to do all that stuff so they don’t want to bring it into a meeting.”

Another change involves sending alerts to players’ calendars instead of a printed schedule. Coaches were fearful of this move at first. In football, missing a meeting is a grave offense; now you’re introducing the chance that a technological bug could cause a player to miss one? But after a few weeks of meetings, which are used in the NFL to discuss strategy and review film, that concern has proved unfounded. No one has missed anything.

The changes might seem simple to outsiders, but in the fiercely conservative world of pro football, they represent a culture change. “We haven’t handed out a piece of paper to a player this year and they love it,” Tomsula said.

The 49ers, whose average age last season was 25.2 years, have a locker room of typical millennials, at least in their interests. Tight end Vance McDonald, 25, spent the off-season binge-listening to “Serial,” a popular podcast. Eli Harold, a 21-year-old rookie linebacker, plays so much of the soccer videogame FIFA that he put his online gamer username on Twitter so that fans could challenge him.

The coaches say that they have learned more about technology from players than they thought possible. The biggest advancement, defensive-line coach Scott Brown said, is that the younger players have been raised in an NFL where practice tape can be downloaded to tablets before meetings, meaning every piece of information is available to them at all times. That is compounded, Tomsula said, by new playbooks with video clips of plays attached to the drawing of the play—a benefit to visual learners and those in tune with tablets and smartphones.

Tomsula sat in a panel at the league meetings this year that featured, among others, NFL chief marketing officer Dawn Hudson, who previously worked as an executive at PepsiCo Inc. The panel mostly focused on marketing to children, but Tomsula was enthralled by the details on how younger brains work. The youngest generation—those born since the mid-1990s, known as Generation Z—are on five screens of media at a time and communicate in images, not texts. Attention spans can last as little as eight seconds. Tomsula joked that he was devastated to learn that texting was “prehistoric.”

Tomsula said that he is in a meeting a week learning about new apps and technologies that his players might be involved with. The 49ers’ video department briefs him on how to use technology. This is all in an effort to not curtail the use of technology but “to make sure you can utilize it and make it a good thing,” Rathman said.

As he and his staff learned more about the topic, they met to discuss potential changes. Special-teams coach Thomas McGaughey Jr. said he had realized the long, uninterrupted meetings had become “counterproductive” and that the 30-minute blocks are helping. But the biggest change, McGaughey said, involved learning new teaching styles. “You have to be quick and get to the point,” he said.

Not everyone wants these breaks. In position-group meetings, Logan, the quarterbacks coach, said he offers the break to his players, including 27-year-old starter Colin Kaepernick. “Every 30 minutes I say, ‘You want to take a break?’ and they rarely do,” Logan said. “They want to go go go.”

The task now is to keep up with the learning curve, coaches say. “Our whole lives, we’ve gone with a paper and pad,” Tomsula said. “Next week, a young person’s phone will be outdated. We decided we have to be on top of that.”

But personally, Tomsula is still the same 47-year-old guy. “I’m like, ‘Well, I still need my piece of paper.’”

Jim Tomsula, Erik Pears Share NFL Europe Roots

By Tyler Emerick

Erik Pears and Jim Tomsula may only be a few months into their player-coach relationship, but their history dates back nearly a decade and spans halfway across the globe.

After going undrafted in 2005 out of Colorado State, Pears spent his rookie season on the Denver Broncos practice squad. The following spring, the offensive lineman was assigned to play in NFL Europe for the Cologne Centurions.

That year, Pears' team, which included former 49ers special teams ace Bubba Ventrone, faced off twice against the Rhein Fire – coached by none other than Tomsula himself.

When Pears visited the San Francisco 49ers facility as a free agent earlier this offseason, the lineman and coach bonded over their international experience.

"He mentioned it. It was a good little connection there," Pears told 49ers.com last week. "I remember playing that team, and I can still remember seeing him and thinking, 'That's a crazy dude right there.'"

For what it's worth, Tomsula holds all bragging rights as his Fire won both meetings.

"We've had a couple of good laughs about it," Tomsula said. "It was a cool deal."

Tomsula has often spoke fondly of his time in Europe, crediting the experience for much of his success in the NFL coaching ranks. Pears has a similar appreciation for his season abroad.

"Honestly, it was some of the most fun football I've played," Pears said. "I grew up in Denver, played at Colorado State and immediately went down to the Broncos."

"I had never really left the state of Colorado, so it was awesome to get out on my own and do my own thing. The football aspect helped a ton with just getting some more experience."

When Pears returned stateside after the summer in Germany, he made the Broncos 53-man roster out of training camp and went on to start 10 games that season.

Now eight years later, Pears will look to compete for a starting job on the 49ers offensive line after signing a two-year deal with the team in March. Pears started 16 games at right tackle for the Buffalo Bills in 2013 and 16 games at right guard in 2014.

"I love the guy," Tomsula said. "He's one of those family guys that has that toughness and doesn't say much. Just when you talk to him, you feel like he gets it."

"That guy 11 years ago was in NFL Europe. And here he is. That guy has lined up and played tackle in this league. He's played guard, too. That guy's a neat dude."

Eric Mangini*Mangini in the Middle

By Jenny Vrentas
MMQB.com
June 19, 2015

Eric Mangini was a defensive coordinator at age 34, a first-time head coach at 35 and fired from his second head-coaching gig at 39. Where do you go from there? For Mangini, the answer was working his way back into the NFL as a senior offensive consultant for the 49ers in 2013—a chance to work on the other side of the ball—followed by a season as San Francisco's tight ends coach. Now, a decade after his first coordinator job, with the Patriots, he's returned to that seat again as the Niners' defensive coordinator under new coach Jim Tomsula. After the team's veteran minicamp, Mangini talked to The MMQB about what his experiences have taught him and about how he's retooling a defense that lost stalwarts Patrick Willis and Justin Smith and rising star Chris Borland all in one offseason.

VRENTAS: Before Jim Tomsula asked you to be his defensive coordinator, had you given any thought to returning to the role soon?

MANGINI: Yeah, it was something I wanted to do. When I came to San Francisco, just in talking to Jim [Harbaugh] about the [offensive consultant] job, I thought it would be really interesting to spend some time on offense, to sit in the meetings, to be able to sit in the booth, to go through the game-planning, to see and hear what caused problems from the other side, and challenge myself by doing something I hadn't done in 15 years. I started on offense in Cleveland and Baltimore, but it had been a while. That was the thought process. Also, the idea of coaching the tight ends last year—that was out of my comfort zone, but I thought it would be great experience for when I did go back to defense. And it has been.

VRENTAS: What's something you learned from being part of offensive game-planning that will help you on the other side of the ball?

MANGINI: It's interesting, when you sit in the meetings and talk about the running game or talk about protections, to hear how some things defensively create problems for the offense. It may be the shade of a defensive lineman, how much of a problem a slight shade can create, and how much of a conversation that can create for the offense. It's really not that big a deal to us on defense, but it's really interesting to hear what a big deal it is to you on offense. Thinking back to those meetings, I was making sure, when I go back to defense, that we create those conversations for opposing coaches.

VRENTAS: It's been a decade since you've been a defensive coordinator. What about the job is different now from what it was in 2005?

MANGINI: The offseason is pretty different, because with the new rules, in the first part of the program you can't actually have any routes run against you. You can't have any plays run against you. And so much of defense is adjustments and then reaction. We could get the adjustment component with a walkthrough, but you couldn't go through with the guys and take that time and teach pattern reads with routes or teach the fits in the run game. All that had to be from tape.

The typical offseason program in the past gave you a lot more time leading into OTAs to get things the way you want to see them and to teach at a slower tempo. This year we went from adjustments to competition against the offense in OTAs. While the offense can run its routes, run its plays, and they've all got designed spots based on the calls, we didn't have any of that until OTAs. That was interesting—that transition from walkthrough to reaction.

VRENTAS: How do you respond as a coordinator when your defense loses Willis, Justin Smith and Borland all to retirement in the same offseason?

MANGINI: As much as there have been guys who have retired or left for whatever reason, we also have a lot of guys coming back from injuries. NaVorro Bowman [torn knee ligaments in January 2014] is back. So are Ian Williams [minor leg fracture in November last season] and Glenn Dorsey [missed 2014 with a torn biceps]. So there are quality players who weren't part of last year's defense in a significant way or who missed significant time. Those guys are coming back, which is great. That gets a little bit lost in the whole conversation.

VRENTAS: How have you melded your defensive playbook between your ideas, the system Vic Fangio ran with this team last season, Tomsula's ideas, etc.?

MANGINI: I have always seen playbooks the same way: It's a living, breathing thing that evolves each year. Every time some new ideas come into the system, they become part of our playbook, the 49ers playbook. It was the same thing when I was in New England [as defensive backs coach beginning in 2000]. We did things a certain way, then Rob Ryan came into the system and we incorporated elements of the 46 and things that were from that family tree. We did the same thing here. We have three other guys on the staff [Tim Lewis, Clancy Pendergast and Jason Tarver] who were former NFL defensive coordinators. During the offseason we looked at the calls we had, the ways we wanted to play, and talked about how we wanted to play the different calls to get the answer we thought best fit us.

From my perspective, it's good because you hear so many different ideas, and all those guys have been coordinators and have had to deal with the problems of the job. So they've got great perspective. Why did you do it this way, and why did you find it to be effective? We have great conversations, saying, I think this is the best way to go, let's see how it works, and if not, we can default to this way. On a lot of staffs, only one person has been a coordinator, and there are younger guys who are just position coaches, so you don't necessarily get the same infusion of ideas.

VRENTAS: Your head coach is also a defensive guy. Will you call the defensive plays?

MANGINI: Yeah, I'll call the plays. There's always the head coach's prerogative, just like I had when I was head coach. There are certain things he wants at a certain time, and that's no problem.

VRENTAS: How has your defensive philosophy changed since the last time you were a coordinator?

MANGINI: Drawing from the experience of the past two years, and bringing that in. Being on offense, I got to watch a lot of defense. Every week I was watching defensive tape. It was a good look at trends in the league, the things that are effective, and that's another part of the evolution of the playbook. Things become in vogue offensively. I remember when empty formations first came out. That was the rage, and then you had the Wildcat quarterback, and then you had the Pistol. On defense it was the zone blitz that Pittsburgh started back in the day, and then press quarters. There are always different systems that come in, both offensively and defensively, and become a trend. My general defensive philosophy—to be flexible enough to react to whatever we have to deal with, to having a solid core we can always default back to—is still in place. And then you hear about being game-plan specific. Sometimes that's just a catch phrase, but I grew up that way defensively, and I believe in that, where each week we are going to have challenges we have to deal with, and we have to have the tools and flexibility both physically and mentally to get that done in a very short time frame. So I'm a big believer in building flexibility into the defense, too.

VRENTAS: What trends did you observe while studying opposing defenses the past two years?

MANGINI: Typically what happens is, whoever wins the Super Bowl, people will emulate that defense. Seattle has had an impact on a lot of teams around the league with the things they do. We saw them twice a year, and they do what they do really well. There are definitely huge advantages to some of the stuff they do. You won't necessarily adopt that, but you adopt elements of that. There are other teams that are really effective at blitzing and creating pressure, and you look at it and say, What makes them effective, what do they do well, what's been the biggest challenge for offenses that face them? Let's see if we can take components of that and do that well.

VRENTAS: You have had an interesting career arc in that you were a head coach at a very young age and now you are working your way back up again. How have you reinvented yourself as a coach the past few years?

MANGINI: Nothing really prepares you for that experience of being a head coach. You go through and make a ton of mistakes, and you learn from your mistakes, and you take the time to sit back and say, OK, when I get the next opportunity, what do I want to do differently? It's also a function of watching other coaches. I got a chance to see the way Jim Harbaugh coached, and to see how Jim Tomsula is approaching it. You take different things away from it. It really is like anything else—when you see ideas work that are different from what you've been raised on, you start to incorporate those into your approach and philosophy. At the end of the day, though, the biggest thing I've learned is you've just got to do things that fit your personality, your voice, and be authentic.

VRENTAS: Are you hoping to be a head coach again?

MANGINI: I think that's every coach's eventual goal is to do that. That's definitely something I'd want to do again.

VRENTAS: How have you tried to be a resource to Jim as he navigates being a first-time head coach?

MANGINI: The biggest goal I have is to try to keep problems off his plate when I can. I know as a head coach I always appreciated coaches who limited the amount of problems I had to deal with on a daily basis. That has huge value. He has so many things on his plate and so many different areas that need his time and attention. I want to make sure my area isn't one of them. If I can help in any way or provide insight in any way, that's what I am going to do. But outside of that, I'm not going to try to push any philosophies or approaches that I had. It's more important to just be there to help him in whatever way he needs on whatever time frame he needs it.

VRENTAS: How would you describe your vision for the 49ers defense this season?

Eric Mangini Q&A: 49ers new DC on finding his 'own voice'

By Eric Branch
San Francisco Chronicle
July 29, 2015

As the 49ers defensive coordinator, Eric Mangini will incorporate plenty of ideas from his legendary mentors: Patriots coach Bill Belichick and Hall of Famer Bill Parcells.

In his latest coaching role, however, Mangini will make sure to also incorporate his own voice when communicating with players.

Mangini, 44, the 49ers tight ends coach last year, hasn't had such a high-profile position since his last season as the head coach of the Browns in 2010. He was fired after his two-year tenure in Cleveland featured a pair of 5-11 seasons. He previously went 23-25 as the head coach of the Jets from 2006-08. What did he learn from his humbling head-coaching stints?

"I think the biggest thing is that you've got to speak in your own voice," Mangini said last month. "I had very strong football fathers in Bill Parcells and Bill Belichick and they do things a certain way that works really well for them. There's a lot of things I firmly believe in that they do that I did.

"But I tried to do it in their voice and I should have just done it my way. You take those good ideas and you use them, but you have to do it in the style that's consistent with your personality."

Mangini, the youngest head coach in the NFL (35) when the Jets hired him, went from "Mangenius" to man in a studio after leaving Cleveland. He spent 2011-12 as an ESPN analyst before he joined the 49ers as an offensive consultant in 2013. He's now a defensive coordinator for the first time since his one-season stint in that role with the Patriots in 2005, which was preceded by five seasons as New England's secondary coach.

When asked how he failed to use his own voice during his head-coaching tenure, Mangini said he was too "rigid." He acknowledged he could have dealt better with the media, and that presumably extended to his players.

Former NFL tight end Nate Jackson painted an unflattering portrait of Mangini in his memoir "Slow Getting Up." Jackson, who spent about a week with the Browns in August 2009, described Mangini as a hard-driving, morale-killer.

When I asked about Jackson's characterization, Mangini, who said he hadn't read the book, jokingly made tentative plans to pick up a copy.

"Maybe that will be summer reading," he said. "Something light on the beach."

Here's the transcript from a conversation with Mangini last month that also included Janie McCauley of the Associated Press:

As a longtime defensive coach what was it like last year coaching tight ends?

EM: It was weird. I coached offense when I first got in the league. So when I was first in Cleveland (in 1995) with Bill (Belichick), I was a coaching assistant and I was with offense, with the quarterbacks. Then I was an offensive assistant with (current Iowa head coach) Kirk Ferentz with the O-line (with the Ravens in 1996). That experience was great for me ... It was huge when I went over to defense because you understand protections, you understand route combinations, you understand quarterbacks reads. That was a big thing in the New England system. You start young guys on one side of the ball and then you flip them (to the other side) so they have that background. So when I had the chance to do it at this point in my career (with the 49ers), I really wanted to.

I had sat in the meetings as a head coach and gotten some perspective of it. But I wasn't in all the game-plan meetings. So to do that and actually coach a position? Totally out of my comfort zone. But I had a great group. What a pleasure to coach those guys. So it was fun and it does give you a renewed perspective on what causes problems.

I'd sit in offensive meetings sometimes where we'd talk about technique by a defensive player for 15 minutes and in the back of my mind I'm thinking 'Man, we really don't care on defense that much about where a guy is shaded, but when I go back to defense I'm going to make sure they line up there. Because I want some other person to sit in this meeting this long talking about this detail. So that part was really good.

In your only season as a defensive coordinator, the Patriots weren't great statistically, but you dealt with a lot of injuries. What was that experience like? (New England ranked 26th in yards allowed in 2005, but used 23 defensive starters, including 13 at the four spots in the secondary. In answering this question, however, I think Mangini was talking about 2004 when he was the Patriots secondary coach).

EM: I felt like we always had a lot of guys in and out on defense. We moved Troy Brown over to defensive back. Troy was a 12-year veteran at wide receiver. He'd never played any defense. We moved him to play the inside-slot position in training camp. He played, I think, 240 snaps and had the highest numbers of balls defended. He was close on interceptions. He had never played defense. That year we also had to take Don Davis, he was a sub-linebacker, he had to play safety in a game. Another guy who was like a street free agent - we got him on a Wednesday - he had to play.

So one game it was Troy Brown playing inside, the guy we got on Wednesday playing outside at corner, Don Davis playing safety, another rookie free agent we had during camp, he was at the other corner ... It was fun though. I mean, it was a little stressful during the game. But we won. We beat the Rams (40-22). It was great. It's one of those coaching experiences where you look back and you think 'I'm going to remember this forever.' And they're going to remember it forever, too.

Those situations obviously stretch you as coach ...

EM: Yeah, taking an offensive player and moving him to defense at that point in his career, that was a really good experience. Because you have to relate things to things that he does. But all that mixing and matching. In one Super Bowl, we had both (starting safeties) Rodney Harrison and Eugene Wilson go down and we were playing with backup safeties late in the game. They were core special-teams guys. With things like that, you earn your money and learn a lot.

When you first got here you were candid about the fact that you'd like to be a head coach again. What did you learn from your head-coaching stints?

EM: There's a ton of stuff that I've learned. I think the biggest thing is that you've got to speak in your own voice. I had very strong football fathers in Bill Parcells and Bill Belichick and they do things a certain way that works really well for them. There's a lot of things I firmly believe in that they do that I did. But I tried to do it in their voice and I should have just done it my way. You take those good ideas and you use them, but you have to do it in the style that's consistent with your personality.

That was probably one of the biggest lessons that I learned. You're going to make a ton of mistakes throughout that process and I've talked to plenty of new head coaches about that. You go in with an expectation that it's going to be one way and things can dramatically change daily. And you have to have the ability to adjust to that. There's a laundry list of things I learned the first time, and even the second. You go through it, you experience it. Looking back on it, even seeing other head coaches operate now, there's things that I like and I'll incorporate if I do it again.

What kind of guidance have you given to Jim Tomsula? Is he leaning on you a lot?

EM: Well, (ex-NFL head coach) Tony (Sparano) is here, too, and he's very valuable. But it could be day-to-day stuff where he might have a question. I also know that as a head coach you're so busy that it's hard to allocate a lot of time for different things. So I try to make sure that I can make life as easy as possible for him. The things that were challenges for me as a head coach, I want to make sure I'm not presenting those challenges to him as a head coach. I work really hard to do that. My main focus is to be a resource. So if he needs anything, has a question and I can help, I'm happy to. But it's also important for Jim to do things Jim's way. That's the lesson I learned.

You mentioned learning to have your own voice and not speak like Parcells or Belichick. Is that in the way you present things to players? Your tone?

EM: The best example, I think, when you're dealing with your kids - do you ever say things that your parents said to you to them? I think it's kind of the same thing when you're coaching the team. I know with my kids, I'll say stuff that my dad said to me and I probably didn't love that my dad said it to me. But I'm saying the same thing? And it's a little bit like that with any experience. You hear that voice, you know how well that system works, but now you have to use your perspective. So I was definitely too rigid with certain things.

Like what?

EM: Probably dealing with the media. A little rigid there. I don't know if you heard that. I think I had done one press conference (as an assistant) because the coordinators didn't have to talk (weekly) at that point. So I did one press conference during training camp and there were about three people there - they must have all gone out to lunch when I showed up. And then my next press conference was in the auditorium in front of the New York media (as head coach of the Jets). There were like 50 cameras - I could have been better prepared for that. That was a totally different experience.

Working as an analyst at ESPN for two years, did that you give you a better insight into the media?

EM: Yeah. I got a lot of insight. You hear the conversations. I sat in the room watching games with everyone at ESPN that covers games. It was interesting to hear their perspective. One of the things I wanted to do when I was there was not tell anybody what to think. Just say 'OK, this is what happened. You can agree with it or disagree with it, but this was the thought process.' Instead of directing it one way or the other.

What's your reaction to the retirement of three defensive players in the offseason and how are you prepared to deal with those losses?

EM: Every offseason that I've been part of there's huge changes. And sometimes it's free agency. Sometimes it's retirements. Sometimes it's things you can never anticipate or plan for. But there has been really good depth built up here. There are guys with a lot of playing time due to injuries. And we have guys that were injured last season that are coming back that weren't a part of the defense last season. And really good, quality players. That's been exciting.

And getting out here and working with the guys, and learning about the guys and spending time with the guys, has been really good. I know all of them because I've been here for two years, but it's different. You don't interact with them the same way when (you're not the defensive coordinator). I'm sure you're going to outline everything about your scheme ...

EM: Yeah, I was going to bring a playbook up here ...

... but players have indicated there will be more pressure, a wider variety of looks that what they had in the past under Vic (Fangio). In general terms, is that an accurate assessment?

EM: One of the things I believe in defensively is you have your core things that you do and you do really well. But you have to be in a position to build in flexibility. And I've called games where we've blitzed 30 times and I've called games where we've blitzed three times. I've always been a big believer -- and I've been raised defensively -- to be game-plan specific.

I know that term gets thrown out a lot, but it's identifying 'OK, what can we attack? What do we have to stop?' And having enough flexibility within the system to get those things done. Because Week 1 is going to be dramatically different from Week 2 and right on down the line. To say, we're going to be, percentage-wise, one way or the other, I couldn't tell you. It will kind of evolve based on the opponents. Vic was known for his blitzes when he came here, but he didn't do it as much because he was getting enough pressure with a standard rush. Do you have to feel out your defense a little as well to figure things out?

EM: I think that's a great point. That's a perfect example of what I'm talking about. You might go in saying 'Hey, we need to pressure this much,' but when you pressure it ends up hurting you and it's not worth doing. If you can pressure with four and you don't need to add bodies to get to the quarterback? There's real value in that, too, to keep guys back in coverage.

I read Nate Jackson's book "Slow Getting Up" and he is not complimentary of you at all ...

EM: I've never read Nate Jackson's book.

Have you ever come across any excerpts? You are not portrayed in the greatest light ...

EM: I didn't know he wrote a book ... Maybe that will be summer reading. Something light on the beach. I don't think that's a good idea.

EM: OK (laughs). I'll get to some other books.

Eric Mangini

49ers DC Eric Mangini Talks Philosophy, Defensive Personnel Changes

By Tyler Emerick

June 12, 2015

More than a few eyebrows were raised when the San Francisco 49ers announced that Eric Mangini would be the defensive coordinator on Jim Tomsula's staff.

Not because Mangini was at all underqualified or undeserving. Mangini's defensive coaching roots run deep. He won three Super Bowls with the New England Patriots as a defensive assistant and translated that success into two head-coaching opportunities (New York Jets and Cleveland Browns).

No, the initial double-take occurred because Mangini had just finished a pair of seasons as the 49ers tight ends coach, and such a move from one side of the ball to a high-ranking position on the other is rare in the NFL.

But then again, a football mind like Mangini's is probably just as uncommon. He didn't earn the nickname "Mangeni" for nothing.

When asked about his two years as an offensive assistant on Friday afternoon after the 49ers wrapped up their three-day minicamp, Mangini hinted that, at times, he almost felt like he was undercover.

For the first time in his career, the veteran defensive coach got to see the detailed inner workings of how an offensive staff prepares each week.

"It was great to sit in those meetings and hear what their problems are," Mangini said. "You realize what creates a ton of discussion. You see what's going to give them headaches when they're getting ready to gameplan."

Now back on the defensive side, Mangini said that he is a more well-rounded coach because of the experience. And what did he learn that he's now applying to the 49ers defense?

"One of the things that I believe in defensively is you have your core things that you do really well but you have to be in a position to be flexible," Mangini said. "As a play-caller, I've called games where we blitzed 30 times, and I've called games where we blitzed three times.

"I've always been a big believer to be game-plan specific. It's identifying what we can attack and what we have to stop. Then you have to have enough flexibility in the system to get those things done. So we'll evolve as the opponents go."

Something that will be a priority in Mangini's system is disguising coverages.

"If good quarterbacks know what you're in, there's always something in a pattern that can beat that coverage," Mangini said. "So I'm a big believer in making an offense make post-snap decisions, so that they have to react."

New 49ers Coaching Staff's First Offseason

Mangini, who hasn't decided yet whether he'll stand on the sideline or in the press box during games this fall, will have to deal with the losses from last year's fifth-ranked defense, which no longer has the services of Patrick Willis, Justin Smith, Chris Borland, Chris Culliver, Perrish Cox and Ray McDonald.

The good news is that Mangini's 3-4 scheme is similar to what former defensive coordinator Vic Fangio ran. So the players who are left from last year's roster fit solidly into Mangini's mold.

“Every offseason that I’ve been a part of there have been huge changes,” Mangini said. “Sometimes it’s free agency, sometimes its retirement, sometimes it’s things you can never plan for.”

“But there has been really good depth built up here. If anything, the look and feel of the players is very consistent with what I’ve always had. (General manager) Trent (Baalke) and I were together in New York a long time ago with the Jets. So we share philosophically on what a lineman should look like, what a linebacker should look like and so on.”

As for his relationship with Tomsula, Mangini, who is one of two former NFL head coaches (Tony Sparano) on the staff, said he has been a sounding board during the early portions of Tomsula's first year at the reins of the franchise.

“I try to make life as easy as possible for him so that things that were challenges to me as a head coach, I want to make sure I’m not presenting those challenges to him,” Mangini said. “My main focus is to be a resource, so if he needs anything or has a question, I’m happy to. But it’s also important for Jim to do things his way. That’s a lesson I learned.”

By Eric Branch
San Francisco Chronicle
August 22, 2015

After two back surgeries and 36 years mentoring college players in the defensive trenches, Scott Brown, 63, thought his football-coaching days were over.

But a funny thing happened in the midst of his life without a whistle.

Brown and his wife, Pam, were enjoying dinner this past winter with another couple at Bisetti's, an Italian restaurant in Fort Collins, Colo. Brown was employed as a 49ers scout and didn't consider that a mid-meal phone call from recently named head coach Jim Tomsula would have life-changing implications.

But Brown stepped into the subzero night to talk and quickly warmed to the idea Tomsula proposed: Yes, he was interested in becoming a 63-year-old NFL rookie.

"When this happened it was like, 'What the ... is this real?'" the 49ers' first-year defensive-line coach said this week.

It is real.

And a bit unusual.

Brown is the 49ers' oldest and most experienced coach, but his 36-year career has been spent at seven colleges, primarily as a defensive-line coach.

Now, he's making his NFL coaching debut and replacing Tomsula, who was regarded as one of the league's top position coaches. Brown inherits a position group that might be the 49ers' deepest, a unit that includes three former undrafted free agents — Ian Williams, Tony Jerod-Eddie and Mike Purcell — who have flourished under Tomsula's tutelage.

Has he ever considered his new job a bit daunting?

"Yes," Brown said. "You'd walk away saying I was full of it if I answered that question any differently. You're talking about guys that this is how they earn their living. They're not college kids. They put a lot into it. ... Don't think for a minute I don't lose sleep at night wanting to make sure that I'm doing and saying the right things."

What Brown said to Tomsula about defensive-line play over the years earned him the job. Tomsula had initially admired Brown's coaching from afar: Tomsula had been intrigued by the techniques Brown's players at Colorado State and Arizona State used when he was studying video of college prospects before the draft.

Then, the coaches connected in person in 2012 when Brown was hired as a 49ers scout, a career change prompted by his health.

Brown and the rest of the staff at Arizona State had been fired after the 2011 season and he needed a second back surgery, a procedure that would prevent him from coaching for at least a year. Brown took it as a sign. He was an ex-coach. And when he accepted general manager Trent Baalke's offer to become a 49ers scout, he resolved to honor his commitment to the organization.

As a scout, Brown attended the team's training-camp practices and was often around the facility in the spring before the draft. As a result, two defensive-line junkies spent hours talking about the trenches.

"It seemed like every night we ended up by a projector just talking football," Tomsula said. "He wasn't thinking about coaching and it was, 'What you think about this,' and we'd just go back and forth talking about football.

"Frankly, when (I became the head coach), it was a no-brainer. I liked the stuff he was doing, and he liked the stuff I was doing. Talking about the D-line now, I want to keep doing some of the stuff I firmly believe in. But I want to expand that and improve in these areas that I wasn't as good at."

This could, of course, be an uncomfortable dynamic, with Brown looking over his shoulder at Tomsula, who had his job from 2007-14.

Tomsula is aware of the potential for awkwardness, and has taken pains to ensure that Brown is empowered. During offseason practices, he's avoided the defensive-line group during position drills because he doesn't want players, by force of habit, looking at him for instructions.

"Most coaches in this position would dread following a guy with Jim's history and his reputation," said Brown. "I've never looked over my shoulder one day since I've been here. He's been unbelievably supportive."

Brown admits he's learning on the job. He's leaned on defensive-line assistant Aubrayo Franklin, 34, a first-year coach and former 49ers nose guard who spent four seasons with Tomsula during his 11-year career. And Brown doesn't hesitate to say he solicits input from his players, many of whom have spent several seasons in the system.

"Coach Brown came in and I think he had the right approach," Jerod-Eddie said. "He doesn't act like he knows it all. He always wants input from us. He wants us to talk to him. He tells us all the time, 'Remember, I'm learning from y'all as much as y'all are learning from me.'"

Brown hasn't had to learn this: He loves coaching.

He missed his old job when he was scouting, which made the unexpected call from Tomsula a cause for celebration. On Wednesday, Brown, sitting on a bench after an afternoon practice, reflected on the evening his dinner was interrupted.

"The couple with us," he said, "it was their turn to buy, so it was a good night."

Aubrayo Franklin

June 17, 2015

After Aubrayo Franklin wrapped up his playing career with the Indianapolis Colts in 2013, he took a year off from football to enjoy retirement.

Soon thereafter, the 11-year defensive lineman felt the itch to return to the NFL in some capacity. Earlier this offseason, an opportunity for Franklin to do just that presented itself when the San Francisco 49ers hired Jim Tomsula as their head coach.

Tomsula coached Franklin on the 49ers defensive line for four seasons from 2007-10, helping the nose tackle to his most productive season in 2009 when he recorded 36 tackles, three pass deflections, two sacks and one interception.

With a strong working relationship in place, Tomsula and Franklin had mutual interest in the former player joining the new 49ers new coaching staff.

Franklin's official title with the 49ers is defensive assistant, but he's working solely with San Francisco's defensive line under position coach Scott Brown.

"You always want to be close to the game," Franklin told 49ers.com last week. "So since I'm not physically able to do it any more, this is the closest I can get. I feel like if I can give back and give some of these guys some pointers to help them out in their careers, I'm all for it.

"And it's been going pretty smooth so far. Being with Jimmy as a player, and now coming back, it's basically the same."

So how has the foray into the coaching ranks gone thus far? San Francisco's current roster actually includes six former teammates of Franklin: Joe Staley, Alex Boone, Vernon Davis, Ahmad Brooks, Shareece Wright and Antoine Bethea.

"It's different. As a player, you're preparing for yourself, not the whole group," Franklin said. "Being a former player brings a different aspect to it because I've been on the other side. I know how a player will learn and it's a great group of guys to work with."

One player Franklin is excited to teach is Arik Armstead. The 49ers first-round pick missed OTAs and veteran minicamp due to an NFL rule, but Franklin said Armstead showed great potential during rookie minicamp in May.

"From Day 1 to Day 2, he looked really good and looked like he was taking strides," Franklin said. "I'm looking forward to working with the kid. He has a great attitude so far, and he's eager to learn."

As for Franklin's aspirations in his new career path, the 34-year-old would like to eventually move up the coaching ladder. For now though, he's focused on the basics.

"As an entry-level coach, I'm just trying to take everything in," Franklin said. "But as the years progress, I want to learn about defense from different positions' perspectives and outlooks on the game. That would help me become more well-rounded."

Steve Logan's career path coming out of college had him becoming a teacher.

"I was going to teach physiology, at the collegiate level," Logan said Thursday, at the conclusion of the San Francisco 49ers' three-day minicamp.

Football, though, beckoned, and coaching became Logan's career of choice, with stops at the likes of Oklahoma State, Tulsa, Colorado, Mississippi State, East Carolina, Berlin, Rhein, Boston College and Tampa Bay over the past 35 years.

Thing is, he's continued to teach, and as the Niners' new quarterbacks coach, the 62-year-old Logan's lessons are imparted on his pupils in starter Colin Kaepernick, backup Blaine Gabbert and undrafted rookie Dylan Thompson.

"I have a great time coming to work," Logan said. "I have one of the best rooms anybody can ever ask for, attitude-wise. Colin and Blaine and Dylan Thompson ... all three of these kids come to work, they've studied the script the night before, they're prepared, they're eager.

"I have an absolute ball coming to work. It's a smart group of guys ... we're all learning from each other."

Kaepernick said the Niners have "cleaned up" a lot of the offensive miscues in the offseason training program under Logan and new O-coordinator Geep Chryst, who was promoted from Kaepernick's position coach by new head coach Jim Tomsula.

"Whether it's how we're running routes, the combinations we're running, the precision of running," Kaepernick said. "Things like that, where we put players in a better position to be able to make plays, to be able to use their athletic ability."

Said Logan: "There's an old saying in coaching that says, You will achieve what you emphasize."

Logan said it has been "fun to debrief" his QBs, pointing out Gabbert used to play for a coach in Jacksonville with whom Logan himself once worked with Greg Olson when both were with the Buccaneers.

In Santa Clara, though, it's about getting players to buy in ... on a relative stranger.

"If they don't know you, what's important is to prove to them you can give them something to help them become better at their craft," Logan said. "When you do that, they'll do anything for you...it keeps that relationship really strong.

"That's my approach to it. I think that's the kind of staff that Jimmy's hired."

Go ahead, call it a teachable moment.

Dres Anderson

Dres Anderson Proudly Represents Family Name

By Taylor Price
49ers.com
June 21, 2015

Dres Flipper Anderson was born July 20, 1992 in Riverside, Calif. The son of a 10-year NFL veteran and Super Bowl champion, Dres (pronounced drezz), has more in common with his father than football. Dres' middle name is the nickname of his father, Willie Anderson, who battled the San Francisco 49ers on a yearly basis way before his son signed with his bitter rivals as an undrafted rookie this offseason.

Willie "Flipper" Anderson was a key cog in a high-powered Los Angeles Rams offense in the late 1980s and early 90s. Flipper was a vertical threat and a rangy receiver who was known to be a thorn in the side of the entire NFC West, even the star-studded 49ers. As a youngster, Willie's babysitter gave him the "Flipper" moniker because he used to cry like a dolphin.

But Flipper is coming around on San Francisco's football team these days. He's proudly following his sons every move on the 49ers mobile app, and they FaceTime almost daily. In those conversations, Flipper shares advice for how his son can make the most of his opportunities in his first shot in the NFL.

"He's such a good kid," Flipper says in a phone interview from his home in Suwanee, Ga. "I have the utmost confidence in Dres; in his ability and his personality, and the way he behaves. He's just a good kid. It's not fake. That's who he is. He's a good guy."

The mentoring father-son relationship is nothing new for the Anderson family. Flipper has been helping Dres follow in his footsteps throughout his son's time in football pads.

"Me and my dad talk probably every two days," Dres says. "I give him an update on how things are going, and he gives me tips about NFL life in general; how to conduct myself; what things to do."

RIVERSIDE WORKOUTS

There was probably only one player at John W. North High School who was mentored by two NFL wide receivers during his prep career – that would be the 22-year-old wideout who wears No. 6 for the 49ers.

Dres was fortunate to learn route-running techniques, strength and conditioning tips as well as nutrition advice from his father, plus his uncle, Paco Craig, who played one season in the league for the Detroit Lions in 1988. A field by the Anderson's Riverside home was the place where Dres began fine-tuning his precise routes and strong-handed receptions under the guidance of his father and mother's brother.

The attention to detail paid off for Dres, who was a three-star recruit by Rivals.com and earned a scholarship to play wide receiver at Utah. Nearly a decade later from those high-school workouts, Dres' position coaches with the 49ers notice the advantages that came along with being the son of an NFL player.

"You can tell he's been working with somebody," said Ronald Curry, the 49ers assistant wide receivers coach and NFL veteran of seven seasons with the Oakland Raiders. "He doesn't have the whole player's son-type vibe to him. He's just one of the guys, but you can tell he's polished in his route-running and he understands the game. You can tell he's been around it."

THE 336 CLUB

Flipper did something that Jerry Rice – or any NFL receiver for that matter – ever accomplished on the football field. On Nov. 26, 1989, Flipper caught 15 passes for a single-game league record of 336 yards.

Wow.

“That’s how I’m always remembered, for that one game,” says Flipper, who totaled 267 receptions for 5,357 receiving yards and 28 touchdowns for four different NFL franchises.

Flipper’s 25-year-old record in a 20-17 overtime road win over the New Orleans Saints is older than his son. But that hasn’t stopped Dres from appreciating the record’s magnitude.

“He never really talked to me that much about it,” says the 49ers rookie, “but I always saw posters and stuff about it. Anytime somebody talks to me about my dad, they bring up that game. I knew about it. He didn’t really have to talk to me that much about it.”

Flipper’s career-defining game (which lives on in YouTube infamy) actually occurred by happenstance. Rams veteran wideout Henry Ellard missed the game due to a leg injury, which opened the door for Flipper to give the Saints fits all game long, routinely beating defenders on crossing routes and deep sideline patterns.

“That night was a special night. I always tell people that I felt like Michael Jordan – I couldn’t miss,” Flipper says. “Everything that was thrown to me, I was catching. It wasn’t like they were trying to feed me or anything, it just happened within the flow of the game. I think I had four or five catches of over 50 yards and by the end of the game, they were telling me I broke the NFL record and it was very exciting.”

Flipper’s record was nearly broken in 2013 when Lions receiver Calvin “Megatron” Johnson put up 329 receiving yards against the Dallas Cowboys. Other than that, Flipper’s record hasn’t been threatened often, even in today’s pass-friendly NFL game. But if anyone were to break his ridiculous mark, Flipper has one name in mind.

“Once (Dres) got picked up by the 49ers, I’m like, ‘OK, the record is out there for you to break,’” Flipper says. “I’m glad it’s lasted this long. I think it was slated as one of the top five records in sports to never be broken, but if anyone were to break it, I’d love for Dres to break it. That would be a joy for me to see.”

VIVA LAS VEGAS

Dres arrived on Utah’s campus with the hype of being the son of a former NFL player. A year later, he began his ascent as a redshirt freshman in 2011. From there on, Dres, a team captain in 2014, seemingly added his name to every important wide-receiver-category in Utah’s record books. His 2,077 career receiving yards are fifth-most in school history. His seven, 100-yard receiving games are fourth-most and his 17 touchdown catches are tied for sixth-best.

In the Pac-12, Dres did what his father did to NFC West teams two decades prior. He became a play-making matchup nightmare. But before Dres ever became a featured player for a nationally-ranked football program, Flipper recalls that the most impressive moment of Dres’ collegiate career took place in a game in which he never even played.

The 2011 MAACO Bowl in Las Vegas, saw Boise State best Utah, 26-3. The Utes only mustered 200 yards in a one-sided contest, but Flipper couldn’t have cared less. Why? Because that was the first time he saw Dres in a college uniform.

Flipper’s son toiled prior to kick-off about dressing out for a bowl game at the end of the 2010 season, one in which he knew he wouldn’t see the field.

“I was so proud of Dres just to follow in my footsteps as a receiver,” Flipper says, before recalling a pre-game phone conversation. “He said, ‘Dad, should I dress or not?’ I said, ‘You need to dress and get the whole experience of being in the bowl game. Even though you’re not playing, you’ll be on the field and all that.’”

Looking back on it, Flipper was glad to see his son take heed to his suggestion.

“When I came to that game in Las Vegas and I saw him come running out with the team, it just sent goose pimples (through my body),” Flipper says. “I can’t explain it. He wasn’t even going to play, but I was like, ‘I can’t believe that’s my son out there getting ready to be out there with all those big guys.’”

“It wasn’t a game per se, (but) just seeing him out there I was just so proud.”

A RIVALRY RUNS DEEP

If Dres makes San Francisco’s 53-man roster – he’ll have to wait three weeks into the regular season to take part in his first NFC West battle (at Arizona Cardinals in Week 3), and seven weeks before facing his father’s NFL franchise (at St. Louis Rams in Week 8).

The Rams and 49ers have long been rivals, and that’s way before San Francisco and Seattle recently earned national attention for hard-nosed battles. The Rams and 49ers have been in the NFC West since 1970, making it the longest rivalry in the division.

As Flipper remembers it, the 49ers-Rams games were back-and-forth but mostly went in San Francisco’s favor as the franchise won three Super Bowls during his time with Los Angeles (1988-94).

“That was probably the most heated rivalry in the league at the time,” Flipper says. “When I first came into the league, we were probably the most prominent teams vying for playoff spots and trying to win the division. We never had the opportunity to win any, (Joe) Montana and San Francisco, those guys always beat us. But those rivalries were second to none in the league. Those were the times when Montana and Rice were at their best and it was just a tough game for us.”

Despite being on the losing side of many of those games, Flipper can fondly retell his first touchdown catch and 100-yard game. Both of those milestone-feats took place in an Oct. 1, 1989 road victory over the 49ers. Anderson caught four passes for 112 yards. His 65-yard touchdown grab from Jim Everett gave the Rams a 10-6 lead in a game in which they eventually won, 13-12.

DRAFT DAY ‘15

Leading up to the NFL Scouting Combine and draft, Dres was back on those same Riverside fields with Flipper. The route-running sessions were similar to the high-school-workouts, but they were much more critical this time around. Dres suffered a torn MCL last October in Utah’s seventh game of the 2014 season. At the time, he was the team’s leading receiver. The injury took place a year after Dres posted 53 catches for 1,002 yards and seven touchdowns as a junior for the Utes. The setback not only sidelined him for Utah’s quest to be Pac-12 South champs; it also caused Dres to not be one of the 256 players chosen in this year’s NFL Draft.

“Of course I felt bad for him that his name didn’t get called,” Flipper says, “but everyone has their own route. I told him, ‘There’s no special route to get to the NFL. Everybody has their own story. If there was one route, everyone would take it.’”

Dres didn’t let his draft-day slide trouble him after signing with San Francisco. If anything, the slight has pushed Dres to be one of the hungriest players on the roster. While his son works towards making the 49ers roster, Flipper has come to grips with his son donning rival colors.

“I’m here now,” Dres says, “so he has love for the Niners. At first he was like, ‘Oh, OK...’ He was a little iffy about it, but he’s riding with the Niners now. He knows it’s blood now, so he has to like it.”

Dres continued to tap into his dad’s knowledge throughout his time in San Francisco’s offseason program. Dres says the tips ranged from how to utilize proper stretching, post-practice cold-tub sessions, how to watch film and how to “critique yourself and make sure you’re bettering yourself so you see it before the coaches do.”

As for the MCL injury of last October, Dres' on-field speed is on par with the rest of his fellow receivers. Flipper even thinks the injury helped his son emphasize lower-leg workouts prior to embarking on an NFL career.

"If you go out there and rehab your legs as much and as hard as you can," Flipper says, "you're going to be even faster than you were before you had this knee situation. From what I see, it's taking place now. Even though he's doing well right now, I'm still thinking he has a lot more left to give."

MAKING THE SQUAD

Flipper lives in Georgia, but he's actively watching football in two states. He coaches up Dres' younger brother, Seth, at North Gwinnett High School in Suwanee. The former NFL wideout also referees Division-III basketball games for a good reason.

"It helps keep me in shape and keep my nice figure," says Flipper with a chuckle.

The Anderson's football tradition could very well continue in San Francisco. If Dres is to be one of the 53 players to make the 2015 49ers, it'll be because the Utah product has showcased his big-play ability just like his father did for the Rams.

Flipper has no qualms about where Dres is playing ball these days. He only wants to support his son. So while it might be a little challenging to ditch the Rams gear, Flipper has come to terms with where his football is looking to make a living.

"I'm all in," Flipper says. "If the 49ers able to take my son in, as the son of a former Ram and nemesis of the 49ers, I'm happy that they've taken my son in. I can't wait to get out there and sport the red and gold and support Dres with the 49ers."

Dres has less than two months to get ready for his first NFL training camp. He'll surely tap into his support network and get tips on how to prepare for his first pro camp from the man who has first-hand experience doing just that.

For now, Dres says he's looking forward to the opportunity to compete with a talented group of receivers on the 49ers roster led by Anquan Boldin and Torrey Smith. Dres is one of San Francisco's six rookie receivers who have their work cut out for them this offseason. He wants the Anderson name to be remembered for more than just his father's legacy. And that starts with him creating his own.

"I always get people telling me about him and how great he was," Dres says, "but he's always told me, 'Just be yourself. Don't try to be me, be better than me.' So that's what I've been striving to do."

Arik Armstead

49ers rookie Arik Armstead dreams for his brother and himself

By Eric Branch
San Francisco Chronicle
August 3, 2015

One year after his second heart attack forced him to retire from the NFL at 23, former New England defensive lineman Armond Armstead admits the past 12 months have been filled with ups and downs.

He is enjoying work at a real-estate development company in his native Sacramento, but acknowledges he has yet to find his next passion.

"I just take it day by day," Armstead said. "I have good days and bad days."

One of those good days came Saturday. Armstead traveled to Santa Clara and saw his little brother, Arik, 21, the 49ers' first-round pick, participate in his first NFL training-camp practice.

For Arik, it was the first step in an on-field journey his brother was denied. In some ways, however, Armond, whom Arik has termed his boyhood idol, will take the trip with him.

The brothers, who went to Pleasant Grove High in Elk Grove and Pac-12 schools, trained together in Sacramento during the offseason and stayed in touch when Arik, a fellow defensive tackle, reported to the 49ers last week. Modern technology allowed Armond to critique his brother's first practices with the team's fellow rookies.

Because of NFL rules, Arik is a bit behind this summer: He couldn't participate in the 49ers' offseason program because his school, Oregon, was still in session. Armond has helped him play catch-up.

"He has his own life and he's going through things, too, but he's always willing to help me whenever he has time," Arik said. "We'll watch film together. We'll break down our practices together. He's been helping me a lot.

"I'll show him stuff. I'll ask him questions. We got on FaceTime and I was able to ask him some things. ... He's been helping me a lot throughout my whole career, and he's continuing to do that."

Before Armond's medical issues began four years ago, it appeared he could be the first member of the family to be an NFL first-round pick. A Super Prep All-American, he started 17 games in his first three seasons at USC before he suffered a heart attack in March 2011. He was forced to sit out the season and later sued the school, alleging his heart attack was triggered by 11 doses of the painkiller Toradol given to him by the medical staff during his junior season. (He reached a settlement with USC.)

He played in the Canadian Football League in 2012 and the Patriots signed him a year later following his six-sack, all-star season with the Toronto Argonauts. However, he was forced to retire in July 2014 before he could take an NFL snap; an infection sidelined him in 2013 and he subsequently had a second heart attack.

Arik has said he wants to succeed for his older brother. Is that added pressure for the 15th overall pick already eager to prove wrong the analysts who've termed him an NFL project? Armond isn't worried.

"I think when he says that, he says it as a compliment to me — but he plays for so much more than one person," Armond said. "He plays for his Lord and savior, he plays for his family, he plays for the city that he's from and he plays because he wants to be great. He can handle the pressure. He was a five-star recruit. He always had to follow in my footsteps and answer questions about whether he'd be better than his big brother."

If Arik doesn't succeed, it appears it won't be because of a lack of effort. Defensive lineman Glenn Dorsey, 30, has been struck by Armstead's desire: After practice Saturday night, he was the lone player to remain on the field for wind sprints.

"He's excited about working," Dorsey said. "When he did get here, he worked with everybody. After workouts, he did extra. He's excited about it."

The same could be said for Armond, who plans to attend every 49ers home game this season. Will Arik be on the field, or watching from the sideline? Armond isn't making predictions, but he's eager to take the trip with his brother.

"Everyone has had their time to say different things, good, bad or indifferent, but this is training camp now and he has the opportunity to show people if he's going to be a guy to look at today, or in a couple of years," he said. "It's really up to Arik. I think he'll be just fine."

Brotherly bond: 49ers' Armstead eager to start NFL career his sibling was denied

Both Arik Armstead and his older brother, Armond, were prep All-American defensive linemen at Pleasant Grove High in Elk Grove, became starters at prestigious Pac-12 programs and landed in the NFL.

The difference: Barring the unforeseen, Arik will be the only sibling to play in an NFL game.

Arik Armstead, 21, was selected by the 49ers in the first round of the draft Thursday night, about 10 months after Armond, 24, was forced to retire from the league because of health issues.

At the combine in February, Arik, who played at Oregon, told reporters he grew up following in his brother's footsteps. And he was eager to start on the path Armond was unable to travel.

"My brother not being able to play anymore, that's why I'm trying to carry on that torch," Arik said. "In high school, I wanted to be like him. I fell in love with the game early on, when I was little. My brother, hearing his name, he was a big-time recruit in high school and I wanted to be just like him."

Armond's medical issues began in March 2011 when he suffered a heart attack at USC, where he started 17 games from 2008-10. He wasn't medically cleared to play in 2011 and later sued the school: He alleged his heart attack was triggered by doses of the painkiller Toradol given to him by the medical staff.

After he wasn't selected in the 2012 draft, Armond played in the CFL and his impressive season attracted NFL interest. He was signed by the Patriots in January 2013, but contracted an infection that required surgery in the summer of 2013. It's not known if the infection is tied to his heart ailment. Armond spent 2013 on the non-football injury list, returned last year to take part in some of New England's offseason program, but was forced to retire before the start of training camp in July.

"He's had a lot of adversity personally that he's had to deal with -- unusual compared to most other players -- but he's always had a great attitude, worked hard, and really did everything we asked him to do," Patriots coach Bill Belichick said at the time. "While it is unfortunate he will not be able to play football, Armond is an outstanding young man who has a very bright future in whatever path he chooses."

Armond has since spent part of his time helping Arik prepare for the draft. In February, Arik said his big brother has always been eager to assist.

"I fell in love with football and he's been helping me ever since," he said. "He kind of paved the way for me."

Arik Armstead Proud to Carry out Brother's NFL Dream

Believe it or not, the 6-foot-7, 292-pound behemoth is actually a little brother. And throughout his childhood, Arik idolized his eldest sibling, Armond.

An All-American in high school, a starter at Southern Cal during the Pete Carroll era and a New England Patriot signee, Armond put the Armstead name on the map.

But just 10 months before the San Francisco 49ers selected Arik in the first round of the 2015 NFL Draft, Armond was forced to retire from football due to medical issues before he played a down in the NFL.

Now, at the onset of his own NFL career, Arik is ready to finish what his brother started.

"It's huge for me," Arik said during his introductory press conference. "Growing up, I wanted to be like him someday and become the type of football player he was.

"He always told me that I was going to be better than him. He still helps me to this day. I owe him a lot."

Armond's medical troubles began in March 2011 when he suffered a heart attack at USC. He sat out the following season before entering the 2012 draft. After no team used a pick on him, Armond decided to sign with the Toronto Argonauts of the CFL.

In his only season with the team, Armond totaled 43 tackles, six sacks, two fumble recoveries and was named an all-star en route to the Argonauts winning the Grey Cup title. That impressive campaign led the Patriots to sign him in January 2013.

But after competing in offseason workouts, Armond contracted an infection and spent the ensuing season on the non-football injury list. By July of last year, Armond decided to announce his retirement. It was later reported that he suffered a second heart attack in 2014.

"He would have been a top-15 player or better," former St. Louis Rams player personnel director Charley Armev told The Sacramento Bee.

In the months since he walked away from football, Armond has turned his attention to helping Arik become the player he couldn't be.

"I'm very proud of him, obviously," Armond told 49ers.com. "I've come to grips with my career. It is what it is. Everything in life happens for a reason, and I'm a firm believer in God. I feel like with anything in my life, if it doesn't happen, it wasn't essential for my life."

In the buildup to the draft, the Armstead brothers spent time in San Diego training together. Off the field, Armond served as a mentor for Arik as he went through similar pre-draft scrutiny.

That level of camaraderie is nothing new in the Armstead family. As children, Arik and Armond often spent entire weekends hanging out and playing video games together.

"It's a blessing that they're so close," said the brothers' mom, Christa Armstead. "(Armond) follows him more than we do. I say, 'Are you working? Or are you just sending stuff about Arik?'"

Because Arik witnessed first-hand how fragile a football career can be, those close to him believe he will not take this opportunity with the 49ers for granted.

"I'm sure that Arik considers himself fortunate," said Joe Cattolico, Arik and Armond's coach at Pleasant Grove High School. "He's seen that sometimes things outside of your control keep you from being able to take advantage of things in your life. He's seen that with his brother, so he's going to make the best of it and be motivated by that."

In the weeks leading up to and the moments immediately after the 49ers made Arik their first-round pick, Armond heard some NFL analysts question his brother's passion for football. Those comments, Armond believes, will serve as fuel to Arik as he enters the NFL.

"It would motivate anybody," Armond said. "But look, if I had a team, and I saw a guy as a finished product coming out of college, I don't think I'd really want that guy. If someone is 20 years old and is a finished product, what is really left there?"

"So if you're not scared of it, it can never be a negative thing. You just have to put in the work. Because I'd rather take a player who has the skills that someone can't teach. I know if I believe in myself as an educator, than I'd be able to teach him the things to make him successful."

With that being said, what kind of career does Armond anticipate his brother having in pro football?

"He'll do as well as he wants to do," Armond said. "The sky is the limit for him physically. He can do it. I always knew he had the skill set to be a Hall-of-Fame player. He just has to put in the work to do it."

Blake Bell

The Belldozer: A Journey to the NFL from Play-Caller to Pass-Catcher

By Joe Fann

June 23, 2015

Nobody gets used to a 5:00 a.m. wakeup call. Blake Bell awoke to his alarm screaming at him earlier than any college junior wants to crawl out of bed. But there was work to be done, and Blake was already behind the competition. A few weeks prior, Blake made the decision to change positions. No longer would he fight to become the Oklahoma Sooners starting quarterback. He was now a tight end, one with a lot of catching up to do before his senior season in 2014.

And so the workouts began. Blake, along with graduate assistant Joe Jon Finley, arrived at the Sooners practice facility in Norman, Okla., well before any of his teammates. They watched film of the NFL's best tight ends, most notably Rob Gronkowski of the New England Patriots.

Blake then moved to the indoor field to run routes. Players weren't allowed access to turn on the lights, so Bell trained in the dark, aided by merely an emergency light. The transition wasn't completely unfamiliar as Blake played wide receiver during his freshman year at Bishop Carroll Catholic High School in Wichita, Kan. But once Bell made the switch to signal-caller as a sophomore, he wasn't just a quarterback, he was the quarterback.

Blake's high school resume included state passing records, a Gatorade "Player of the Year" award and an invitation to the esteemed "Elite 11" football camp.

So, how did Blake go from a blue-chip quarterback prospect to a tight end selected in the fourth round of the 2015 NFL Draft by the San Francisco 49ers?

Life as a Sooner

Blake began his time at Oklahoma in 2010 behind then-starter Landry Jones, who is now a member of the Pittsburgh Steelers. Blake knew going in he'd have to work hard and wait his turn. That, however, didn't stop head coach Bob Stoops from making good use of Blake's 6-foot-6 frame.

As a redshirt freshman and sophomore at Oklahoma in 2011-12, Blake was used as a short-yardage and goal-line quarterback. He thrived in the role, accumulating 24 rushing touchdowns in two seasons. Blake's success in the red zone earned him a sweet nickname, too. He was known as "The Belldozer."

"The nickname started with the media my freshman year," said Blake, who scored four rushing touchdowns against Baylor that season. "The media came up with three ideas and ultimately landed on 'Belldozer.' The fans caught on and it stuck."

When Jones graduated before the 2013 season, Blake thought it was his turn to lead the Sooners. But at the same time, a talented freshman quarterback by the name of Trevor Knight entered the mix at Oklahoma. Knight, a smaller but faster signal-caller, performed well enough to spark a full-fledged quarterback competition in spring practices.

Eventually, the week before the team's season opener against Louisiana-Monroe, Stoops gave the freshman the nod. It was a crushing blow to the entire Bell family, which was eager to see Blake lead the Sooners. Blake's cousin had even changed the date of her wedding in anticipation of Blake's first collegiate start at quarterback.

"It was devastating to Blake and to us," said Mark Bell, Blake's father. "Blake worked so hard and he felt like he paid his dues. It was a hard thing for him and our family."

Despite the initial disappointment, Blake got his chance three weeks into the season. An injury to Trevor Knight opened the door for Bell to start against Tulsa. Blake powered the Sooners to a 51-20 victory, throwing for 413 passing yards and four touchdowns.

South Bend was the next stop on Oklahoma's schedule for a road game against Notre Dame. Starting against the Fighting Irish was a dream come true for the Catholic-raised quarterback. Blake starred again, leading the Sooners past the Irish, 22-21, throwing for 232 yards, two scores and no interceptions. It was Oklahoma's first win against Notre Dame since 1956.

Blake remained the starter until a concussion forced him out of Oklahoma's eighth game of the season, a contest against Iowa State. Once again, the keys to the offense belonged to Knight. The merry-go-round continued into the Bedlam football game against Oklahoma State.

A combination of injury and poor play from Knight and another Sooners quarterback Kendal Thompson gave Blake the chance to play hero. Down 24-20 on the road in Stillwater, Okla., Blake threw a 7-yard, game-winning touchdown to Jalen Saunders with just 19 seconds remaining in the game.

The heroics would be the last snaps Blake would take as Oklahoma's quarterback.

During the three-week hiatus between the Oklahoma State game and the Sugar Bowl against then third-ranked Alabama, Stoops decided to give his freshman signal-caller the start. Knight led Oklahoma to a 45-31 victory over the Crimson Tide, turning in a 348-yard, four-touchdown performance to take home the game's MVP award.

"We knew right then that something was going to have to change," Mark Bell said.

Becoming a Tight End

Mark stood still, almost stoic, as he cracked an obligatory smile. Amidst the ecstasy surrounding them, the Bell family couldn't fully join the Sooners fans lost in the euphoria of Oklahoma's marquee win.

"It was hard. I really had to force myself to be happy about it," Mark Bell said. "It's something you can only explain if you have your own son out there who went there to play quarterback and knowing that maybe that was the last time he'd ever play quarterback. That was hard to swallow. It was bittersweet."

With Knight poised to be the Sooners full-time starter, Blake was faced with two options. He could graduate and transfer for his final season of eligibility, just as Seattle Seahawks quarterback Russell Wilson did with his move from North Carolina State to Wisconsin. Behind door No. 2 was the opportunity to change positions and finish his career at Oklahoma.

Blake chose the latter.

"What you appreciate as a coach and as a team guy, he didn't want to graduate and transfer somewhere else for one year," said Stoops in a recent phone interview. "He's like 'Shoot, this is my team.' You've got to love that. Anyone would love that attitude. He wanted to finish with his guys here at Oklahoma."

Fortunately for Blake, when you're 6-foot-6, 250-plus pounds, you have the build to play on either side of the football. He can thank his football pedigree for that. Mark, who is also tall at 6-foot-5, played tight end at Colorado State and got drafted by the Seahawks in the fourth round of the 1979 draft. Blake chose to become the second tight end in the family and began his transition as a pass-catcher, a decision that Stoops anticipated.

"I had already thought about it, just because of his size and ability as an athlete," the OU coach said. "He's a heck of an athlete with really good size, and he has excellent hands."

Blake's senior campaign was unspectacular from a statistical perspective – 16 receptions for 214 yards and four touchdowns. But Stoops saw promise.

"I think he has a great upside," Stoops said. "He's only played tight end for roughly eight months, so I think he's going to progress well in that position."

That upside earned Blake an invitation to the NFL Scouting Combine in February. There, "The Belldozer" shined in Indianapolis, posting impressive marks. His 40-yard dash time of 4.80 seconds ranked fifth among all tight ends in attendance, his 20-yard shuttle time of 4.32 seconds ranked second and his 60-yard shuttle time of 11.81 seconds also ranked second.

The pre-draft hype machine began to ramp up on Blake's outlook as a professional. NFL Media draft analyst Mike Mayock listed Blake as his third-ranked tight end in the 2015 draft class. Once again, Stoops had no doubt Blake earned the praise.

"He's a guy that can do a lot of things. His blocking will only get better the more he does it," Stoops said. "He's always been a physical and tough guy. It's one of those things that just takes time to keep working it. He's such a big target and has such good hands that quarterbacks like seeing him down there."

"He's got the smarts. He's a team guy. That's what NFL guys look at."

An NFL Dream Comes True

"With the 18th pick of the fourth round, number 117 overall, the San Francisco 49ers select Blake Bell, tight end from Oklahoma," country music superstar Kenny Chesney said as he announced the pick live from Levi's® Stadium.

Back in Wichita, the Bell family celebrated at home. Mark congratulated his son, who had truly followed his footsteps. Both father and son were fourth-round picks, but Mark still made sure to jab Blake about being selected one pick earlier than his son, the 17th selection of the round.

The journey might not have been the one Blake mapped out, but it's hard to argue with the result. Blake started at two positions for a top-10 college program, scored 40 total touchdowns and earned himself an opportunity in the NFL.

When asked what the 49ers got in Blake, Stoops raved about his ability to feel space on the field. Bell's days of being a quarterback give him keen spatial awareness skills and the ability to diagnose coverages before the play. His biggest improvements, Stoop said, will come in run blocking and pass protection.

Fast-forward two months and Blake has now completed his first offseason program as a professional football player: a rookie minicamp, three weeks of OTAs and a three-day veteran minicamp.

"It went well," Blake said. "It's one of those things where I'm trying to get my feet wet and get the offense down. I'm having fun with it, learning from veteran guys, watching them and seeing how they're playing. I'm just soaking it all in."

Blake calls his tight ends coach, former Miami Dolphins and Oakland Raiders head coach, Tony Sparano "a great teacher." At one OTA practice, the tight ends were working on a red-zone drill from just outside the 10-yard line. One specific route called for a 12-yard out, with the ball already on its way before the tight ends got out of their break. As Blake made his way into the end zone, he got his head around at 14 yards instead of the desired 12-yard mark. The ball sailed past him, followed swiftly by Sparano's meticulous critiques of Blake's mistake.

"It's all about the fine details," Blake said. "It's the difference between a touchdown and an incomplection."

Sparano is refining Blake's aptitude as a pass-catcher, but the restrictions on offseason practices made it much more difficult to improve as a blocker. Under the current Collective Bargaining Agreement, all contact is strictly forbidden during the offseason program. The roadblock didn't stop Blake from putting in as much work as he could within the league's guidelines.

“It’s a lot of technique,” Blake said. “Even if you have pads on, it’s still all technique too; having your feet in the right spot and your hand placement coming off the ball. There’s still a lot of work you can get done.”

What Bell has accomplished in under a calendar year is special. To switch positions, learn a new role and still get drafted in the fourth round is a monster achievement. It not only exemplifies his natural athleticism, but confirms his dedication to fulfilling his potential.

“To see where he’s come in such a short time playing tight end, and then to get drafted in the fourth round, we couldn’t be more proud of Blake,” Mark said.

The former Sooner now finds himself as a part of a crowded tight end corps. The 49ers are carrying eight at the position on their current 90-man roster. That means Blake’s work is far from over, and the competition is only going to intensify once training camp begins.

But you don’t need to tell him that.

“I’m happy to be here. It’s one of those things where you get an opportunity to play in the NFL, and that’s been a dream of mine ever since I’ve been very young,” Blake said. “Now I’ve got to keep working and keep fighting to help make it a reality.”

Anquan Boldin

Fallout, Fall Guys and Fingertips: A Week in the NFL

By Tyler Emerick
49ers.com
September 30, 2015

Earlier this summer, nearly 3,000 miles away from the San Francisco 49ers headquarters in Santa Clara, several New Orleans Saints wide receivers attracted media attention for wearing some unusual accessories on their wrists.

There, at Saints training camp in rural West Virginia, players donned wristbands featuring four letters printed in all caps: “WWAD?”

Apparently, Saints wide receivers coach John Morton, who held the same position with the 49ers for the previous two seasons, had been talking up a former player of his a little too frequently.

“WWAD?” stands for “What Would Anquan Do?”

The homage, of course, is to Anquan Boldin – the 13-year veteran wideout of the 49ers who has amassed seven 1,000-yard seasons.

The silicon bracelets, distributed by Saints receiver Joe Morgan, were made because Morton regularly pestered his players to emulate Boldin’s work ethic. But even if the wristbands were initially created somewhat in jest, the end result produced a phrase that the younger NFL players might be wise to follow.

Boldin is as respected as any man in football, and not just for his fierce reputation on the field. Away from the game, Boldin is among the most active players in the community.

In the 12 years since he established the Q81 Foundation, Boldin has awarded college scholarships; handed out thousands of turkeys at Thanksgiving; purchased thousands more toys at Christmas; completed projects with Oxfam America, Wounded Warriors and the United Way; launched an eight-week summer enrichment program for students who need courses to catch up academically; and hosted an annual free, two-day festival for children in his hometown.

Boldin accomplishes this all with his own funds – he donated $1 million last year for future scholarships – and through fundraisers, the next of which will take place at Levi’s® Stadium on Nov. 30 with tickets being sold online.

The NFL Players Association honored Boldin with its Byron “Whizzer” White award for community service in 2014, the same year the wide receiver was a finalist for the NFL’s Walter Payton Man of the Year award.

More on that later, though. For now, back to “WWAD?”

“You can’t imagine how flattering that was to the family because it lets you know all the good work that he’s done and continues to do is being recognized by many that we didn’t realize,” said Carl Boldin, Anquan’s father. “With all the negative that goes on in the NFL and in the world, to see someone recognized for the good things is so special.”

Boldin’s commitment to helping others is in his blood. Growing up in Pahokee, Fla., also known as “Muck City” for the marshland that consumes the impoverished town, Boldin watched his paternal grandmother open up her car, home and heart to assist those in need.

Annie Boldin drove senior citizens to doctor appointments, gave neighborhood kids a place to sleep and cooked meals for the hungry.

“My grandma was one of those town mothers,” Boldin said. “She was always inviting people in. She still is that way.”

Boldin’s grandmother on his mother’s side, Johnnie Mae Banks, was also a fixture in the community – often cooking hundreds of meals for the town’s workers. And then there was Boldin’s parents, Carl Boldin and Brenda Banks, both of whom were educators.

That’s why it’s so important to Boldin that his foundation be a family affair. His parents, siblings and everyone in between are involved in some fashion with planning events, fundraisers and the scholarships. It’s just what the family does.

“You want people with the same heart as you,” Boldin said. “A lot of people work for foundations so they can get paid. My foundation is a little different in that nobody gets paid. Everybody does it out of the kindness of their heart.

“I do it to show my kids, especially with my oldest son. He’s 11 and has a pretty good understanding of what we do and why we do it. We let him know that everybody isn’t as privileged as he is. I know I wasn’t. But because you have that life, you’re obligated to help others. There are a lot of people out there suffering and a lot of people out there in need.”

Everything Boldin does with his foundation is hands-on. He wants those he touches to know his face more so than his name.

One small illustration of that dedication is how Boldin goes about selecting students for his Q81 Foundation Scholarship Award. Instead of delegating someone else to look over the hundreds of essays that are submitted for the $10,000 grant, Boldin and his wife, Dionne, read every last one.

“That’s what it’s for. You want to hear the stories yourself,” Boldin said. “It’s easy to have somebody else read them, but I like to hear exactly what kids are going through because I can relate. Some of those stories are heartbreaking. And for me, if I could, I’d send every kid who reaches out to college.”

Celene Bolanos grew up in the Bay Area as a casual 49ers fan. Her brother and father were more passionate supporters of the team, but she enjoyed watching San Francisco play on Sundays.

As a senior in 2014 at Aragon High School in San Mateo, Calif., Bolanos received an acceptance letter from UC-Berkeley – her dream college. She didn’t know how she would pay for her education with so many expenses in addition to tuition like food, housing and books.

So like any ambitious kid in her position, Bolanos began applying for scholarships. She won a few small grants, but she vividly recalls one phone call in particular.

“My advisor told me I won Anquan’s scholarship and it was a huge weight off my shoulders,” Bolanos said. “I knew of Anquan before from my family always saying, ‘Wow, what a catch.’ But as soon as I won, I watched a documentary on him on YouTube. It made me feel so proud to be chosen.

“I think when you come from that kind of background and you become a superstar, some people tend to forget their roots. Anquan obviously didn’t. And the fact that he’s giving back like he is, it’s super inspiring. I’m so grateful.”

Boldin presented Bolanos with her $10,000 check in person – a small gesture that made the gift feel more personal. She’s now a sophomore at Berkeley working on a double major in developmental studies and conservation. She hopes to one day work for the United Nations.

“Anquan inspired me to give back,” Bolanos said. “He’s a hero to many, and I just can’t thank him enough for helping me. He’s helping me accomplish my dreams.”

Bolanos is one of nine students so far to have received the Q81 Foundation Scholarship Award. Another is Thuyet Dao of Park Vista High School in Lake Worth, Fla. He won the scholarship this year and is now a bioengineering major at Stanford.

“He’s trying to give kids a chance that he might’ve not gotten if it wasn’t for football,” Dao said. “He wants other kids to have similar opportunities, and I’m trying to make the most of it.”

It’s kids’ success stories like those that make Boldin feel proudest – not his feats on the gridiron.

“Honestly, that’s why you do it,” Boldin said. “And like I tell kids, ‘Take advantage of the opportunity. If somebody is giving you something, the way that you pay them back is by being successful yourself.’”

“We had one kid who was kicked out of his high school system, got his GED, we gave him a scholarship, he graduated from college and now he works in the same school system that kicked him out. That’s what makes you feel like you’re making a difference.”

Boldin keeps in contact with all of the scholarship recipients. In fact, that’s one of the requirements. But that shouldn’t come as a surprise. Boldin leaves his mark everywhere he goes.

Even though he no longer plays for the Arizona Cardinals or Baltimore Ravens, he still maintains a presence in those communities. In the Phoenix area in particular, Boldin sponsors a dental program, which he launched after suffering a gruesome facial injury during a game in 2008. Boldin underwent several surgeries and found out that many people needed similar procedures but couldn’t afford the care.

“When you play in those cities, you make relationships outside of football,” Boldin said. “That’s what makes this game so unique. People who I probably never would’ve come in contact with but because of the game of football, I have relationships that I still have to this day. It’s important to affect as many communities as possible because those are the people that support you throughout your career.”

In those travels, Boldin has made lasting impressions on fellow NFL stars. And it started in Arizona with Larry Fitzgerald. The fearsome receiving duo, which led the Cardinals to the Super Bowl in 2008, traveled to Africa to assist in the humanitarian relief of the drought and hunger crisis in Ethiopia.

Boldin later made a second trip to Africa, this time to Senegal to learn more about human rights violations taking place in the gold mining industry. Boldin then testified before congress about the injustices he witnessed.

“I just have a great respect for him – playing with him for so many years and getting to know him as a man,” Fitzgerald said. “I’m honored and privileged to be able to call him a friend. He’s taught me a lot on and off the field. Just to see him and his wife be able to continue to do the work that they do, it’s truly encouraging.”

In Baltimore, Boldin took a young receiver by the name of Torrey Smith under his wing. Smith shadowed Boldin and eventually started a foundation of his own. His most significant accomplishment has been creating a reading room program that allowed close to 500 students in Baltimore-area schools access to over 700 books, electronic readers and a place to read.

“The biggest thing was him just being himself,” said Smith, who now of course is teammates with Boldin again in San Francisco. “It was never necessary to sit me down and talk, it was just the way he lives. It’s the way he is with his family, it’s the way he is in the community and the way he carries himself. He’s just so respectful. It’s nice to have a positive male role model to look up to. That’s Anquan.”

And then there’s Thomas Davis of the Carolina Panthers. Boldin, along with Aaron Rodgers of the Green Bay Packers, was one of three finalists for the Man of the Year award in 2014, which Davis won for his excellence on and off the field. Through the media blitz leading up the big announcement, Davis and Boldin became friends.

“Man, Anquan is a great dude,” Davis said. “He’s very genuine and very passionate about helping others. It’s tremendous what he’s doing in the community. The lives he’s been able to impact, it leaves me in awe.”

True to character, Boldin won’t campaign for himself when the prospect of being named “Man of the Year” is brought up. But that doesn’t stop others from doing so.

“I definitely feel that he should win the award. He’s very much deserving,” Davis said. “Hopefully he’ll be the recipient of that award this year just based on all the things he’s been able to accomplish.”

Added Smith, who was the Ravens nominee in 2014: “He should win it. They better give it to him this year. Just by how much he means to the kids he affects. He’s their hope. They idolize him. He deserves that honor.”

And finally Boldin’s dad, Carl: “Honestly, I think it would mean more to us than it would to him. Simply because we’ve seen the work he’s put in, and he’s such humble spirit. He’s always in the midst of doing, so he doesn’t see the big picture the whole time. We do, because we’re on the outside. I truly believe he should win, and I am just so thrilled to be his father.”

When discussing life after football, Boldin doesn’t appear to fear the future. Leaving the NFL someday will allow him to devote more time to his foundation. In the interim, Boldin wants to make sure the next generation feels the same sense of responsibility he feels.

So if you were wondering, “WWAD after football?” here’s the answer.

“There are a lot of guys that want to do stuff that just don’t know how to start,” Boldin said. “So having a foundation for 12 years now, I think we have a little bit of knowledge of how to go about it. I want to help other guys who want to give back to their communities.”

NaVorro Bowman

Fallout, Fall Guys and Fingertips: A Week in the NFL

By Peter King

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Lots of reasons to say “Wow” about NaVorro Bowman this morning.

Question to Bowman on Friday: “How long does it take you to get ready to practice or play right now?”

Bowman: “About two hours. The massaging and the bending, the flexing of the knee. Once I do that I have a five-minute period where it just needs to relax and then I’m ready to go.”

Question: “Before the injury, how long would it take you to be ready?”

Bowman: “Nothing. No time.”

What a story. And what a factor he needs to be. You might say it’s almost as important for Bowman to be great for the Niners to win this season as it is for Colin Kaepernick to have a bounce-back year. Look what happened to San Francisco’s D this off-season. No Justin Smith; retired. No Patrick Willis; retired. No Aldon Smith; cut. No Chris Borland to train as the next great inside ‘backer; retired, shockingly.

So the heat’s on Bowman, and from watching him at practice Friday (he was a traffic cop at practice, very mobile, and more vocal than I recall) and talking to him afterward, he likes the idea of the pressure.

Bowman sure knows how to make an entrance. Until Sunday night against Dallas, Bowman hadn’t played in a game since shredding multiple left knee ligaments on the ugly goal-line play in the NFC Championship Game in Seattle in January 2014. He played three plays against the Cowboys. From his spot in the nerve center of the Niners defense, Bowman stoned Darren McFadden up the middle for a one-yard gain on first down. He stoned McFadden over right tackle on second down; loss of one. He stopped running back Lance Dunbar on a dumpoff pass from Tony Romo on third down; loss of one. Three plays, three tackles, two of them for losses. That was an impressive three minutes of football right there.

He attributed his strong series to the mental work he did in his year off. “You just try to better yourself,” Bowman told reporters after the game. “I think that’s what the greats do. They find ways to learn in different ways, not just as a player. That’s what the year off gave me. I just want to show that I’m a student of game and not just player.”

On Friday, Bowman didn’t have much trepidation talking about the fateful day, or fateful play, when his left knee got torqued to the side and collapsed by 550 pounds of football player late in the loss at Seattle. “I thought I ended my career,” Bowman said Friday afternoon in the bowels of Levi’s Stadium. There was no emotion about it. Very clinical. “I knew how my leg was, and how my knee was going off to the side, and you don’t want to see that. Then Dr. [James] Andrews told me there was a possibility I wouldn’t get back to the way I was. So anytime I felt pain going through the rehab, I just thought of that and fought through that.”

Two hours of prep work, daily. Just to be able to practice. Seventeen months of arduous, painful work to try to be NaVorro Bowman, All-Pro linebacker, again ... while so much of the team is crashing and burning around him.

Has it been worth it?

Pause. Three, four seconds.

"I don't play this game for money," he said. "I play it for respect and ultimately to make it to the Hall of Fame. That's what drives me. In order to be the best, this work comes with it, and I'm willing to fight through it."

He said he wants to eventually play pain-free, and he wants to feel like he did two years ago, when he was at the top of his game—and at the top of the game for any inside linebacker playing. He and Willis, together, were state of the art, and no combination was close for second place at inside 'backer among 3-4 teams. He said he doesn't think he'll feel that way all season, and he's not sure exactly how to describe the difference in the knee; he just knows it's not the same as it was two summers ago.

"I see it coming now," Bowman said. "I can see the light, and that's what's driving me. When camp first started I was able to hit a spin move and that didn't hurt so now it's, Can I run through a person? Or get fallen on? Or be able to get up off the ground and not say Ahhhh! [In discomfort.] Those are the things I am still worried about, but it's going to come one day. But right now, the knee's on my mind."

He's getting used to a lot of new faces. The team's been blown up, from the coaching staff to the defense, since he last played. Clinical Bowman voice again. "I embrace change," he said. "We all have to adapt to change. The coaches have jobs, we have jobs. The fact that they need me as a player and as a leader, that's what drives me also."

I find one thing about the Niner dynamic fascinating right now. Bowman and Borland, health permitting, were set to be the next great combo platter of inside linebacker for the next three or four years. Bowman's injury was one of the factors that made Borland play so much last year—and, it turns out, he played very well.

So here's Bowman, who stonies people, playing. And Borland isn't. Bowman, a Harry Carson block-of-granite type, and Willis keyed a defense that went 14 straight games in 2011 without allowing a rushing touchdown. Three times he was first-team all-pro, the classic kind of run-stuffer who also had the ability to turn and run with tight ends. Bowman's fought through it all, and Borland chose another path. Concerned about the impact of football on his long-term health—a rising tide among current players—Borland walked away from the game after one starry season.

"I was shocked," Bowman said. "I was shocked because he is so young and he's put so much time into the game and to walk away from it after your first successful year in the NFL, that was mind-boggling to me. We are all grown men and he's done his research and made his choice so, but ... well, for me, you're going to have to carry me off the field."

They've already done that once. In Seattle. That's one of the things that makes this comeback compelling. There's nothing dramatic about the way Bowman says this. It's simply his ethos. He's a man making a choice, the way Borland made his. And the 49ers, in this seismic season, need Bowman desperately, and he knows it.

The San Francisco 49ers linebacker was joined by his teammates Thursday night, who put on their aprons and served patrons a three-course meal at the Fairmont San Jose.

All proceeds went to Bowman's "4th & Goal Foundation." The linebacker's charity was established in 2014 to help serve underprivileged youth around the Bay Area. A ticket to the dinner went for $250, with a $350 ticket earning each guest a signature series autograph football. Guests were also able to purchase additional signature footballs for $150.

Some of the other 49ers players in attendance to support their teammate included wide receiver Torrey Smith, linebacker Michael Wilhoite, nose tackle Ian Williams, safety Antoine Bethea, defensive tackle Tony Jerod-Eddie, wide receiver Quinton Patton and many others. Head coach Jim Tomsula and defensive coordinator Eric Mangini were also on-hand at the Fairmont's Club Regent.

In addition to the fine food and wine pairings, there were silent and live auctions featuring a variety of items. The silent auction had rare sports memorabilia including autographs from 49ers legends Joe Montana, Jerry Rice, Steve Young, Bill Walsh, Dwight Clark and Ronnie Lot. Memorabilia from other sports greats included Muhammed Ali, Steph Curry and Tiger Woods. The live auction had additional memorabilia as well as unique vacation experiences.

One of the best moments of the night was when Tomsula and Mangini were bidding against each other for a signed Bowman jersey. The head coach eventually won the bidding war for a sizeable price, resulting in a huge applause from everyone on hand.

Bowman's goal for his foundation is to build play zones around the Bay Area that will provide state-of-the-art play grounds to low-income elementary schools so that their students will have a safe outdoor environment to increase social, emotional and cognitive skills as well as a space for increased physical activity.

"I wasn't too privileged growing up," Bowman said. "I had to scratch and claw and find things to do as a child. And me being where I am today, I'm able to provide something, especially for kids ... who don't have as much as the next kid. So I really want to provide inner-city, low-income students in the Bay Area with a safe place to play."

The first play zone will be installed in the summer of 2016 and the hope is to impact the lives of 10,000 children by the end of 2017.

In addition to the play zones, Bowman will host an annual "Operation Santa Claus" event during the holiday season. The "4th & Goal Foundation" will partner with a local retailer and provide a festive holiday event for 50 low-income families. At the event, each family will be provided with a meal and a unique holiday shopping experience.

Trent Brown

By Eric Branch

After 15 seasons at Georgia Military College, football coach Bert Williams knows the drill: His players often won't show much discipline in the kitchen when they go home for winter break.

"They come back in after Christmas," Williams said, "and it's like 'Hey, it looks like you ate a whole turkey.'"

In the case of Trent Brown in 2011, it appeared the offensive tackle had inhaled a poultry farm after the holidays.

Brown, a seventh-round pick of the 49ers, is a mammoth individual. And he was at his largest in the midst of his two-year tenure at Georgia Military College: Brown, the tallest (6-8 ½) and heaviest (355) player at this year's combine, has said he peaked at 387 pounds during his time at GMC.

That was during his freshman season, which he began around 340 pounds. However, Williams said Brown began adding weight during the season ("In the cafeteria, he could eat anything," he said) and truly ballooned during winter break, which spanned more than a month.

The good news for the 49ers: Brown said earlier this month he weighs 350 pounds, which Williams identified as close to an ideal weight for a behemoth with surprisingly nifty feet. Brown played basketball before he switched to football for his final two years at Westover High in Albany, Ga. He ran a 5.29-second 40-yard dash at the combine, which is impressive given his size.

"He's a big old athletic rascal," Williams said. "... He's a guy that probably needs to be under 350 to showcase the speed that he has, but still have that mass."

Mass has never been an issue for Brown. He wears size-18 cleats, has a 46-inch waist, had the longest wingspan (87 3/8 inches) at the combine and made an immediate impression when he arrived at the University of Florida in 2013.

"Trenton Brown is the biggest person I ever saw in my life," said Gators defensive end Dante Fowler, the No. 3 pick in this year's draft, shortly after meeting Brown. "... I never want Trenton to fall on me. If he does, I'm pretty sure my body will be imprinted in the grass."

Brown arrives in the NFL as a project. He started just 11 of 23 games at Florida and needs to improve his technique and strength. He had 20 reps of 225 pounds at the combine, matching the fourth-fewest among the 37 offensive linemen that lifted.

And Williams believes Brown's two seasons at GMC have prepared him well for the hard work ahead.

AT GMC, Brown was a member of the Corps of Cadets, wore a uniform on campus, had a regular 5:30 a.m. wake-up call and room inspections and signed an honor code, pledging to "not lie, cheat, steal, or tolerate those who do."

"It is a great laboratory for personal development for young people," said Williams, who is also the athletic director. "It's probably a new experience for most of them. There is some military training, but not a lot. It's really holding these kids to a standard of appearance, a standard of behavior and having some high expectations for them."

“There’s no show-up-and-get-your-A classes. You’re going to lean the benefit of hard work. You’re going to learn the benefit of discipline. We’re trying to make a difference in you as a person. Not just make you a better student. Not just make you a better football player.”

GMC, one of five military junior colleges in the nation, has had 38 alums in the NFL since 1995. And Brown, who was lightly recruited in high school, became the latest because of a tip Williams received from a former coaching colleague during his senior season at Westover.

Williams traveled to see Brown play and was intrigued by his size and agility, which allowed him to dominate despite his inexperience. At GMC, Brown discovered far more discipline was required to dominate at a higher level. He was a second-team NJCAA All-American as a sophomore.

“He started to learn that he had to work every day to get better,” Williams said. “He would actually say ‘There are some guys out here that can beat me if I’m not serious about what I’m doing. I can’t just show up and be the dude.’”

“For him, the biggest thing was to learn to be challenged. To accept the challenge. And learn that he had to work hard every day to realize his potential. He started to figure those things out when he was here.”

Brown still needs to learn plenty, which explains why he was pick No. 244.

Niners general manager Trent Baalke has noted Brown’s intriguing potential, while acknowledging his learning curve is as big as his frame.

Garrett Celek

Garrett Celek Credits His Brother and Vernon Davis for NFL Success

Life in the NFL is an uphill climb for an undrafted free agent.

The most common route to an active roster spot for such players is through the practice squad. Garrett Celek broke that mold, making the San Francisco 49ers 53-man roster after not being selected in the 2012 draft.

Three years later, the former Michigan State Spartan is a starter in the 49ers offense. Celek's five receptions in 2015 are already a career high, and he's played more than 50 percent of the team's snaps in each of the first two games.

Knock on wood before reading this sentence, but the best part about this year for Celek has been his continued health throughout the offseason program and the early part of the season.

In 2014, Celek missed the first 11 games with back and hamstring injuries. Three games after returning to the field, a foot injury landed him on injured reserved, ending the tight end's season.

"It's a big blessing for me," Celek said. "Last year was tough. I had surgery and missed a majority of the season, and then I got hurt again after three games. It put a damper on the whole year."

When asked about his journey as a professional football player, Celek took the opportunity to give thanks to two veteran teammates who first showed him the ropes.

"It's a dream come true," the tight end said. "My rookie year, I wasn't sure how things were going to pan out, but I made the team. I was fortunate to learn from Vernon (Davis) and Delanie (Walker). I feel like I learned quite a bit over the years from those guys. Now I'm where I'm at today, and it just feels good."

Celek also credited his brother Brent, a nine-year tight end for the Philadelphia Eagles, for his development as a football player. Brent (30) is three years older than Garrett (27) and made sure to always look after his little brother.

"He always had things to say to me," Garrett said. "Especially after games, he was always watching my games and telling me what I did wrong and what I needed to do right. In the offseason, he and I always work out together. He's always been there behind my back and supporting me."

The brothers don't talk as much during the season as they'd like. That's not surprising given the demanding football schedule and the three-hour time difference from the Bay Area to the East Coast.

Even from afar, both are always keeping tabs on how the other fares each Sunday

"After one of us has a tough game, we'll give each other a call and try to raise each other up," Garrett said.

Brotherly Love

The brothers, even as they got older, found a way to mess with each other and make everything a competition. Garrett recalled one specific instance when their horsing around nearly remodeled the Celek household.

"A good moment was when he was in his second year in the NFL, and I was in college," Garrett said. "Normally we always mix it up, we fight each other, usually just wrestling. (This time,) I picked him up and I slammed him into the wall. I swear we almost went through the wall. From that point on, we realized we were too big for that. We haven't fought since then."

The wall didn't break, but a visible dent still commemorates the tussle.

"My mom was a little upset," Garrett said.

A Unique Education

Ever met a packaging major? That's what Garrett specialized in at Michigan State after his football schedule wouldn't accommodate a mechanical engineering major. Garrett made sure to clear up a common misconception when asked about his degree.

"I wasn't training to be a UPS driver," he said. "It's a little bit different than that. You design packages or consult with a company on cost savings."

Garrett said Michigan State had the No. 1 packaging program in the country.

Service Trip to Haiti

Garrett was one of four 49ers players to travel to Haiti for a service trip during the offseason. You can read the full recap here, but Garrett gave his take on the trip.

"That was a big eye-opener for myself and my teammates," Celek said. "When we got there, I didn't know what to expect. I didn't know a whole lot about Haiti. I knew about the earthquake and how that devastated the country, but really, you don't understand until you get there. I don't want to say it was depressing, but it was sad to see some of the conditions that the people were living in."

"One of my biggest takeaways I had from the trip was how little all those people had, but how happy they still were with what they did have."

Quinton Dial

Quinton Dial dedicates San Francisco 49ers' opener to fallen fan

Alex Fernandez won't be able to attend a San Francisco 49ers game this season, as he had hoped. Seeing the NFL team play at Levi's Stadium was an item on the 20-year-old Visalia, Calif., man's bucket list, but brain cancer took his life on July 10.

The 49ers kick off their 2015 season at home on Sept. 14 in a Monday night game against the Minnesota Vikings. San Francisco defensive lineman Quinton Dial will have Fernandez on his mind that night.

Suffering from terminal brain cancer, Fernandez stopped his treatments earlier this year to concentrate on a list of things he wanted to do before he died. A 49ers game was one of those things. Dial tried to give him the next best thing.

The former Alabama standout and his NFL team sent Fernandez a package of 49ers gear in June -- a team blanket, jerseys from quarterback Colin Kaepernick and linebacker Patrick Willis, an autographed football, caps and a poster. Dial signed a jersey and included a video message for Fernandez.

"I want Alex Fernandez to know that he has made a difference in my life by sharing his story," Dial messaged. "He is my hero, and people like him encourage me to continue our work through our non-profit QD's Kids. I lead this non-profit in order to make 'moments' count for all children and adults who are combating challenges in their life. My first game is going to be dedicated to him for being a brave hero and for making a difference in the lives of others."

Dial's QD's Kids Foundation states that its mission "is to show love and support to underprivileged kids today so they will have the best opportunity to be our leaders of tomorrow."

Fernandez and his supporters planned a concert on July 15 in Lindsay, Calif., to raise money for young people like him who are too old to participate in the Make A Wish Foundation. The fundraiser went on as planned -- a day after Fernandez's funeral. For the memorial service, Fernandez's father drew a picture of a tractor-trailer with the words "Pay it forward" on the side of the trailer and a 49ers logo and the number 92 on the back. That's Dial's jersey number.

Dial invited Fernandez's family to attend the 49ers' opening game as his guests.

What Dial will be doing in that game is up in the air. Injuries limited him to three games in 2013, his rookie season. Last year, Dial stepped into the void at nose tackle. With Glenn Dorsey out for the season with a torn biceps, Ian Williams went down with a season-ending leg injury in the ninth game. Dial came in to make a pivotal overtime sack of Drew Brees in a win over the New Orleans Saints and went on to start six games.

"I remember (defensive line coach) Jim Tomsula told me that I'm going to get an opportunity, but he didn't know when it would be," Dial told the team's official web site. "He told me to be ready, so I practiced every week like I was the starting guy. I watched my film, I went over the plays every night, and once my number was called, I hit the ground running."

With the 49ers reporting for training camp in Santa Clara, Calif., on July 31, Dorsey and Williams are back, but last year's starting ends in San Francisco's 3-4 alignment -- Justin Smith and Ray McDonald -- are gone.

Tomsula is now the 49ers' head coach, and as Dial made a splash during the team's offseason workouts, he was a Dial-booster, saying he thought the former Clay-Chalkville prep star could play outside on the defensive line, too.

"I've been focusing on a lot of things like getting faster and stronger. And I think I've done that," Dial said on the possibility of playing defensive end. "I've been working on pre-snap reads and making sure they're on point, too. I want to be a better football player to help my team win."

In addition to Fernandez, Dial might have another young man on his mind during the 49ers' first game. He and his wife welcomed their first child, a son, in May.

"Just looking at my son and knowing how I grew up is going to be totally different than how I'm going to bring him up," Dial told the 49ers' web site. "I'm going to show him the ropes, show him to be respectful to people, women. I'm just going to try to be the best father I can be."

Eli Harold

49ers rookie Eli Harold eager to lead – and be heard

By Matt Barrows
Sacramento Bee
July 1, 2015

The Virginia locker room was quiet – maybe too quiet – before the kickoff at 17th-ranked TCU in 2012. So Eli Harold broke it.

“Out of nowhere comes his voice, and he starts getting all the guys riled up, getting the guys amped,” said Demetrious Nicholson, a Virginia defensive back. “And the one thing he said – and I remember it like it was yesterday – was, ‘I don’t care if I’m a freshman. I’m going to lead.’”

Eighteen-year-old freshmen, as Harold was at the time, typically are seen and not heard in college locker rooms. Harold, however, always has felt compelled to take charge.

That’s the way he was in high school, where he lined up at defensive end, quarterback, running back and wide receiver, sometimes in the same game. Early in his Virginia career, he rallied the freshman squad at practice and made sure the players arrived on time to lift weights during the week. As a junior last season, he was a member of the team’s leadership council, and his voice typically was the one booming from the center of the pregame huddle.

He hasn’t been shy about his desire for a similar role with the 49ers, who drafted him in the third round last month to play outside linebacker.

“I don’t know what it is,” Harold said. “It’s just something God blessed me with. Obviously, I’m not going to overstep my boundaries. But I feel like in the near future, I can definitely help be ‘that’ guy, that voice that people will listen to.”

Speaking up is in his blood. His brother, Walter, is a pastor in their native Virginia Beach, Va. Walter is 23 years older than Eli and, initially, was not someone to be emulated.

Walter was charismatic and charming as a young man, and his voice was so rich and full that he figured he might become a rhythm and blues singer. He even recorded an album.

But he also was trouble. Walter, 44, estimates he might have been picked up by police as many as six times one particularly sketchy year, on offenses ranging from driving on a suspended license to drug possession. And Walter doesn’t hide from his crack cocaine-dealing past.

“You do what you do,” he said. “I wasn’t trying to be a kingpin. But it was easy, fast money. You could get anything you want. Anything you want.”

Walter said he was facing up to 12 years in prison on drug charges when the judge hearing his case learned about the R&B album and asked to listen to it. According to Walter, the judge was impressed and decided the young man standing before him had enough talent to shed his criminal lifestyle. He reduced the sentence.

Walter rewarded the decision by cleaning up. But it wasn’t the recording industry that saved him.

“I was in and out of jail and always in trouble with the law,” he said. “And I just got tired. I got tired of the lifestyle. I figured I had tried everything. Why not try Jesus?”

Walter had three sons who were around Eli’s age. They are technically his nephews, but Eli grew up with them, played sports with them and always has considered them brothers.

One of them, Forrest, died suddenly while playing recreational basketball in 2010 of what was later determined to be an undiagnosed heart condition. He was only 20. Another nephew, Sage, was a pass rusher at James Madison and signed with Kansas City as an undrafted free agent last month. Eli and Sage are training together in Virginia Beach during the long lull before training camps begin.

Eli Harold largely has been shaped by those no longer in his life.

In 2011, just two months after Forrest's sudden passing, Eli's mother died of pancreatic cancer, prompting him to move in with Walter's family. The double blow floored Eli. But it also focused him.

"From that moment, I felt like I was a ball of fire," he said of his mother's passing. "Everyone I touched, they felt it."

His father mostly was absent when he was growing up, but he, too, has provided motivation.

"Not having his own biological dad around, I think that helped drive him to be a better man than his father was," Walter said. "I know that's an underlying motivation for him."

Walter served the dual role of father and older brother. The guidance ranged from small things – enforcing curfew, making young Eli take out the trash – to more powerful concepts. Eli had a front-row seat, literally, as Walter shed the streets and began to grow his congregation.

It began in 2004 with Walter, his wife and their kids as the only members. Today, approximately 200 members listen to Walter's voice fill the church on Sundays.

Eli has said he, too, would like to become a pastor. For now, he's content to preach inside a football locker room.

Said Mike Moore, who is expected to take over Harold's pass-rushing role with Virginia: "He's got one of those voices that you can't not listen to. He's got a voice that grabs your attention."

Jarryd Hayne

Australian Hayne living the American dream

By Ian Ransom
Reuters
September 6, 2015

MELBOURNE (Reuters) - Jarryd Hayne thanked God in his first tweet after learning that he had made the final roster for the San Francisco 49ers, bringing him within tantalizing reach of his NFL dream.

As a 27-year-old rugby league player with no prior experience of American football, the Australian's mission to defy the soul-crushing odds would truly seem touched by the divine.

"Crazy," was his astonished manager's response last year when Hayne spoke of walking away from a wildly successful career in Australia's National Rugby League competition.

His manager's skepticism was shared by many in the sports-mad nation where Hayne tearfully announced in October he would leave home-town Sydney and his long-time club, the Parramatta Eels, to pursue an improbable American dream.

Few Australians follow NFL closely, but plenty are aware of the glitz of the Super Bowl, the eye-popping player salaries and the cut-throat nature of American sports.

A big fish in his small home pond, Hayne would head to the United States a bottom-feeder, though one endowed with extraordinary talent and a fierce determination.

Less than two percent of the 70,000 players at American colleges can hope for a professional career but like a typical California dreamer, Hayne felt he had nothing to lose.

"I didn't feel like (my career) was challenging me to the point where I'll now be challenged," he said before jetting off.

The son of a Fiji rugby league international, Hayne was born with football in his veins but his effortless rise into the NRL elite sprang from a childhood of adversity.

He was raised in government housing in Sydney's working class west by a single mother who grafted hard to help her son build a career in the top-flight.

A high school drop-out, Hayne had a stunning debut season as an 18-year-old NRL rookie in 2006 but literally dodged a bullet two years later.

Out drinking with team mates, Hayne was caught up in a drive-by shooting in Sydney's notorious Kings Cross nightclub district.

Shaken by the incident, Hayne became a devout Christian after a visit to his father's homeland Fiji and won the NRL's 'Dally M' medal as the competition's most valuable player the following year.

An explosive fullback whose raised-arm celebrations after scoring became known as the 'Hayne Plane', he secured a second Dally M medal in 2014.

After taking some low-profile training sessions with local American football players, Hayne dropped his NFL bombshell in October, reasoning that his prowess as a fullback in rugby league might lend itself to a new career as a running back.

Meeting the 49ers' Jim Tomsula would prove a pivotal moment, with the coach having experience dealing with rugby converts during a past stint in NFL Europe.

"He struck me as a bright guy. He struck me as a fearless guy," Tomsula told Australian broadcaster Fox Sports on Sunday.

"He walked away from that to try something new. That's very courageous. It takes a lot of guts but also takes a lot of confidence.

"If you've got those two things you can do a lot."

Hayne impressed scouts at a number of NFL clubs but he signed a three-year contract with the 49ers as an undrafted free agent in March, another milestone on a long journey.

In the end, it took just two pre-season appearances for Hayne to mark himself indelibly as an NFL contender, with his highlights in the 49ers' number 38 jersey going viral.

The hype raging in his home country began to infect seasoned American pundits.

"For a guy that was a rugby player, I'll tell you he's really a football player," Hall of Fame NFL coach John Madden told American radio.

The 49ers can be assured of a fiercely loyal fan-base from Australia if they name Hayne for his NFL debut against the Minnesota Vikings, and Tomsula relished the attention his unlikely recruit had brought.

"He's by no means a finished product," he said. "But the type of person he is and the approach he has taken, he's the kind of player we want here."

Jarryd Hayne's enjoying the simple life

By Danny Weidler
The Sydney Morning Herald
April 25, 2015

Jarryd Hayne is no stranger to roughing it – he grew up in housing commission in Campbelltown and now he's living the simple life in every sense as he chases his NFL dream.

Hayne walked away from around $9 million in contract earnings and has set up base in Santa Clara, which is about an hour's drive from San Francisco.

It's not considered a flashy area and he is sharing an apartment with another NFL hopeful. The place he is living in is about 30square metres – it has no kitchen and to say the house is basic is about right. Hayne has to eat out or eat at the 49ers facility. He is driving around in a low-level hire car and has only been into the city of San Francisco once.

"Jarryd doesn't need anything fancy in his life," his mum Jodie said. "That's not what he is about. He had to share a bed with me until he was nine – I slept closer to the door just in case anyone tried to break in. I used to nanny at places and Jarryd would have to come with me.

"He always had a footy or a bat and ball to play with and he always ate well, but he never had the luxuries. But it didn't bother him, he was happy just playing sport.

"If he is living a basic life over there, it wouldn't worry him for a minute. That's not what he values. Money isn't what drives him. He is over there because it's his dream and he is happy.

"The good thing for Jarryd is that he has some family support over there. The Fijian side of his family is over there and they are taking him to church on Saturday. Jarryd is still keeping in touch with stuff back home. He was straight on the phone when he heard about the storms to check on his mum."

They've had a couple of nights out but his social life has otherwise been very limited.

His days are the same – train, eat, study the play book and play on his Xbox. And he couldn't be happier.

The problem Hayne is facing is that as much as he wants to learn in practice he can't get the personal coaching that he needs. If he hires a specialist coach they then would get access to the plays the 49ers are using, and he is unable to go down that path.

Hayne is not having any issues with the physical aspect of the training. He knows the real issue is learning the game from scratch.

Those who have spent time with Hayne say they have never seen him more relaxed, focused or determined. He is engaging to be around and the time away from the NRL has given him a broader outlook on life.

Tony Jerod-Eddie

By Eric Branch
San Francisco Chronicle
August 29, 2015

DENVER — Before Von Miller was turning NFL offensive tackles inside out, the Broncos' Pro Bowl outside linebacker was turning teammates into housemates.

During his days at DeSoto High in suburban Dallas, Miller twice asked his parents if a buddy could live with the family. Each time, they got out the welcome mat.

"I was the type of kid that I didn't bring home pets and frogs and stuff," Miller said. "I brought home people."

This week, 10 years after they first lived together, Jerod-Eddie and Miller discussed their bond during the 49ers' joint practices with the Broncos, which preceded their preseason meeting Saturday night in Denver.

Said Jerod-Eddie: "That's my brother, like, literally."

Well, not really. But you get the idea: These guys are close.

Jerod-Eddie, who was a year behind Miller in high school, joined him at Texas A&M because "Von basically made me promise that I'd go there." And they've evidently since made a pledge to spend every second together, when the NFL schedule doesn't interfere.

Their recent offseason was typical: They trained in Orange County, Miami and Dallas, attended the ESPY awards show in Los Angeles and went to the Pro Bowl in Glendale, Ariz., where Miller made his third appearance in the game.

Miller's mom, Gloria, isn't surprised by their joined-at-the-hip schedule. She said the high school friends basically became family members when Jerod-Eddie moved in.

"They rode to school together," she said. "They were together all day. They practiced together. They came home together. They got in trouble together. Yep, they were brothers."

Their bond formed in 2005 when Jerod-Eddie's mom, Latunya, was moving the family to Irving, Texas. The 20-mile relocation would place Jerod-Eddie in a different school district, but Miller casually mentioned a solution when he heard the news: Why don't you live with us?

After a long conversation between their moms, who have also become close friends, the arrangement was made: Jerod-Eddie would become part of a "family" of six that also included Von's little brother, Vins, and another DeSoto teammate, Adrian Abner.

Jerod-Eddie even stayed with the Millers for his senior season when Von, a freshman at Texas A&M, was 170 miles away in College Station.

"It was kind of unspoken and understood Tony would stay," Gloria said. "Von brought him home, so he was ours."

No kidding. Gloria refers to him as her "baby Tony," and Jerod-Eddie calls Gloria and Von Sr., who own a power supply business, "Mom" and "Dad." The Millers treated Jerod-Eddie like their son, providing him with a car and the house rules: colored clothes in that laundry basket, white clothes in that basket and make your bed before going to school.

The last rule: "Nobody slams the door but me," Gloria said.

Jerod-Eddie and Miller offer more evidence opposites attract: Their personalities are about as different as their professional paths.

Miller, the No. 2 pick in the 2011 draft who has 49 sacks in his first four seasons, is exuberant and outgoing. His life-of-the-party personality has even landed him in trouble: He was suspended for six games in 2013 for violating the NFL's substance-abuse policy.

Meanwhile, Jerod-Eddie, 25, an undrafted free agent with four starts in his three-year career, is a year younger than Miller but plays the role of let's-get-serious older sibling.

Miller explains the dynamic like this: When they were workout partners, Jerod-Eddie was always ready by 7 a.m., while Miller says he "might be a little inconsistent."

"He's always the voice of reason when I'm with him," Miller said. "And I'm always the guy to get him to loosen up. So we make a perfect match."

Miller is one of the NFL's best pass-rushers, while Jerod-Eddie isn't guaranteed to make the 49ers' 53-man roster. He'll have a job in the league this season, but he's part of a laundry list of talented defensive linemen on the roster.

Last week, 49ers general manager Trent Baalke, recognizing his surplus of capable tight ends, dealt two of them in trades with New England and Washington. On Thursday, a day after he had dinner with Broncos general manager John Elway, he acknowledged he might not be done dealing.

"We're always looking," Baalke said. "We feel we've got good depth in several areas. And it's no mystery to everybody that you can't keep them all. So we'll look at opportunities to better this football team any way we can."

Yes, it's probably a long shot, but it's possible the high-school and college teammates could play together in the NFL, perhaps as soon as this season.

Miller says such a scenario would be like a "movie" or a "fairy tale." Jerod-Eddie wasn't as expressive, but he smiled when asked about the possibility of joining forces in the NFL so they could remain joined at the hip.

"Oh, yeah," he said. "We talk about that all the time."

Kingsport Native and San Francisco 49er Daniel Kilgore Returns to Support Tribe Games

By Steve Wilmoth

May 8, 2015

KINGSPORT -- Acts of philanthropy comes in two forms – money and time.

Current San Francisco 49er and Kingsport native Daniel Kilgore does both for the Tribe Games.

Kilgore's heart for special needs kids grew from volunteering in adapted physical education classes in the Watauga County [North Carolina] School System while playing at Appalachian State.

"Jimmy reached out to me because he knew that I had a heart for these kids," said Kilgore. "Jimmy knew my interests and asked me if I wanted to be a part of it.

"I told him I wanted to take over," laughed Kilgore.

Kilgore counts himself fortunate after participating previously with the track and field and swimming portions of the Tribe games. His mother is involved in the bowling event.

Kilgore wasn't a casual observer either. He was coach, motivator, fan and cheerleader for all 85 participating kids all wrapped up into one NFL-sized package.

"To have that many kids here and all the helpers, the students at the high school level helping, speaks volumes about the school system and this community" added Kilgore. "I think it's awesome for these kids to get out here and do something where they are not sitting in the classroom and they are outside doing track and field."

It's not just the off-season where Kilgore supports his community. Kilgore and fiancé Megan Tolly regularly participate in community service projects in the San Francisco area during the regular season.

"Mondays are our days, our off days," noted Kilgore. "We have all kinds of events, working with kids with disabilities or going to San Quentin and talking to felons. It doesn't matter what it is."

One particular Monday last season, however, Kilgore and Tolly had other plans. It was the 49ers' bye week and Tolly had already flown home.

The two plan to be married this summer and planning the wedding was on the agenda. Along with visiting Tolly's grandfather in the hospital.

Kilgore was to join following the 49ers' Sunday night contest at Denver. The Sunday night ESPN game is arguably the league's biggest stage each week. The game against the Broncos, however, was primed for NFL history.

Denver quarterback Peyton Manning was two touchdown passes away from tying Brett Favre's career record of 508. Three TD tosses would give Manning the record.

Manning had the record before halftime and the 49ers trailed 21-3. Kilgore said the 49er offense made several offensive adjustments at halftime.

The 49ers were driving early in the third quarter but faced a third down. Near the end of a Frank Gore carry on a draw play, disaster struck. Denver linebacker Brandon Marshall inadvertently ran into the back of Kilgore’s left leg. It’s every offensive lineman’s worst nightmare.

Kilgore’s reaction was immediate. Crumpled to the Sports Authority Field at Mile High Stadium turf, Kilgore waved to the 49ers’ sideline for assistance.

“I just got tangled up from behind with a linebacker,” recalled Kilgore. “I knew right away what had happened. I ended up fracturing my leg, my fibula. It’s the biggest injury I’ve ever had in sports.”

Kilgore was carted off the field, to a rousing ovation by Bronco fans who had plenty to cheer about that night.

“One thing that was special was the way the fans at Mile High really stood up and gave me a great ovation,” added Kilgore. “It speaks volumes about their organization and fans. Kudos to the Broncos for winning and playing a great game and Peyton Manning doing what he does best.”

Following the 42-17 loss to the Broncos, Kilgore flew back to San Francisco with the team. Tolly flew back across the country the next day.

“Security picked her up, brought her to our townhouse and she drove me to the surgery on Tuesday,” smiled Kilgore.

Kilgore’s recovery has been steady, but slow. Still, rushing back in order to impress the new 49er coaching staff isn’t an option.

“Recovery is going well, I’ve still got some time,” said Kilgore. “I’m being smart and not rushing back into anything. The biggest thing for me is to feel comfortable at going full speed. I am healing, there is progress in all the scans we are doing. We still have a lot of off-season left.”

While Kilgore can’t participate in workouts, he’s still actively learning the new system of head coach Jim Tomsula and his staff.

“It’s been good for me to sit back and watch what the new staff is doing and learn the new system,” Kilgore explained. “It’s had its advantages, but also disadvantages in not being out there.”

Surgery and the initial stages of his recovery also kept Kilgore out of turmoil surrounding now ex-San Francisco coach Jim Harbaugh. Instead, Kilgore overwhelmingly approves of the new hires.

“I love the new staff,” said Kilgore. “Coach Tomsula has done a wonderful job with how he controls and manages the teams from meetings and how practice is run is outstanding. He’s got coaches on his staff that are invested into getting the players better for wherever they may play, not just to win ball games.”

Erik Pears

A decade later, 49ers lineman Pears still grinding away

By Eric Branch
San Francisco Chronicle
June 3, 2015

Many NFL rookies believe they are destined for greatness, but Erik Pears was different: In 2005, the undrafted offensive lineman from Colorado State had visions of the 9-to-5 grind, not grandeur.

In fact, Pears' early goals in pro football were so modest that he laughed when recently asked about his mind-set as a 22-year-old.

"Honestly, coming out of college it was always a dream to make an NFL team and be productive," Pears said. "But my thinking was, put my head down, work hard and maybe I can make enough money to buy a decent car to get some job interviews or something."

A decade later, Pears, 32, who spent his first season on the Broncos' practice squad, has to yet to ditch his shoulder pads for a suit. The jack-of-all-trades offensive lineman has carved out a nine-year career that's included 86 starts and stops with five teams, along with a 2006 detour in Germany with the Cologne Centurions in NFL Europe.

The 49ers were attracted to Pears' experience and versatility when they signed him in March to a two-year, $4.7 million contract with $1 million guaranteed. Pears, the fourth-oldest member of the team, has the second-most starts among the 49ers' offensive linemen behind left tackle Joe Staley (114). Pears has started games at right tackle (58), right guard (16), left tackle (10) and left guard (2).

He will have the opportunity to compete for the starting spot vacated by the departure of Pro Bowl left guard Mike Lupati, who signed with the Cardinals in free agency. He could also assume the backup swing-tackle role assumed last year by Jonathan Martin, who was waived in March.

"I'm looking to do whatever they want me to do," Pears said. "Whatever they ask. I've started games at right tackle, right guard, left tackle, left guard. ... I've played sub tight end. I've been just about everywhere. Wherever I can be of value, that's what I want to do."

Pears, who turns 33 this month, is most comfortable at tackle, the position he played in college and for most of his NFL career. He made 68 of his first 70 starts at tackle before he started 16 games for the Bills at right guard last year. It wasn't an easy transition for Pears, who at 6-foot-8, 316 pounds is taller than most interior linemen. He ranked 76th of 78 players at his position, according to Pro Football Focus' grading system.

"When I moved down to guard at the start of last year it was like, 'Wow, these guys are right on top of me. I can get my hands on them,'" Pears said. "Then you start learning the little nuances, the advantages and the disadvantages of being inside. It's just a learning curve, but ever since I've been a rookie I've been trying to learn stuff every day."

Pears has been playing right guard during practices in place of Alex Boone, who has not participated in the offseason program. Boone is expected to participate in next week's mandatory minicamp and report on time to training camp, which could set the stage for Pears to battle a group that includes Brandon Thomas and Joe Looney for the left-guard opening.

The favorite is the homegrown Thomas, a 2014 third-round pick who would have been selected higher if not for a torn ACL sustained shortly before last year's draft.

For his part, Pears remains focused on the process, not the outcome. On three occasions during a recent interview, he referenced his penchant for putting his head down and working hard. And why not? It's a formula that's worked surprisingly well so far.

"I'm still doing what I've been trying to do since day one," Pears said. "Be coachable, learn what they want out of the position and produce."

Bradley Pinion Explains How He Became a Punter

By Taylor Price

September 2, 2015

Hey Bradley Pinion, how did you become a punter?

This seems like a reasonable question for a rookie who is set to become the Niners new punter.

"It's a funny story," Pinion said on this week's "49ers Radio" podcast. "I used to hate punting. When I was little growing up, I was a field-goal kicker and a kick-off guy. My dad used to make me punt every single time we would go out there. I would be like, 'Dad, I really don't want to do it!' And he'd be like, 'No, you're going to do it.'

"Eventually, I became really good at punting and loved it. But it all started with a Christmas when I got a football – I used to play soccer growing up. I got a football for Christmas, my dad took me to a field, and he actually put the ball on his toe and told me to kick a field goal. It was like a 35-yard field goal. It went right down the middle with extra distance to spare.

"(After), he was like, 'Hang on, do that again.' I did the exact same thing, right down the middle. He said, 'You're not touching that thing again, we're going to get you professional help.' From then on, I really started getting help from a bunch of different coaches around the nation and just developed my craft."

Pinion went on to star at Clemson. He even left school early and was picked up by the 49ers in the fifth-round of the draft.

We asked the 6-foot-5, 229-pound punter all about the fundamentals of his job, and what he's learning from his coaches and veteran teammates.

We even played a game of "Name That Bradley," where the rookie was given clues about famous people with Bradley as either a first or last name.

Mike Purcell

Purcell's anonymity could be part of past

By Eric Branch
San Francisco Chronicle
August 23, 2015

A few months ago, 49ers backup nose tackle Mike Purcell was stopped by a fan while he was shopping at Costco.

"I was walking down the aisles," Purcell said. "The guy didn't want to stop and talk too long. He just said, 'Hey, you're Mike Purcell. Good luck next season.' That was it."

Indeed, that's all, folks.

So why does Purcell recall such an innocuous exchange and what makes it worth sharing? It's the only time Purcell has been recognized by a fan in public since he entered the NFL 27 months ago.

Purcell specializes in anonymity. He's a former undrafted free agent from a low-profile college (Wyoming) who has spent far more time on the practice squad (30 weeks) than the playing field (28 snaps) in his one-tackle NFL career. As of Saturday morning, his Twitter account had 1,092 followers, meaning he's not close to being the most popular Mike Purcell on the social media site (Mike Purcell in Miamisburg, Ohio, had 12,225 followers).

On Friday, however, Purcell acknowledged he might have blown his cover, thanks to his performance in last week's preseason opener in Houston. Purcell had six tackles in his 23-snap outing — a huge figure for a nose tackle — and the Texans gained 5 yards on the six running plays in which he had a stop. (Fittingly, Purcell was mistaken for 49ers offensive lineman Justin Renfrow — they are both wearing No. 64 this summer — on the Texans' broadcast).

Purcell, 24, had two of his tackles on a six-play goal-line sequence in which Houston couldn't score despite running five plays from the 1-yard line. On 2nd-and-goal from the 1, Purcell blasted through the middle and dumped running back Alfred Blue for a 3-yard loss.

After stepping into the spotlight in Houston, Purcell stepped to the podium three days later in Santa Clara to answer questions from reporters.

For Purcell, it qualified as a media blitz. And he doesn't want it to distract him from his next assignment: He's focused on showing he's a force, not a fluke, when the 49ers host the Cowboys on Sunday night.

"Yeah, it's blown up in the past few days," Purcell said. "I just want to stay humble and keep working. My goal right now is to show I can do it back-to-back."

By all accounts, going Hollywood won't be an option for Purcell (6-foot-3, 303 pounds), who can be categorized as the strong-and-silent type.

Defensive line coach Scott Brown says Purcell "doesn't say a word." And defensive tackle Tony Jerod-Eddie laughed when asked about Purcell's demonstrative finger-wagging celebration after a tackle in Houston. ("Oh, yeah," he said. "That surprised me.")

"Mike doesn't say much," Jerod-Eddie said. "He's going to do what he's supposed to do. He's going to be where he's supposed to be. And he's going to kick a lot of butt."

Brown recognized Purcell's butt-kicking capabilities back in 2008.

Brown, then the defensive line coach at Colorado State, recruited Purcell when he was at Highlands Ranch (Co.) High. Purcell wanted to attend the in-state school and Brown wanted to offer him a scholarship, but Purcell said he wasn't as coveted by head coach Steve Fairchild.

"He wanted to pull the trigger on me, but the head coach didn't," Purcell said. "So I ended up going to rival Wyoming and beat them four years in a row."

Over four years later, Brown finally got Purcell, whom he coveted because of his flexibility, quickness and lower-body strength. Brown was a 49ers scout and influenced Purcell's decision to sign with the team after the 2013 draft, even though it had just added Tank Carradine (second round) and Quinton Dial (fifth round) to a well-stocked defensive line.

The depth at the position made Purcell a practice-squad fixture until injuries prompted his promotion to the active roster for the final two regular-season games of the 2014 season.

Now, it appears Purcell could become the latest undrafted defensive lineman signed by the 49ers to carve out an NFL career. Head coach Jim Tomsula also mentored Jerod-Eddie, starting nose guard Ian Williams, Demarcus Dobbs and Will Tukuafu during his eight seasons as the defensive line coach.

Dobbs and Tukuafu are with the Seahawks and Purcell understands he's not guaranteed to stick with the 49ers, who also employ Williams, Jerod-Eddie, Dial, Carradine, Darnell Dockett, Glenn Dorsey and first-round pick Arik Armstead.

Purcell has received advice from Tomsula that has allowed him to keep his focus on the field, not on his odds of surviving final roster cuts.

"When Jimmy T. was the defensive-line coach and even now in team meetings, he says 'Your No. 1 goal is to get paid for playing football. And, No. 2, is to get paid for playing football here,'" Purcell said. "That's really settled me down."

And, perhaps, more fans at Costco.

Keith Reaser

Memory of cousin Sean Taylor inspires 49ers' Reaser

By Matt Maiocco

August 6, 2015

Three thousand miles away, Carlene Ford is flooded with a range of emotions. Her son is finally on the practice field and embarking on a promising NFL career.

It has been a long and painful road for the family.

She was with her son, Keith Reaser, shortly after he underwent a second ACL surgery before the 2014 draft. Teams were calling him to line up workouts. And he had to tell them he would not be able to get on the field for a long time.

"I've never seen him so devastated," she said.

They braced for the strong possibility Reaser would not get drafted after his senior season at Florida Atlantic when it ended with a knee injury. When a problem with his graft was discovered at the NFL Scouting Combine, it appeared to be a major blow to the career he had planned since childhood.

"Since I was a little kid, I never saw any other future path for me," Reaser said. "I never thought of myself of doing anything other than playing in the NFL."

And when the 49ers surprisingly selected him in the fifth round, it was clear the organization was committed to a long-term union. Reaser would be afforded the opportunity to take his time to get healthy before competing for a roster spot.

"We didn't know what was going to happen," Ford said. "There was always the hope he was going to get on somebody's team. And when it happened, it was one of those moments we'll remember forever."

The excitement, however, cannot push away all the pain the family has experienced in the past eight years.

Sean Taylor was Reaser's cousin. Their mothers are sisters. Taylor was also Reaser's favorite player – a hard-hitting Washington safety who quickly established himself as one of the NFL's rising stars.

In November 2007, five young men broke into Taylor's Miami-area home in a burglary attempt. The men expected Taylor to be with his teammates for a regular-season game in Tampa Bay. But Taylor was home rehabbing an injury. After the men broke in, Taylor confronted them with a machete. Taylor was killed with a single gunshot to his leg, which severed his femoral artery.

"He was that family member that you looked up to and said, 'I want to be like him; I want to play like him; I want to dress like him.' He was my idol," Reaser said.

His mother got a phone call in the early-morning hours while Taylor was in surgery. But she did not want her 16-year-old son to worry, so she did not tell him about the incident before he went to school.

While at school, a classmate mentioned the news to Reaser, who initially thought it was just a cruel joke. He called his mother, who was still at the hospital. The family experienced unspeakable grief. Time has passed, but the hurt remains.

Taylor's final resting place is Woodlawn Park Cemetery, about 2 ½ miles from Reaser's home. It was a year before Reaser could summon the strength to pay his respects to his cousin.

“He was very emotional -- very upset,” his mom said. “He told me, ‘I never want to go back there again.’ He said he wanted to remember Sean as he was.”

Reaser had started working out with his cousin and began to take the sport more seriously by the time Taylor had reached the NFL. They worked out together. They watched film together. The tragic and senseless death brought even more focus to Reaser’s goal.

Ford remembers a visit to the pediatrician when her son was about 10 years old. He announced he was going to be a professional football player. He was completely unfazed when his doctor produced statistics about the miniscule percentage of young athletes who actually realize that dream.

“Once he died, things with me started progressing with football,” Reaser said. “Everybody was looking for me to be that guy. He was kind of like that centerpiece in our family. At holidays and we’d go to his house. Everybody was looking for me to be that piece.”

Reaser’s determination was a lot bigger than his physical stature. As a senior he was listed at 5 foot 10, 147 pounds. He was a second-team all-state selection, but he failed to get the attention of major college football programs.

He ended up at nearby Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton. Over the course of four college seasons, he grew an inch and added 40 pounds. The 49ers placed a projected 40-yard dash time on him in the low 4.3s, making him one of the fastest cornerbacks in last year’s draft.

Reaser’s style of play is not similar to Taylor’s, but he has tried to adopt his cousin’s approach to the game.

“I don’t try to imitate his game because he was his own freak of nature,” Reaser said. “What I do try to take is the passion he played the game with, the way he prepared, the way he trained. I try to take that out there. I might not be the knockout-shot guy, so I don’t try to play like him. But I definitely take that passion and that mentality into the game.”

Reaser said the fact that a family member was able to establish himself as an NFL star provided him with inspiration.

“It gave me confidence in myself,” he said. “This is my family member. If he can do it, I can do it, too.”

San Francisco 49ers general manager Trent Baalke knew Taylor well. As a Washington scout, Baalke scouted Taylor and spent 2 ½ days in Miami prior to his team’s selection with the No. 5 overall pick in the 2004 draft. While fully aware he is related to Taylor, Reaser was selected on his own merits, Baalke said.

“They’re totally different,” Baalke said. “Sean was 6-2 and 230 pounds. He was a rare physical specimen. But a couple things stood out with Keith. He was extremely fast. He’s one of the fastest guys we evaluated that year. And the competitiveness. You can see that on the field. He’s got an edge to him.”

Reaser spent his entire rookie season with the 49ers in Santa Clara rehabbing his knee. He had a strong offseason program, and his training camp is off to a solid start as he looks to establish his presence on the 49ers’ roster.

“He’s been a dream,” Baalke said. “He came in from Day 1, and had a pro’s mentality. He was very focused on getting his knee right. And it’s paying off.”

Back in Miami, Ford is excited to receive reports from California about the progress of her son. He is working with the 49ers’ third-team defense. His future is bright. But the family’s return to the NFL also comes with some degree of anxiety.

“Me, personally, I’m terrified,” she said. “In one sense, it helps that we have that back in the family. But there’s that fear that now that he’s in the NFL, someone may target him.”

Ultimately, those thoughts are fleeting. She realizes there are no negatives to her son being in position to make his life-long vision a reality.

“After his first knee injury, he said, ‘Mom, I can’t think of anything else I want to do but play football,’” she said. “Yes, this has always been his dream. The way everything worked out, this was his destiny.”

Shayne Skov

49ers linebacker Shayne Skov teaches life lessons to prep football team

By Jamie Burns
Associated Press
July 15, 2015

Shayne Skov's journey to the NFL has been full of snags and snares.

The 49ers linebacker was removed from his football and basketball teams in high school because of sagging grades and eventually shipped off to boarding school.

At Stanford, Skov endured three knee surgeries in five months and then returned to finish his career as an All-American.

Still, his stock slipped so far that the can't-miss talent's name wasn't called during the 2014 NFL draft. Passed over by every NFL team, Skov has lived the life of a free agent, bouncing between practice squads with the 49ers and Tampa Bay Buccaneers before landing back in Santa Clara.

No, the track wasn't greased for Skov, a Bay Area native who learned the game while living in Mexico. To that extent, he can sympathize with those he's paid to chase and tackle — he's been knocked down, beat up and humbled throughout his career.

The tough stuff will always be there. You have to find ways to overcome it or improve it.

Yet here he is, playing a marquee position for a team in need, a team he grew up rooting for.

And there he was Monday morning, hanging out with the Johansen High School football team in Modesto, doing his best to light the path for 38 teenagers caught in their own snare.

"My path has been a funky one," Skov told the student-athletes, "but I hope there is something you can take from it."

These days, coach Grant Genasci and his program will take anything they can get. Johansen has gone 0-10 in each of Genasci's first two seasons, and they've lost 31 of their last 32, a dubious stretch that spans four years.

During that time, Johansen has had more coaches (three) than victories (one).

Last fall, the Vikings were outscored 546-150. Johansen hasn't enjoyed a winning season since going 8-4 in 2008.

Skov doesn't put much stock in a program's checkered past. He cares more about the todays and tomorrows.

"Will this make me better?" he said time and again.

As an example, he pointed to Stanford. Before he arrived on The Farm, the Cardinal wasn't nearly the Pacific-12 Conference power it is today. Quite the opposite, actually.

"Coach (Genasci) told me you've had some hard times when it comes to football," Skov said. "When I showed up (at Stanford), there were guys there that started their careers 1-11 (in 2006). By the time they were seniors, they were 12-1 during an Orange Bowl year.

"Watching them go to work, you could tell they didn't want that to happen again. Even though I didn't know what it felt like to be 1-11, watching them, you learn that everything is a process."

Monday's visit with San Francisco 49ers linebacker Shayne Skov was set up by Johansen assistant coach Scott Sacuskie, who served on Stanford's strength and conditioning staff during Skov's collegiate career.

Skov's message to Johansen was simple and succinct: "Enjoy the process."

Those words have echoed about the practice field and locker room throughout Genasci's tenure. Though the Vikings haven't enjoyed much success on Friday nights, Genasci has asked his players and coaches to find the fun in the rebuilding effort.

Sometimes, it's best to hear it from another's mouth.

A task that monumental isn't accomplished with one mighty leap, Skov warned. Using a track metaphor, Skov said becoming a 100-meter champion takes a series of steps, each setting up the next.

Though his trip has been fraught with missteps and setbacks, Skov has reached his finish line — the NFL — by being resilient, teachable and determined.

"He was going down the wrong path, but he switched up everything by going to Stanford and now playing in the NFL," Genasci said. "I hope they get as much as they can about how if you want to achieve something, you have to work hard.

"It's not going to just happen for you. Wins aren't going to just come. We're 0-20 the last two years. They can't just hope for it to happen. They have to actively work at it."

Skov surprised the Vikings following their weight room session with assistant coach Scott Sacuskie, also Skov's strength and conditioning coach at Stanford. The team gathered in a classroom on campus, toting their cleats and bags.

They were told someone wanted to speak with them. They just didn't know who.

Skov spoke for more than an hour, sharing the details of his upbringing and his time at Stanford.

It took him five years to complete high school, and he spent time at a New York boarding school. A three-sport athlete, Skov marketed himself to small colleges — not Stanford or other Division I giants — believing that was his athletic ceiling.

"I grew up dreaming about Division III schools," Skov said, "but now I'm playing for the team I grew up cheering for."

Skov outlined his growth at Stanford, year by year, noting the steps it took to become a third-team All-American and captain of a BCS program. He embraced the process, discovering a love for the sciences in the classroom and laboratories while blossoming into the emotional leader of one of the nation's best defenses.

"It goes to show you that you could be at the bottom, but that doesn't matter," senior lineman Marcos Gonzalez said. "There's a new season every year, and things can change.

"These past couple of seasons we haven't won a game at all. A lot of people don't like to come out because they think we're not a good program anymore. In reality, we are. We have great coaches, great teammates and a great chemistry."

DeAndre Smelter Tells the Story of How He Struck Out Bryce Harper

By Taylor Price

A pitcher never forgets.

Whether they gave up a grand slam or struck out the side, key moments in a baseball career can always be recalled in a moment's notice.

Just ask DeAndre Smelter.

The San Francisco 49ers fourth-round draft pick was an accomplished baseball prospect prior to suiting up as a football player for Georgia Tech. In fact, Smelter was a 14th-round draft pick of the Minnesota Twins back in the 2010 Major League Baseball Draft. Smelter was a powerful right-handed pitcher and topped out at 97 miles per hour on the radar gun.

Smelter's baseball career ultimately ended due to lingering arm injuries, but he still enjoyed some memorable experiences on the diamond.

Need proof?

The rookie receiver shared a humble brag on a recent episode of the team's "49ers Radio Podcast." When asked to share the most notable strike-out victim of his playing career, Smelter offered a well-known big leaguer.

Washington Nationals outfielder Bryce Harper.

The 22-year-old baseball superstar was once a promising prospect, like Smelter, who competed in amateur All-Star games. That's where the two athletes met.

"I had a chance to face Bryce Harper in the Athletic All-American game," Smelter said. "He's a great player, especially right now, he's tearing it up right now."

The 49ers wideout paused after the initial statement and then he grinned.

"I struck him out."

Harper currently leads the National League with 18 home runs and 43 runs batted in.

A strike out of this magnitude is almost like telling your grandkids you dunked on LeBron James, beat Tiger Woods in a round of golf or any other brag-inducing sports comparison.

Smelter, true to pitcher form, has not forgotten about the swing-and-miss scenario.

"I think it was a 3-2 count," he said. "I threw him a slider and I got him to chase it, so I felt pretty good about that."

Smelter has good recollection of every moment on the mound. It's not something he'll forget any time soon either.

"I can pretty much tell you every pitch sequence I've ever thrown," Smelter said. "It's pretty crazy."

Torrey Smith Shares Touching Tribute in Memory of His Brother

By Taylor Price

September 23, 2015

Sept. 22 is a challenging day for Torrey Smith.

It was on that day three years ago that the San Francisco 49ers wide receiver's younger brother, Tevin Chris Jones, was killed in a motorcycle accident in northeast Virginia.

Smith learned of his brother's passing shortly before a game against the New England Patriots. The former Baltimore Ravens wideout decided to play in the game and caught six passes for 127 yards and two touchdowns in a win.

"It means a lot not just for us but for my family. ... That's for my little brother," Smith said on Sept. 24, 2012.

Fast forward to 2015, Smith continues to honor his brother's memory. The 49ers wideout wore custom football cleats on "Monday Night Football" in a Week 1 victory that read "RIP Lil' Chris" on the left shoe and "Always with me" on the right.

On Tuesday, Smith remembered his brother's passing in a must-read blog post titled, "Tomorrow Is Never Promised."

"I always understood that death is an inevitable part of life. At some point we all die, and before then many of us will have to bury someone we love. Three years ago today I received a call that would forever change my family and I still remember these words "Lil Chris is gone". Chris was my little brother. He was approaching his 21st birthday and we had plans to celebrate that following week. Chris was a great kid with big plans ahead of him. He had planned to start school in the spring, had a decent job working for a security company, and had just gotten his first apartment. I was proud of him and where he was going. When I received that call and learned that he had gotten into a motorcycle accident and didn't survive, I completely lost it. So many thoughts went through my head when the reality set in that I would never see my brother alive again.

It was the night before our big game against the Patriots. Instead of resting up for the game I was now heading home to be with my family. The Ravens staff was very supportive and made sure that I was able to get back home, not once mentioning the game we had the next day. That night I didn't sleep much, 2 hours might be stretching it. We spent the next morning trying to keep things as normal as possible, playing Madden and watching SportsCenter. Playing in the game the next day wasn't a thought in my mind. It didn't even become a real conversation until we were watching TV and saw an ESPN report that I wasn't with the team because my brother had passed away. My mom asked me what I was going to do and to be honest I was unsure. I didn't know if it was inappropriate to not be with your family during a time like this. I didn't want to hurt my team by trying to play and not being physically or mentally ready. After much thought and support from my family, I decided to play. That game was very emotional for me. The love I received from my team and fans was overwhelming. I'll never forget it."

The goal at former Stafford High and NFL receiver Torrey Smith multi-sport camp: Be different

By Taft Coghill Jr.

July 27, 2015

Torrey Smith has learned a bit about stepping out of comfort zones in the past four months. Smith spent four seasons as a wide receiver with the Baltimore Ravens after graduating from the University of Maryland. But in March he signed a five-year contract with the San Francisco 49ers and will spend the next phase of his career on the other side of the country.

Smith wants his campers on Saturday to escape their comfort zones, as well.

The Torrey Smith Foundation will host a multi-sport camp for youth ages 6–12 at his alma mater, Stafford High School, on Saturday morning.

There will be stations teaching fundamentals of football, basketball and soccer. There will also be a STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics) station to stimulate the minds of the 250 children in attendance.

“I think it will get them out of their comfort zone,” Smith said of the idea behind the multifaceted camp. “Everyone wants to go to football camp because they’re good at doing football things and it’s something they’re used to.

“But you might be very good at football and not know a thing about soccer. You might not be the best at basketball. So you’ll get a little bit of everything in one setting.”

Registration for the free camp is closed. A one-day sign-up was held on July 11 at Stafford High. Smith said the motivation for the camp was to give back to the Fredericksburg area, including children from his hometown, Colonial Beach.

He said he wanted to bring an event back to the region after his annual celebrity basketball game was moved to College Park, Md., in 2014.

That contest, which mostly featured members of the Ravens and Washington Redskins, was held at Stafford High the offseason of Smith’s first three years in the league. In 2014, it was held in the Xfinity Center on Maryland’s campus. The event wasn’t held this year as Smith was focused on free agency and his postgraduate education.

Smith is enrolled in the University of Miami’s Executive Masters of Business Administration program, which is tailored toward professional athletes and artists.

Smith will host the game again next year at Maryland.

“That was a fun event,” Smith said. “Everyone looked forward to it and it became a staple event. It just outgrew the school and it got crazy really quick. It was really important for me to bring something back to the area.”

Smith will oversee the camp. He’ll be assisted by former Stafford and Maryland teammate Dexter McDougle, who is entering his second season as a cornerback with the New York Jets. Former University of Pittsburgh women’s basketball player Marquel Davis, also a Stafford graduate, will teach basketball.

Current Stafford athletes will serve as instructors and Stafford teachers will help with the STEM station.

“We’re working on promoting leadership, so we wanted the athletes from Stafford to help run the stations,” said Smith’s wife, Chanel, who is the vice president of his foundation. “We want to get them in the mode of giving back and being leaders.”

Another benefit will be the opportunity to learn a sport they may not be comfortable with.

Chanel Smith said one mission of the camp and the LEVEL Up (Leadership Education Vision Effort and Love) initiative associated with it is to ensure that the youth give their all, no matter how adept they are performing an activity.

“One of the principles of the whole LEVEL Up concept we came up with is effort,” Chanel Smith said. “So we’re going to be harping on the kids the whole time that, ‘This may not be something you’re good at, but we’re looking for everyone to put forth effort and do the best that you can do.’”

Jaquiski Tartt

High school teammates Tartt, Ward reunited in 49ers' secondary

By Matt Barrows

May 12, 2015

In 2009, he was a blue-chip safety at Davidson High School in Mobile, Ala., and the most highly recruited kid on his team. He was big, fast and part of one of the best defenses in the state. College coaches who came to watch him play left with his name triple underscored. The future was bright.

When he came back, his position had been filled by ... well, by some guy who never had played high school football and had a name no one could pronounce.

Until that year, Jaquiski (Ja-KWAH-ski) Tartt had fancied himself a basketball player. At the time he stood just over 6-foot and played small forward. He was physical, defensive-minded, the type of guy who would skid out of bounds on his belly for a loose ball, upending folding chairs along the way.

The football coaches noticed.

"What I remember most was watching him on a fast break," Davidson defensive coordinator P.J. Wright said. "He came through the lane and dunked the ball. It was, 'Man, he can jump out of the gym.' And that's what we were looking for from a secondary player – someone who could stop a deep ball."

For three years, Wright and others gently attempted to persuade Tartt to give football a try. Eventually, he concluded there weren't a lot of 6-1 forwards in the NBA, and before his senior season, he asked Davidson coach Fred Riley if he could participate in spring practices.

"We started him out covering kicks," Riley said. "He was fearless. The question was whether he'd develop the IQ to play."

Fate intervened when Hughes hurt his ankle. The injury not only opened a spot on the starting defense, it meant Tartt would be paired with a fellow senior named Jimmie Ward. Whereas Tartt was raw, coltish and new to the sport, Ward was a professor when it came to safety. He always wanted to be a football player and knew every detail of the game.

"Jimmie was the king of football IQ," Riley said. "We refer to it as 'Factor 11.' That's where you understand football to the point where you know all 11 working parts on the other side of the ball and all 11 working parts on this side of the ball. They'd break the huddle, and Jimmie'd know what play they were about to run."

Riley always put his best players at safety – "You can always be demoted to offense," he said – and gave them the most responsibility. They were expected to mirror each other on the field, prompting endless study sessions between Ward and his neophyte teammate. Sometimes coaches arrived at school in the morning to find their starting safeties watching game film.

The cram sessions paid off.

One Friday night in October 2009, Davidson was leading its crosstown rival, Theodore High School, 14-12 late in the game when a Theodore receiver caught a pass in the open field and took off for the end zone. Witnesses said Tartt ran half the length of the field and blasted his opponent out of bounds just short of the goal line. But with 57 seconds remaining, it seemed as if Davidson was doomed.

“It felt like we had no chance of winning,” Wright said. “That was it. They were going to put the ball in. They were going to beat us.”

On the next play, however, Theodore attempted another pass, this time to the back of the end zone. Tartt leaped and picked it off with one hand.

The headline in the Mobile (Ala.) Press-Register the next morning: “Sweet, Tartt.”

A few weeks later, Hughes was ready to get back on the field. The bad news for him: Tartt had been such a wrecking ball on run defense and so dependable in pass defense that the coaches dared not remove him from the lineup. They told Hughes to play outside linebacker instead.

“He wanted to know why he wasn’t playing safety anymore,” Wright said. “It was, ‘So which one do you want us to take off the field, Jimmie or Jaquiski?’”

Hughes remained the team’s top recruit. He had offers from seven schools, four from the Southeastern Conference, and chose Mississippi State. He was dismissed from the team in 2013 after an arrest on a domestic violence charge, his third arrest since 2011.

As for Ward, Wright called him the best player he’s ever coached. But big college programs didn’t think he had the size to play safety, and he ended up at Northern Illinois.

Tartt? He played 4 1/2 hours away at Samford, which is known for tough admissions standards and top-notch academics but certainly not its football program. He graduated with a degree in geography.

Riley said coaches from Auburn and Alabama would have zeroed in on Tartt had he played football sooner. But the kid with the odd name was a no-name until late in his senior season.

“He was an SEC guy more than Jimmie or Chris, physically,” Riley said. “It’s just that the scholarships already had been given out.”

A second-round pick by the 49ers this month, Tartt still is considered raw, still needs refinement, and just like in high school, he’ll probably start out on special teams. But for the second time, he’ll be paired with Ward, whom the 49ers selected in the first round in 2014.

“That’s my best friend – Jimmie Ward,” Tartt said. “We played together in high school, and we talked about this day. It would be crazy if me and him end up on the same (NFL) team. For it to actually happen, it’s crazy.”

Jimmie Ward, Jaquiski Tartt Turn Mobile, Alabama into 49ers Country

The Niner Empire has a new territory.

Mobile, Ala., is halfway across the country from the San Francisco 49ers headquarters in Northern California, but the midsized Gulf of Mexico town of less than 200,000 people has produced two of the team's recent high draft picks.

Jimmie Ward and Jaquiski Tartt, both products of Davidson High School in Mobile, have turned the city's college football-crazed fans into bona fide Faithfuls.

"I don't care what anybody's allegiances are in Mobile anymore, we are 49ers supporters no matter what," said Fred Riley, Ward and Tartt's coach at Davidson. "People around here really don't grow up being NFL fans. You cheer for either Alabama or Auburn. But I can tell you now that Mobile is all in with the San Francisco 49ers."

Riley was at his daughter's college graduation when he got word from a friend of Tartt's selection in the second round of the 2015 NFL Draft. At first, the coach didn't believe which team drafted Tartt.

"I texted back, 'You're kidding me,'" Riley said. "So I went out of the building and called her. She said, 'Coach, we have two kids who are San Francisco 49ers.'"

"I mean, what are the odds of that? Two kids who played side-by-side in high school are now possibly going to play side-by-side together for the 49ers."

This week, the start of the 49ers OTAs, could mark the first time Ward and Tartt are on the same field since high school. Ward, San Francisco's first-round pick in 2014, is still recovering from a foot injury that shortened his rookie season last fall, so whether or not he will participate is unknown at this time.

Regardless, Riley believes that his former pupils will push each other in the NFL. He added that having a familiar face will be especially beneficial for Tartt, a hard-hitting safety who only began playing competitive football his senior year of high school.

"Having Jimmie there is in Jaquiski's best interest," Riley said. "He'll have somebody that can help him through all the little things. I'm sure it'll help with the learning curve."

Jaquiski Tartt

Jaquiski Tartt Leans on Jimmie Ward, 49ers Veteran Safeties

Jaquiski Tartt has a lot of people looking out for him these days, even teammates in the San Francisco 49ers defensive backfield.

The team's second-round draft pick out of Samford has been fortunate to learn from two established veteran safeties, plus a childhood friend and high school teammate.

Enter Eric Reid, Antoine Bethea and Jimmie Ward. The first two players represent the entrenched starting safety duo for the 49ers defense. Ward, on the other hand, grew up with Tartt in Mobile, Ala., and has been an added mentor for Tartt in his first month as a professional football player.

In fact, Ward gave his close friend some valuable tips prior to recent Organized Team Activities.

"Really, it was just get in the playbook," said Tartt, who was selected as an FCS All-American in his senior campaign. "That's the only thing that could keep me behind - that's the playbook."

Tartt's studying is multiplied these days. In addition to lining up behind Reid at free safety, the rookie is also picking up strong safety, the spot manned by San Francisco's reigning team MVP, Bethea.

Tartt said he's been trying to soak up as much knowledge as he can from his veteran teammates. The lessons begin in the classroom and extend to the practice fields.

When asked what the 6-foot-1, 221-pound safety has picked up the most from the 49ers starting duo, Tartt offered a quick response: "How serious they are about the game."

"When they walk into the meeting room, you can just tell from their faces that they are serious about the game."

Tartt, who finished his collegiate career with 277 tackles, six interceptions and 20 pass breakups, said he's comfortable approaching anyone in the team's defensive back meeting room for advice. The sharing of information begins with respected secondary coach Tim Lewis.

"He's a very smart coach," Tartt said. "There's a lot of knowledge in the room. You can talk to anybody and they pretty much know what they're doing, and they'll help you out."

Tartt's understanding of Eric Mangini's new-look defensive system has been tested this offseason. Besides having to execute play calls for the first time, Tartt and his fellow reserve defenders are having to line up rapidly to counteract the quickness in which the 49ers have been snapping the ball in practice.

In the rookie's estimation, the quick turnaround in between plays is helping both sides of the ball prepare for training camp and the preseason.

"You most definitely have to focus on every play and try to be ahead of the offense, but I'm pretty used to it," Tartt said. "My offense in college, it's not the same, but they used to do an up-tempo style of offense. I'm kind of used to it."

So while Tartt does his best to try and adapt to life as a professional player, he sounded optimistic about his on-field talent being able to transition from small-school college football to the rough-and-tough nature of the NFC West.

"I love to come in the box, but I can cover the deep middle of the field, too," he said.

Tartt's transition will be one of the many fascinating storylines for first-year players on the 49ers roster. Making matters more intriguing is the fact that Tartt has a unique challenge to overcome in his life away from the facility.

"My boy Jermaine Whitehead, he's a safety from Auburn," Tartt began, "He talks in his sleep. He'll be talking about random stuff in his sleep. It was funny. I thought he was up, but he was actually asleep."

49ers' Brandon Thomas making push to be starter

By Eric Branch
San Francisco Chronicle
August 11, 2015

First, his knee hurt. Then, his heart ached.

Now, 49ers guard Brandon Thomas is in a better place: He's dealing with less pain as he prepares for his delayed NFL debut.

A year ago, Thomas was in the midst of an excruciating seven-month stretch in which he sustained another torn ACL and lost his mother, Yvonne, to a blood cancer, multiple myeloma, at 60.

Last week, Thomas reflected on his difficult 2014. He tore the ACL in his right knee in a workout with the Saints about a month before the draft and the injury made the potential second-round pick the final pick of the third round (the 49ers took him at No. 100). Thomas spent his first year rehabilitating at the 49ers' facility, but left the team in November to be with his mother in the days preceding her death.

Thomas, 24, is grateful his mom, who made it clear education ranked far above athletics, was present when he graduated from Clemson and entered the NFL. His guess: She was a bit more excited about that diploma than about draft day.

"Those were huge events and she was able to be there for them," Thomas said. "She won't be there when I play in an NFL game, but I know she'll be with me."

Thomas will play in his first game Saturday when the 49ers visit Houston in their preseason opener. It will mark the first time he has played in a game since he participated in the Senior Bowl more than 18 months ago.

Given his pedigree, the two-time All-ACC pick was viewed as a candidate to fill the vacancy created in March when Pro Bowl guard Mike Iupati signed with Arizona. However, Thomas has spent the majority of the first eight practices of training camp with the second unit.

That's partly a reflection on first-string guard Marcus Martin, another 2014 third-round pick who made eight starts at center as a rookie. And it's also a nod to the rust Thomas is knocking off. In addition to returning from a serious injury, he's playing guard for the first time since 2011.

Thomas, a left tackle for his final two seasons at Clemson, opened eyes in 2013 when he went mostly one-on-one with South Carolina defensive end Jadeveon Clowney, and the No. 1 pick in 2014 finished with two solo tackles and a sack.

On Sunday, left tackle Joe Staley said Thomas (6-foot-3, 317 pounds) was starting to show why he generated such pre-draft buzz.

"His first week kind of coming back — he had a year off from football, basically — so that transition is going to take a little bit," Staley said. "But you're starting to see more of the natural talent that he has and the reason that we drafted him high last year. ... He's so powerful, and he's so big and moves really well. And you're seeing that come on in the second week."

Thomas has been here before. He tore the ACL in his left knee as a senior at Dorman High in Roebuck, S.C., and the injury delayed his college development. He redshirted in 2009, played only 136 snaps in 2010 and didn't become a starter until the fourth game of his sophomore season.

“It’s kind of the same situation and I know it’s going to be a process,” Thomas said. “I’m sure everyone knows it’s going to be a process. I’m working hard to push through every day, trying to come out, be competitive and learn what I need to learn.”

Thomas is eager to assist the 49ers, who surprised him when they halted his draft plunge. After his ACL tear, Thomas said teams began canceling the pre-draft visits they’d scheduled and he feared he’d also be ignored until deep in the draft.

Now, more than a year after he was selected, he’s finally in a better place: A spot where he can start to show the 49ers that they’ll be rewarded for their risk.

“I was surprised and happy when they” drafted me, Thomas said. “But then I thought, ‘I’ve got to go to work now and prove that I can help. I’m not just going to be another pick.’”

49ers' Thomas pays touching tribute to mother

49ers offensive lineman Brandon Thomas shared a heart-wrenching statement on Mother's Day on his Instagram account, one that stood out from other posts on social media Sunday.

He paid tribute to his mother, Yvonne Thomas, who passed away after a battle with cancer on Monday, Nov. 24, 2014 at the age of 60.

Brandon Thomas wrote what this day means to him and his family, and the importance of the role of a mother:

Today is going to be pretty tough for my sisters and I. But so is every other day since we've lost our mother. There is absolutely no love in this world like the love of a mother. There is a void that cannot and will not ever be filled, no matter what anybody tells you. We don't miss her today any more than we will tomorrow, or the next day, or the day after that. Today, Mother's Day, is just another painful reminder that she is no longer physically here. Although I am a motherless son and my sisters are motherless daughters now, I still have a mom, and I celebrate that. I will for the rest of my life. She is just no longer physically next to me. I will continue to honor her life not only on Mother's Day, but for the rest of my life until I see her again. Of course I envy people who still have their mothers around, especially the ones around my age. My mother was so healthy then cancer comes in her life. I can't help but think of all she has missed so far and is going to miss. Renee, Mara, and I love you dearly. You sacrificed so much for us to be where we are right now in our lives. I love you mom, I know you're up there watching over all of us. Happy Mother's Day to a woman who gave it her all for her children and her grandchildren. You were our rock.

The second-year guard was selected in the third round of the 2014 NFL Draft at pick 100 overall.

Rookie QB Dylan Thompson Relishes Opportunity to Learn from Colin Kaepernick

By Tyler Emerick

Did you know the San Francisco 49ers signed the top statistical quarterback in 2014 from arguably the best college football conference?

No, you didn't miss any big news. The aforementioned player is Dylan Thompson, a signal-caller from South Carolina who landed with the 49ers as an undrafted free agent earlier this month.

As a redshirt senior last fall, Thompson led the Southeastern Conference in passing with 3,564 yards – a school record. He threw for 26 touchdowns as well.

Despite not hearing his name called at the draft, Thompson found himself in a relatively fortuitous situation with the 49ers. He is only the third quarterback on the roster, behind starter Colin Kaepernick and veteran backup Blaine Gabbert.

At the team's recent rookie minicamp, Thompson was the only quarterback on the field, meaning he got a golden opportunity to make a good first impression on the coaching staff.

"He's a collected individual," Jim Tomsula told reporters this month. "He's got those... intangibles. Then you watch the tape. This guy can throw a football around. He spins it. We're excited about him. We really are."

Thompson was understandably disappointed to go undrafted, but that initial feeling soon went away when he signed with the 49ers.

"You're sitting there wondering, 'Am I going to get drafted or not?' You don't really know," Thompson said on Thursday after completing the team's first week of OTAs. "Early on in the process though, I got to talk with (quarterbacks) coach (Steve) Logan and thought this was a great place to learn. And that's the way it worked out. I'm thankful to be here."

Part of the reason Thompson chose San Francisco over other suitors was because of Kaepernick and Gabbert. The rookie wanted the chance to grow under two established NFL quarterbacks.

"Kap and Blaine are really smart guys," Thompson said. "They've been here, and they do things the right way. I appreciate them shedding light on things for me. I'm just trying to learn something new every single day. ... If it's 10 reps a day, I'm just trying to make those 10 reps the best I can."

"That's the type of situation I wanted to come into if I did end up in free agency."

Of course, it didn't hurt that three of Thompson's offensive weapons from South Carolina were also on the 49ers roster. The quarterback has reunited with his running back, Mike Davis, tight end, Busta Anderson and wide receiver, Bruce Ellington. In January of 2013, Thompson and Ellington hooked up for a game-winning 32-yard touchdown with 11 seconds left to defeat Michigan in the Outback Bowl.

"That's fun," Thompson said. "To be in a locker room with Bruce again; we've known each other since we were 5 years old. Then Mike and Buster, the past four or five years have been great with those guys. Just great teammates, fun friends, and I'm enjoying it."

49ers Undrafted Rookie WR DeAndrew White: 'I Feel Like I Belong Here'

By Tyler Emerick

At any given point in the early goings of the San Francisco 49ers offseason program, one curiosity-induced sight could be witnessed on repeat.

No. 18 catches pass. Onlooker glances down at roster to learn who No. 18 is.

This happened so many times that by the end of minicamp, no one questioned who No. 18 was.

DeAndrew White, the player in that jersey, came to the 49ers as a largely unknown undrafted free agent in early May. In the two months since, the wide receiver has done nothing but make plays. And in the process, he's drawn praise from media, coaches and teammates alike.

"The type of person he is; he motivates himself," co-wide receivers coach Adam Henry said. "He has a little chip on his shoulder, and he brings it to the building each and every day."

White is only 23 years old, but he's experienced enough highs and certainly enough lows to understand the opportunity ahead of him.

Need convincing? Here's a snapshot of his football career to date: hometown hero, blue-chip prospect, injury-plagued collegian, afterthought to a Heisman Trophy contender and draft-day snub. Now he's striving to ensure the next bullet point added to that list isn't "NFL roster cut."

"I'm a hard-worker and ultra-competitive," White said. "I just can't wait for the opportunity to showcase my talent. I know what I want to achieve, and I know that I need to get better than what I've been doing."

"The NFL is not for everybody, but I feel like I'm at home; I feel like I belong here. I know I'm going to succeed. This is just the beginning."

At the time, White was a junior at North Shore High School, a perennial powerhouse in Texas football whose home stadium seats more than 10,000 fans.

When the storm hit, North Shore lost electricity for 16 days. The school was forced to cancel three games as its city recovered from the third-costliest hurricane in U.S. history.

But as they often do, sports provided a temporary distraction from the destruction. In this case, North Shore was on the cusp of history. Sitting on 72 consecutive regular-season victories, the team needed one more win to break the state record.

Following the layoff, North Shore went on the road to face another elite program in Lufkin High School, which owned a 27-game home winning streak.

Tied at 21 with 26 seconds remaining in the fourth quarter, White, a slot receiver who won the Texas Class 5A 200-meter dash in the spring, had his number called.

White dug his cleats into the turf, broke off the line scrimmage and caught a slant route. Using his sprinter speed, White split the safeties and raced into the end zone for a 26-yard touchdown. The score gave North Shore the victory and the state record.

“He always had a penchant for making the big play,” Aymond said. “It didn’t surprise me at all. That’s DeAndrew.”

White arrived at Alabama in 2010 as the seventh-best wide receiver prospect in the nation. He redshirted as a true freshman before earning sporadic playing time in 2011, his first season suiting up for the Crimson Tide.

White’s breakout campaign was supposed to occur as a sophomore in 2012. He won a starting job over an incoming freshman named Amari Cooper and even caught a 51-yard touchdown pass in the team’s season opener against Michigan.

But just a few games later, White’s ascension came tumbling down when he sustained a season-ending ACL injury.

“I was blocking on a play, and my knee just popped,” he said.

Cooper took over with White sidelined and went on to earn consensus Freshman All-America honors. Cooper continued his rise to stardom over the ensuing two seasons while White battled not only the ACL injury, but also a fractured toe, separated shoulder and pulled hamstring.

In his final season in Tuscaloosa last fall, White regained a starting role, playing in 12 games opposite of Cooper. But while the Heisman Trophy finalist dominated the SEC by hauling in 124 passes for 1,727 yards, White recorded a modest 40 receptions for 504 yards.

He turned in his best performance in the SEC championship game against then-No. 16 Missouri, catching four balls for 101 yards including a 58-yard touchdown.

“I just played my role,” White said. “It wasn’t for me to say or complain about. I just wasn’t the No. 1 receiver at Alabama, so I did what I could to help the team.”

Nick Saban urged NFL scouts and general managers not to ignore White. In the buildup to the 2015 NFL Draft, the Alabama coach told anyone who would listen that his wide receiver could make an impact at the next level.

“DeAndrew White is probably the guy that I would say, if you said, ‘Who would be most underappreciated by the NFL?’ because he has a lot more ability than what his production maybe has been here,” Saban said after Alabama’s pro day. “He’s got great speed. He’s got great size. He’s a great special teams player.”

“I think he’s going to be a real value for somebody. Somebody’s going to get a guy who has great ability and probably could develop into something special.”

When word of Saban’s comments about White were relayed to Cooper, this year’s fourth overall pick expressed similar support.

"Nick said that? Nick was correct," Cooper said. "Great athlete. Great route runner, and he's getting better. He's always getting better, and he always wants to work. He's driven, and he can go out and make plays. I'm telling you, he can go out there and make plays."

Yet despite the high-profile endorsements and a 4.34-second 40-yard dash time at his pro day, White sat through 256 picks of the draft without hearing his name called. The wideout knew his injury history would be a deterrent, but he still thought a team would take a shot on him in the later rounds.

"I was surprised," White said. "I had been hearing a lot of good stuff from coaches and scouts but things worked out that way."

Shortly after the draft concluded, White fielded a call from nearly every NFL team, all reaching out to gauge his interest in signing as an undrafted free agent. White said he was offered more money elsewhere, but he chose to join the 49ers because San Francisco represented the best opportunity to stick long-term.

"I decided I didn't want to do the money grab," White said. "I made the best choice for my career. I don't regret it at all. I love the facility, I love the program, I love the staff and I love the team."

Although no official stats were taken during the 49ers offseason program, it's a safe bet that White was the most targeted wide receiver throughout the nine-week schedule.

He displayed strong hands, solid route-running, impressive leaping ability, and most importantly, top-end speed. White said he felt no lingering effects from the laundry list of injuries he dealt with in college.

"Oh yeah, I'm good," White said. "I haven't had a problem with my knee since the year I did it or anything else. I'm recovered. I'm full-go."

White appeared to mesh well with all three 49ers quarterbacks. He rarely, if ever, mishandled a pass from Colin Kaepernick, famous for being a gunslinger.

"He throws like no other," White said. "You watch his windup, and he just lets it go like a rocket. It's challenging to catch but it makes you think faster. You just have to focus on the ball. It's really a reflex with him."

As of now, the 49ers have 12 receivers on their roster. White fully understands that at least half of those players will not make the final 53-man roster out of training camp. That's why he wants to prove his value beyond catching passes.

"The more versatile you are, the better chance you have to be on the field," White said. "I like to try to take advantage of that because I'm an athlete. I can do a lot of things."

Along with the likes of Reggie Bush and Jarryd Hayne, White received reps in the punt and kick return game during OTAs and minicamp. He also has experience playing gunner on special teams at Alabama.

"He's not afraid of anything," special teams coordinator Thomas McGaughey Jr. said. "He's not afraid of competition. He goes out there every day and works his tail off. You can't ask for much more from a rookie free agent. I think he's on his way."

Famous undrafted wide receivers that went on to star in the NFL include names like Wes Welker, Victor Cruz and Rod Smith. White obviously still has everything to accomplish, but those players prove that successful careers can start from humble beginnings.

The highlight of White's standout offseason came on the final day of minicamp. In a hurry-up, red-zone period, White ran down the left side of the field, leaped over his defender and hauled in a touchdown pass from Blaine Gabbert.

Without breaking stride, White returned to same line of scrimmage to run another play, this time on the opposite side of the field. He ran a skinny post toward the back of the end zone, where Gabbert targeted him again. The pass was high and behind the receiver, but White displayed excellent body control by snatching the ball midair and tapping both feet inbounds for another dazzling score.

"He's made some incredible plays," said Quinton Dial, White's teammate at Alabama. "I like how he's looking out there."

Added co-wide receivers coach Ronald Curry, "I like his competitiveness. He's a savvy player, too. If you're out there working hard every day, the ball will find you. He got hot during minicamp."

Coincidentally, White's new home is not far away from the player whose shadow he couldn't escape in college. Across the Bay in Oakland, Cooper is beginning his career with the Raiders.

"We talk almost every day. That's my boy," White said. "We tell each other what we did at practice and how we routes. We still compete even now that we're not on the same team. We still compete. I think that's pretty cool."

White doesn't like to look too far ahead, but for the Houston native, it's difficult not to imagine what it will be like on Aug. 15 when the 49ers visit the Texans to open the preseason. A football career with so many twists and turns comes full circle to the place where it started.

"I can't wait, honestly," White said. "Going back home for my first NFL game, it would be a dream come true. We'll have to see what happens, but I've circled that date. And when it's my time, it'll be my time."
