CHARGERS VS. 49ERS

The San Francisco 49ers return to Levi's® Stadium as they take on the San Diego Chargers in the team's final non-conference game of the season. This marks the 14th overall meeting between the two clubs with the 49ers leading the all-time series, 7-6. San Francisco holds a 3-2 home record against San Diego as they host the Chargers for the first time since 2006.

The 49ers look for their 8th win of the season as last week they lost to the Seattle Seahawks, 17-7. On offense, the Niners ran for 140 yards and one touchdown on 32 carries. RB Frank Gore rushed for a touchdown while RB Carlos Hyde set a new single-game career high with 55 yards on six carries (9.2 average). FB Bruce Miller caught four passes for 56 yards, tying his career high in both categories.

On defense, San Francisco tied a single-game high for the team this season with five sacks of Seahawks QB Russell Wilson. DT Tank Carradine registered his first two sacks of his career. LB Ahmad Brooks registered his team-leading 6th sack of the season while LB Dan Skuta and DT Ray McDonald each registered a sack of their own. S Eric Reid recorded his 3rd interception of the season, returning a Wilson pass 73 yards which is the longest interception return of his career and the longest by a member of the 49ers since LB NaVorro Bowman's 89-yard interception return vs. Atlanta (12/23/13).

BY THE NUMBERS

1,500 Last week at Sea., K Phil Dawson became the 19th kicker in NFL history to reach 1,500 kicking pts.

206 The 49ers defense has held opponents to 206 passing yds. per game this season, ranking 3rd in the NFL (Sea. - 184.3; KC - 199.2).

157 The Niners rank 2nd in the NFL this season allowing just 157 plays of 10-or-more yds. (Sea. - 145).

80 With 80 rec. yds. this week against SD, WR Anquan Boldin would become the 4th player in franchise history with multiple seasons of 1,000-or-more rec. yds. (2013 - 1,179 rec. yds.) and the first player to do so in his first two seasons with the team.

15 San Francisco is 6-0 this season when RB Frank Gore registers 15-or-more rushing atts.

6-1 Since 2011, San Francisco has a record of 6-1 at home against non-conference opponents. The team's .857 winning pct. ranks t-3rd in the NFC over that span (GB - .875; Sea. - .875; Dal. - .857).

THE HEAD COACHES

Jim Harbaugh was named the 18th head coach in the storied history of the San Francisco 49ers franchise on January 7, 2011. Over the last four seasons, the 49ers have tallied a 48-21-1 overall record (5-3 in the postseason). After a 13-3 regular season record, and a trip to the NFC Championship game in 2011, the Niners went 11-4-1 in 2012, on their way to Super Bowl XLVII. In 2013, San Francisco posted a 12-4 regular season record and earned its third consecutive trip to the NFC Championship Game. Harbaugh logged 18 years of coaching experience prior to joining the 49ers - Stanford (head coach, 2007-10); San Diego, (head coach, 2004-06); Oakland Raiders (offensive asst., 2002-03) and Western Kentucky (volunteer asst., 1994-2001). In college, he played at Michigan for the legendary Bo Schembechler from 1982-86. Jim and his wife, Sarah, have two daughters, Addison and Katherine, and a son, Jack. He also has three children, Jay, James Jr. and Grace. Jim is the son of Jack and Jackie. His brother, John, is the head coach of the Baltimore Ravens, and his sister, Joanie, is married to Indiana University men's basketball head coach, Tom Crean.

Mike McCoy is in his second season as head coach of the San Diego Chargers. He led the Chargers to a 9-7 record in the regular season and a Wild Card berth in his first season with the club in 2013. McCoy went to the Chargers from Denver, where he helped the Broncos to their second-highest win total in franchise history, as they went 13-3 and entered the playoffs as the No. 1 seed in the AFC. The Broncos won 11 straight games to end the regular season, the second-longest streak in team history, and became only the seventh Super Bowl-era team to win their final 11 contests. The 2011 season was a storybook one in Denver as McCoy helped the Broncos reach the AFC Divisional round after winning their first AFC West title since 2005. McCoy came to Denver after the '08 season, becoming Denver's offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach. McCoy spent nine seasons in Carolina, serving as wide receivers coach (2001), quarterbacks coach (2002-2008) and passing game coordinator (2007-08). The Panthers totaled three playoff appearances, two division titles, two NFC Championship Game appearances and a berth in Super Bowl XXXVIII (2003) during McCoy's nine years on the staff.

RACKING UP THE WINS

In his first four seasons at the helm, head coach Jim Harbaugh has guided the 49ers to 43 regular season wins, three postseason appearances, three trips to the NFC Championship Game, consecutive NFC West Division titles in 2011-12 and a trip to Super Bowl XLVII. He became the first head coach since the merger in 1970 to lead his team to a conference championship game in each of his first three seasons.

- With a win at StL (10/13/14), Jim Harbaugh improved his record to 40-13-1. According to the Elias Sports Bureau, Harbaugh became the seventh coach to have won at least 75 pct. of his games at time of 40th career win.

THE BELL COW

Frank Gore embodies what it means to do things the Forty Niner Way. As the heart and soul of the 49ers offense for the past nine seasons, the five-time Pro Bowl running back has established himself as one of the premier running backs in the NFL. The franchise's all-time leading rusher (10,771 yards), Gore became the 29th player in NFL history to rush for 10,000 or more yards in a career, and just the 10th player to reach that mark while also playing 10 seasons with one team. Gore tallied his team-record seventh 1,000-yard season in 2013, rushing for 1,128 yards, becoming the 20th player in NFL history to record at least seven 1,000-yard rushing seasons during a career. He also holds the team records for career rushing attempts (2,391), rushing touchdowns (63) and 100-yard rushing games (37). Gore and teammate LB Patrick Willis are the only two-time recipients of the Bill Walsh Award, which is voted on by the coaches, and given to the 49ers team MVP.

2014 Highlights...

- Rushed for 95 yds. on 19 carries at NYG (11/16). Moved past RB Thomas Jones and RB Jamal Lewis for the 22nd most rushing yds. in NFL history.

THE KAPTAIN

Colin Kaepernick quickly grew into one of the most exciting and explosive players in the NFL after taking over the reins of the 49ers offense in Week 11 of the 2012 season. Gifted with a rocket arm, blazing speed, killer instincts and poise beyond his years, Kaepernick guided the 49ers to the NFC Championship and a berth in Super Bowl XLVII in just his 10th career start, the 3rd fewest of any starting Super Bowl QB. He set the all-time single-game rushing record (regular or postseason) for a QB with 181 yds. against the Green Bay Packers in the NFC Divisional Playoff game.

2014 Highlights...

- Completed 20 of 29 pass atts. for 256 yds. and 1 TD vs. Was. (11/23). Threw at least one TD pass in 18 straight games, tied for the longest streak by a quarterback in franchise history. [Steve Young - 18: (10/9/94 - 11/26/95)].
- Threw for 343 yds. and 3 TDs, on 22 of 35 atts. for a QB rating of 123.9 at StL (10/13). Became the first QB in franchise history to win his first four starts on Monday Night Football.
- Threw for 218 yds. and 2 TDs on 17 of 30 atts. vs. Phi. (9/28). Added 7 rushing atts. for 58 yds. which marked the first time in his career that he rushed for 50+ yds. in three consecutive games and just the third time in franchise history.
- Completed 29 of 37 attempts for 245 yards, one touchdown and a QB rating of 103.3 at Ari. (9/22). His 29 completions, including each of his first nine attempts, set new career highs.
- Completed 11 of 13 atts. for 157 yds., 2 TDs and a QB rating of 156.6. in the first half at Dal. (9/7). His 156.6 QB rating was the highest in any half of his career. Finished the game with 201 yds. and an overall passer rating of 125.5, his highest rating since Week 1 of 2013 vs. GB (129.4).

Career Highlights...

- Kaepernick made his 25th career start against the Bears on 9/14/14. Among all current starting QBs in the NFL, Kaepernick's 18-7 (.720) record is the 5th best through the first 25 starts of a career.

- Finished the 2013 season with a 91.6 passer rating, the highest single-season rating by a 49ers quarterback since 2001 (Jeff Garcia - 94.8).
- Completed 15 of 24 pass atts. for 235 yds. and 3 TDs at Was. (11/25/13). Had a career-high passer rating of 134.5.
- Set the 49ers franchise record for most passing yds. in a season opener vs. GB (9/8/13) as he completed 27 of 39 atts. for 412 yds., 3 TDs and a QB rating of 129.4. Since 1960, Kaepernick joined Hall of Famer Joe Montana as the only QBs in franchise history to throw for 400 yds, 3 TDs and 0 INTs in a game.
- Had a 58-yd. run at Sea. (1/19/14) (NFC-C), which is the longest run by a QB in NFL postseason history. Finished the game with 130 rushing yds. and now owns three of the top five rushing performances by a QB in NFL postseason history.
- Helped defeat the Panthers, 23-10, at Car. (1/12/14) (NFC-D) to earn his 3rd road win in the playoffs, which is the most among all QBs in franchise history.
- In his first career postseason start, set the NFL single-game rushing record (regular season and playoffs) by a QB with 181 yds. vs. GB (1/12/13), surpassing Michael Vick's 173 rushing yds. in 2002 (12/1/02 at Min.).

AN ALL-PRO

Vernon Davis has established himself as one of the most versatile and explosive tight ends in the game. Drafted by the 49ers with the 6th overall pick in the 2006 NFL Draft, Davis has a pair of touchdown receptions in the 2014 season. In 2013, he hauled in 13 touchdown receptions, becoming the first tight end in NFL history to register 13-or-more touchdowns in two seasons (13 in 2009). His performance last season earned him his second career Pro Bowl selection. During the 2011 NFL playoffs, Davis registered 10 catches for 292 yards and four touchdowns, becoming just the fifth player in the Super Bowl era to register at least two receiving touchdowns in consecutive postseason games in the same season. Davis followed up his first trip to the playoffs with 254 receiving yards in the 2012 postseason, joining Cardinals WR Larry Fitzgerald as the only two players in NFL history to register four, 100-yard receiving games in their first five playoff contests. In the 2013 postseason, Davis hauled in a touchdown at Green Bay (1/5/14), and another at Carolina (1/12/14) the following week. He is currently tied for the most postseason touchdown receptions among all tight ends in NFL history with seven. Davis led the team in both receiving yards and touchdowns in 2009 and 2010, and was rewarded with a five-year contract extension on September 11, 2010. Davis is just as active off the field as he is on it, pursuing everything from curling and painting to humanitarian trips overseas.

2014 Highlights...

- Passed Brent Jones for the most career recpts. by a TE in franchise history with 3 recpts. for 21 yds. vs. Was. (11/23).
- Caught 2 TD passes from QB Colin Kaepernick in the 1st qtr. of the season opener at Dal. (9/7). This marked Davis' 7th career multi-TD game and 2nd on opening day [2 TDs vs. GB (9/8/13)].

1. Vernon Davis		422
2. Brent Jones		417
3. Monty Stickles		207
4. Eric Johnson		192
5. Russ Francis		186

Career Highlights...

- Ranks 1st in franchise history among TEs in TDs (55), rec. yds. (5,437) and recpts. (422). His 55 rec. TDs are 4th most in 49ers history.
- Reached 50 TDs in just 115 games, the third fastest among TEs in NFL history (Antonio Gates - 92; Jerry Smith - 100).
- According to ESPN Stats & Information, Davis is one of only three 49ers with multiple seasons of 10-plus receiving touchdowns in the past 40 years.
- Has nine 100-yd. rec. games, which ranks 1st in franchise history among TEs.
- Has tallied 600 career postseason rec. yds., ranking 6th most in NFL postseason history among TEs.

- Compiled 11 career 25+ yd. recpts. in 8 career postseason games, which ranks 2nd in 49ers postseason history, trailing WR Jerry Rice (14 recpts. in 23 games).
- Since 2009, Davis ranks 1st in the NFL in recpts. of 25-or-more yds. (47) and t-3rd in receiving TDs (46), among all TEs.
- Set single-season career highs with 78 recpts., 965 rec. yds. and 13 TD recpts., in 2009. He was one of only two TEs to lead their team in all three categories (Kel-len Winslow, TB). His rec. yds. and TD totals were both single-season records among 49ers TEs all-time.

- In 2009, his 13 TD recpts. tied the then-NFL record for most in a season by a TE (Antonio Gates - 13 TDs in 2004). Davis' TD recpts. tied for the most in the NFL with Patriots WR Randy Moss and Cardinals WR Larry Fitzgerald, making him the second TE (Rob Gronkowski - 17) in the Super Bowl era to lead the league (or tie for the lead) in TD recpts.

MAN OF THE YEAR

Anquan Boldin made an immediate impact after joining the 49ers in 2013. In his first season with the club, Boldin was selected by the coaches as the team's Bill Walsh Award recipient, given to the 49ers team MVP. He led the team in receptions (85) and receiving yards (1,179) and provided veteran leadership to many of the team's younger players. Boldin, originally a second-round draft selection in 2003 by the Arizona Cardinals, returned to the NFC West in 2013 after spending three seasons in the AFC with the Baltimore Ravens. The 12-year veteran and three-time Pro Bowl selection quickly became a fan favorite in Week 1 by recording 208 yards to break Jerry Rice's franchise record for the most receiving yards on opening day. Boldin has always had a knack for starting fast, exemplified by his possession of multiple NFL rookie records, including most receptions in a season (101) and most receiving yards in the first game of a career (217). He was named the NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year in 2003 and selected to the Pro Bowl that season for his efforts. He is the fastest player in NFL history to haul in his 400th, 500th and 600th career receptions and notched his 800th career reception on a 7-yard pass by QB Colin Kaepernick vs. Arizona (10/13/13) to become the fourth fastest in NFL history to accomplish the milestone (146 games).

DIVISIONAL DEFENSE

San Francisco's run defense in recent years has been remarkable, especially against the NFC West. It is tough to beat the same team twice in a season in the NFL, let alone limit their offensive production on the ground each game. The Niners have been able to limit their divisional opponents rushing efforts, leading the NFL in numerous run defense categories.

- Since 2009, the 49ers defense has only allowed 3,138 yds. rushing vs. their own division, ranking 1st in the NFL over that timespan.
- The 49ers also rank 1st in the NFL in rushing yds. per game allowed vs. their own division, giving up only 89.7 yds. per game and only allow a 3.64 avg. per carry, which ranks 1st in the NFL.
- Since 2009, the 49ers have allowed just 15 rushing TDs against division opponents, ranking 1st in the NFL.

Since 2011, the 49ers defense has been stout versus divisional opponents, ranking in the top-10 in several categories:

- NFC West foes are averaging just 3.80 yds. per carry versus the 49ers, which ranks 2nd in the NFC and 4th in the NFL against divisional opponents.

- Since 2011, the 49ers defense has been a roadblock against big run plays, allowing 54 rushes of 10+ yds., tied for the 5th fewest in the NFL.

- San Francisco is allowing 18.2 completions per game, which is the 4th fewest in the NFL versus divisional opponents.

- Against divisional opponents, few NFL defenses are as successful ending drives as San Francisco. 49ers opponents in the division are converting just 34.2 pct. of their 3rd downs, the 6th fewest conversion percentage allowed by any defense in the league.

THE CLOSER

A relentless and explosive defender, two-time All-Pro Justin Smith anchors the 49ers defensive front. Nicknamed "Cowboy" for his blue-collar, Midwestern approach to his job, Smith is widely recognized as a leader in the locker room. This season, Smith has recorded 5.0 sacks, marking the 12th time in his career that he has tallied at least 5.0 sacks in a season. His efforts in 2013 earned him his fifth straight Pro Bowl selection. In 2012, he was named Second-Team AP All-Pro at two different positions (DT & DE) after registering 130 tackles, 3.0 sacks, one fumble recovery and two passes defended. Since joining the 49ers in 2008, he has recorded 43.5 sacks and ranks first in the NFL among defensive tackles over that span. Smith's 43.5 sacks also rank 2nd in franchise history among DTs to Dana Stubblefield (46.5). Smith was rewarded with a two-year contract in June of 2013 that will keep him in red and gold through 2015.

2014 Highlights...

- Brought down Seahawks QB Russell Wilson for his 5th sack of the season (11/27 vs. Sea.). Has registered at least 5.0 sacks in a single season for the 12th time in his career.
- Registered a strip-sack of Redskins QB Robert Griffin III vs. Was. (11/23) for the 16th FF of his career. He now has 86.0 career sacks.
- Registered his 2nd FF of the season and 15th of his career vs. KC (10/5), stripping the ball from Chiefs RB Jamaal Charles.
- Recorded 5 total tackles and his first FR of the season vs. Phi. (9/28). His FR marked the 10th of his career.
- Registered 1.0 sack of Bears QB Jay Cutler vs. Chi. (9/14). It marked his 3rd of the season and 85th of his career. His 3.0 sacks on the season tied for the most he's had through the first two games of a season in his career (2006).
- Brought down Cowboys QB Tony Romo twice to open the season at Dal. (9/7), marking his first multi-sack game since 11/25/13 at Was. (2.0 sacks). This marked the eighth time Smith has registered a sack on opening day. It also marked Smith's 3rd multi-sack game on opening day [3.0 at KC (9/10/06); 2.0 vs. Sea. (9/11/11)].

Career Highlights...

- Five-time Pro Bowl selection (2010-2014).
- Named 2013 AP Second Team All-Pro.
- Dating back to his rookie season in 2001, Smith had started 185 consecutive games. At the time, the consecutive starts streak led all defensive linemen and ranked 3rd among all NFL players.
- Since 2001, leads all defensive linemen in tackles according to Gamebook statistics with 881.
- Tied his career high with 8.5 sacks in 2010.
- Ranks 2nd on the 49ers with 43.5 sacks since joining the team in 2008.
- Named the 2013 Hazeltine Iron Man Award winner, which is given annually to the most courageous and inspirational defensive player as voted upon by the defensive coaches.
- With 7.5 sacks in 2011, Smith became just the 3rd player in franchise history to register at least 6.0 sacks in four consecutive seasons.
- In 2012, Smith was named the winner of the Len Eshmont Award, given to the player that best exemplifies the "inspirational and courageous play" of Len Eshmont. He was also named AP Second-Team All-Pro (DT), AP Second-Team All-Pro (DE), and a starter in the Pro Bowl.

LB PATRICK WILLIS ON SMITH

"Justin's a consummate team player. I told him on the sidelines, series after series, how much I respect him. I think he'll be one of the best players I'll have ever played with in my life and it's been a pleasure playing with him. Week-in and week-out he comes to play. He practices hard in practice and goes hard on Sundays. He's a tremendous player."

- According to NFL GSIS Gamebooks, Smith has tallied the most total tackles in the NFL (411) since joining the 49ers in 2008, among defensive linemen.

SAFETY FIRST

An eight-year veteran, S Antoine Bethea joined the 49ers in 2014. Since being drafted in 2006, he has proven to be one of the most consistent and reliable tacklers in the NFL. He has started 110 consecutive games dating back to 2008 and has started all 137 games that he's appeared in over his career. The two-time Pro Bowl selection has made an impact off the field as well by launching his Safe Coverage Foundation, hosting free football camps for youth and donating game tickets to underserved children.

2014 Highlights...

- Intercepted Saints QB Drew Brees on the opening drive of the game at NO (11/9). The takeaway led to a 4-yd. TD run by RB Frank Gore.
- Recorded his 2nd INT of the season and 16th of his career vs. StL (11/2), picking off Rams QB Austin Davis early in the 2nd qtr. The takeaway led to a TD pass from QB Colin Kaepernick to WR Anquan Boldin.
- Registered his first sack as a member of the 49ers at StL (10/13), bringing down Rams QB Austin Davis. He now has 4.5 career sacks.

- Was named NFC Defensive Player of the Week in his 100th consecutive start vs. Phi. (9/28). Registered 1 INT and 1 FF, becoming the first 49ers player to register an INT and FF in the same game since LB NaVorro Bowman at Arz. (12/29/13). Bethea also tackled Eagles RB LeSean McCoy at the SF 2-yd. line on 2nd and goal on what would eventually be a game-sealing goal-line stand.

Career Highlights...

- According to NFL Gamebook statistics, he has recorded the most tackles (878) among all defensive backs since 2006.
- Has started all 137 games he's appeared in since 2006, including 16 games each year from 2008-13.
- As a rookie in 2006, was a member of an Indianapolis Colts team that won Super Bowl XLI over the Chicago Bears, 29-17.
- Selected to the AFC Pro Bowl in 2007 and 2009.
- Was the recipient of the Colts Ed Block Courage Award in 2012. Also voted the 2013 Colts Man of the Year.

REID AND REACT

As a first-round pick in the 2013 NFL Draft, Eric Reid did everything the 49ers were looking for when they selected the LSU safety as the 18th overall draft choice. Reid earned his starting spot in training camp and carried his momentum into the season as he started all 16 regular season games and all three games in the postseason. He quickly made a name for himself as a rookie, finishing the season as the only player in the NFC to record four interceptions and two fumble recoveries. He became the first 49ers rookie safety to be named to the Pro Bowl in franchise history. Reid was the recipient of the Thomas Herrion Memorial Award given by the 49ers coaches to the rookie or first-year player who has taken advantage of every opportunity and turned it into a positive situation.

2014 Highlights...

- As time expired in the first half at Sea. (12/14), intercepted Seahawks QB Russell Wilson for his 3rd INT of the season and 7th of his career, and returned the pick 73 yds.
- Intercepted Giants QB Eli Manning vs. NYG (11/16).
- Registered his 5th career INT and returned it 48 yds. to the Cowboys 2-yd. line vs. Dal. (9/7). Has now recorded an INT in each of his two season openers.

Career Highlights...

- Made his NFL debut vs. GB (9/8/13), recording 7 tackles, 1 INT, 1 PD and 1 special teams tackle. His first career INT came off of Packers QB Aaron Rodgers. Reid became the first 49ers rookie to intercept a pass on opening day since both DB Don Griffin and CB Tim McKyer each registered an INT at TB (9/7/86).
- Registered his 2nd INT of his career picking off a pass by Seahawks QB Russell Wilson vs. Sea. (9/15/13). According to the Elias Sports Bureau, Reid was the only 49ers rookie, since the merger in 1970, to register an INT in each of the team's first 2 games. The last rookie in the NFL to register an INT in the team's first 2 games was Phi. S Nate Allen in 2010.
- Notched a single-game career-high 9 tackles vs. Hou. (10/6), and also added 1 PD.
- Tallied 1 INT vs. Arz. (10/13/13), the 3rd of his career, picking off QB Carson Palmer and returning it 53 yds to the Cardinals 7-yd. line. Also recorded his first career FR, recovering a fumble by Arz. WR Larry Fitzgerald. The takeaway led to a 6-yd. TD run by RB Kendall Hunter.
- Recorded his first career special teams FR, picking up the loose ball after it was touched by Panthers CB Drayton Florence vs. Car. (11/10/13). The takeaway led to a 43-yd. FG by K Phil Dawson.
- Picked off QB Mike Glennon at TB (12/15/13), registering the 4th INT of his career. He also added 5 tackles and 1 PD.
- Finished the 2013 season as the only player in the NFC to record 4 INTs and 2 FRs.
- Named to the 2013 NFC Pro Bowl. Also earned the Thomas Herrion Memorial Award given by the 49ers coaches to the rookie or first-year player who has taken advantage of every opportunity and turned it into a positive situation

COMIN' AT YA

One of the most feared pass rushers in the NFL, Aldon Smith has wreaked havoc on opposing quarterbacks since entering the NFL as the 7th overall pick in the 2012 NFL Draft. Since sacks became an official statistic in 1982, his 33.5 career sacks in his first two seasons are the most by any player in their first two NFL seasons. Smith tallied 30.5 in his first 27 games, becoming the fastest player to reach the 30-sack mark in league history. In 2012, he registered 19.5 sacks, to set a single-season franchise record and ranked second in the NFL. Smith's performance earned him First-Team All-Pro honors and his first Pro Bowl selection (starter). He was named NFC Defensive Player of the Month in November of 2012 by notching 9.0 sacks in just three games. As a rookie, Smith led the team and all NFL rookies with 14.0 sacks, the 2nd-highest total by a rookie in NFL history (Jevon Kearse, 14.5 in 1999).

2014 Highlights...

- In his first start of the season vs. Was. (11/23), registered 2.0 sacks for his 13th career game with 2.0-or-more sacks.

Career Highlights...

- Smith's 33.5 sacks from 2011-12 are the most by a player in his 1st 2 years in NFL history. Smith reached the mark by surpassing Hall of Fame DE Reggie White (31.0).
- His 33.5 sacks from 2011-12 are the most by any player in consecutive seasons in 49ers history. The previous record was held by DE Chris Doleman (27.0 sacks from 1997-98).
- Reached 30.5 career sacks in just 27 games, doing so at NO (11/25/12), marking the fastest player to record 30.0 sacks in NFL history. DE Reggie White held the previous mark (28 games).
- Finished the 2012 season with the most sacks in the NFC (19.5) and 2nd most in the NFL (J.J. Watt, Hou. - 20.5).
- Set a new franchise record for most sacks in a season with 19.5 in 2012, surpassing Hall of Fame DE Fred Dean (17.5 in 1983).
- Smith's 19.5 sacks through the 49ers first 13 games of 2012 were the most sacks through a team's first 13 games in NFL history.
- Tied a 49ers record with at least 1.0 sack in 7 consecutive games (10/18/12 - 12/9/12), joining Dwaine Board (10/16/83 - 12/4/83) and Dana Stubblefield (9/21/97 - 11/4/90) for the longest streak with at least 1.0 sack in team history.

- Set a single-game career high, tallying 5.5 sacks vs. Chi. (11/19), taking down QB Jason Campbell. The 5.5 sacks were the most in Monday Night Football history and the second most by a 49er in a single game in franchise history, trailing just DE Fred Dean's 6.0 sacks vs. NO (11/13/83). The 5.5 sacks were also the most in the NFL since NYG DE Osi Umenyiora registered 6.0 vs. Phi. on 9/30/07. Smith also tallied 2 FFs vs. Chi. (11/19), setting a single-game career-high. Smith has 12.0 sacks in 5 career games on MNF, the most by any player on MNF since 2011.
- Set the 49ers rookie sack record (14.0) in 2011, surpassing DT Charles Haley's mark of 12.0 in 1986. Smith's 14.0 sacks led SF and all rookies in 2011 and ranked t-5th in the NFL.
- In 2012, named NFC Defensive Player of the Month for November, tallying 9.0 sacks in just 3 games during the month.
- Smith brought down QB John Skelton twice in the 4th qtr. at Arz. (10/29), giving him 21.5 sacks for his career. With 2.0 sacks on the day, Smith reached 20.0 career sacks in just 24 games, becoming the 2nd fastest in 49ers history, behind Hall of Famer Fred Dean who reached 20.0 sacks in 23 games (1982-83).
- Registered his first career INT and returned it 6 yds. at NE (12/16), picking off QB Tom Brady. It led to a 27-yd. TD pass from QB Colin Kaepernick to WR Michael Crabtree on the ensuing play.

THIEF IN THE NIGHT

Despite not starting on defense in the first six games of the season, LB Chris Borland has stepped in and been a major contributor. Filling in for All-Pros is no easy task, especially for a rookie. However, Borland has gone on to become Pepsi Rookie of the Week in back-to-back weeks (10 & 11) as well as NFC Defensive Player of the Week (Week 11 at NYG). After being selected in the third round of the 2014 NFL Draft, he made his first NFL start on October 19 at Denver and registered a team-high 15 tackles and his first career sack. The following week vs. St. Louis, he registered 22 tackles, the most by a 49er since LB Patrick Willis registered 22 vs. Atlanta (12/23/13).

After his performance at the Giants (11/16/14), Borland earned praise from various outlets, including Sacramento Bee reporter Matt Barrows, who made Borland's case for the NFL's Defensive Rookie of the Year Award:

"Justin Smith thinks teammate Chris Borland should be in the running for the NFL's Defensive Rookie of the Year. Absurd, right? After all, the 49ers linebacker was limited to special teams until Week 6, and he's only started four games this season. And yet ... the 49ers' third-round pick has been making up - rapidly making up - for lost time. He has 55 tackles in the last four games (10/19/14 at Den.; 11/2/14 vs. StL; 11/9/14 at NO; 11/16/14 at NYG)...What's more, Borland's plays have made an impact. One snap after his diving fumble recovery in New Orleans, the 49ers kicked a game-winning field goal. One of his interceptions against the Giants directly led to three points. His second - with a significant assist from fellow rookie Dontae Johnson - foiled a late-game goal-line touchdown attempt in New York. The 49ers' defense continues to outperform the offense and Borland has been the heart of the unit since he took over for injured team captain Patrick Willis."

HEAD COACH JIM HARBAUGH ON BORLAND

"He's got great instincts. He's got a great ability to take coaching. He's got a great knack for the football. He's moving a step ahead. It's like the great baseball players that are moving at the crack of the bat. He's moving before, a step before some other players that have played this game for a very long time. The way he's able to dip. The way he has a knack for the football. It's like a thief in the night. He'll come steal your football from you."

2014 Highlights...

- Made his NFL debut at Dal. (9/7).
- Registered a career-high 4 special teams tackles vs. KC (10/5).
- Made his first career start and registered 15 tackles and his first career sack at Den. (10/19).
- Registered 22 tackles vs. StL (11/2), the most tackles by a 49er since LB Patrick Willis notched 22 tackles vs. Atl. (12/23/13).
- Had 17 tackles and recovered a fumble in OT by Saints QB Drew Brees at NO (11/9). K Phil Dawson made a game-winning 35-yd. FG on the next play. He is the only player in the NFLc this season to register 17-or-more tackles in back-to-back games. Was named the Pepsi Rookie of the Week for his performance.
- Registered 2 INTs of Giants QB Eli Manning, the first and second of his career, at NYG (11/16). He became the first 49ers rookie LB to register an INT since Jamie Winborn picked off Saints QB Aaron Brooks on 1/6/02. He is also the first 49ers rookie LB to ever register 2 INTs in a game and is one of two LBs in franchise history to do it over the past 40 years [Ken Norton Jr. at StL (10/22/95)]. Was named NFC Defensive Player of the Week for his performance and also earned the Pepsi Rookie of the Week award for the second-consecutive week.
- Joined LB Ray Farmer (Philadelphia, Week 14, 1996) as the only rookie linebackers drafted in the third round or later to be named NFC Defensive Player of the Week.
- According to the NFL Gamebooks, has registered the most tackles in the NFL since taking over as the starter in Week 7 with 97.

PHIL-ING UP THE RECORD BOOKS

Coming off the first Pro Bowl selection of his career in 2012, Phil Dawson joined the 49ers in 2013 after spending the previous 14 seasons with the Cleveland Browns. He finished the 2013 regular season with the second most made field goals (32) and points scored (140) in 49ers history. After Dawson kicked the game-winning 33-yard field goal in the Wild Card round at Green Bay (1/5/14), linebacker Patrick Willis couldn't contain his appreciation for the 49ers kicker, "I don't think you realize, I'm one of his biggest fans. That guy is amazing, and I'm so blessed to have him on this team." Dawson made the move to San Francisco after establishing himself as one of the most accurate kickers in NFL history, ranking 12th all-time with a field goal percentage of 84.3% (360 of 427) and 4th in NFL history from 50-plus yards, making 70.2% (33 of 47) of his kicks. Dawson has proven himself to be one of the most reliable kickers in extreme weather conditions in NFL history, registering a single-season career-high with 140 points in 2013.

2014 Highlights...

- With 1 PAT at Sea. (12/14), became the 19th kicker in NFL history to reach 1,500 kicking pts.
- Connected on all 3 FGAs (31, 37, 44) in the first half vs. NYG (11/16). This marked the 8th time Dawson has hit 3-or-more FGs in the first half [last time: 12/8/13 vs. Sea. (23, 48, 52)].
- Made the game-tying 45-yd. FG with 49 seconds left in regulation and later made the game-winning 35-yd. FG in OT at NO (11/9).
- Was named NFC Special Teams Player of the week for Week 5 when he connected on 5 of 5 FG atts. vs. KC (10/5), from 31, 55, 52, 27 and 30 yds. Dawson has hit 31 career FGs. from 50+ yds., which ranks t-2nd among all active kickers. His 5 FGs made tied the 2nd most he's made in a single game in his career.

- Made all 4 of his FG atts. vs. Phi. (9/28), from 29, 51, 46 and 31 yds.
- Connected on 2 of 2 FG atts. vs. Chi. (9/14), including the first FG in Levi's® Stadium history from 27 yds. in the 1st qtr. Also connected on both of his PATs on the night.

Career Highlights...

- Set a new 49ers postseason record for longest FG made with a 49-yd. FG at Car. (1/12/14) (NFC-D).
- Holds the 49ers record for most consecutive made FGs with 27.
- Has the 3rd highest all-time FG percentage, among kickers with 300+ FG atts., in NFL history at 84.3%.
- Ranks as the Browns franchise leader in FG percentage with a mark of 84% (305-363).
- Is 1st on the Browns all-time FGs made list with 305 kicks made.
- Ranks 2nd in Browns franchise history with 1,265 career points (Lou Groza - 1,349).
- Holds the Browns franchise single-season record with 30 FGs made in 2008.
- Is the only player in Browns franchise history to account for 6 100-point seasons.
- In 2008, he became the first player in Browns franchise history to convert a 50+ yd. FG in three consecutive games.
- In 2004, he established a Browns franchise record with 27 consecutive FGs made [vs. SD (10/19/03) - vs. NYJ (11/21/04)], only to one-up his own record in 2012 with 29 consecutive FGs made [vs. Bal. (12/4/11) - at Oak. (12/2/12)].
- According to the Elias Sports Bureau, Dawson, who also holds the Cleveland Browns franchise record for most consecutive made FGs (27), joins K Olindo Mare (Mia. and Sea.) and Neil Rackers (Arz. and Hou.) as the only kickers who currently hold the record for most consecutive made FGs for two different franchises.

LEAGUE LEE-DING

Four-time All-Pro and one of the best punters in the NFL, Andy Lee is going against a new challenge in 2014, Levi's® Stadium. Having punted through the unpredictable weather conditions of Candlestick Park his entire career, Lee is making his case as one of the best punters in NFL history. He has the fifth-highest net average (39.5) and fifth-highest gross punting average (46.2) in league history. In 2011, Lee posted a net punting average of 44.0, the second best in a single-season in the history of the NFL. The following season, he recorded a 43.2 net average, the fourth-highest single-season total in NFL history, on his way to earning his fourth AP All-Pro selection. He is the franchise leader in punts, punting yardage, gross average, punts downed inside the 20 and net average. The former sixth-round pick has earned Pro Bowl honors in three of the past seven seasons ('07, '09, '11).

2014 Highlights...

- Had a gross avg. of 52.5 yds. and a net avg. of 42.8 yds. on 4 punts at Oak. (12/7). Had 2 of his 4 punts downed inside the 20 yd. line.
- Punted 6 times for a gross avg. of 50.3 and a net avg. of 48.5 yds. vs. Was. (11/23). Had 2 of his 6 punts downed inside the 20 yd. line.
- Averaged 46.8 yds. per punt and pinned the New York Giants inside its own 20-yd. line on three occasions on 11/16.
- Punted 5 times for a gross avg. of 54.4 yds. and a net avg. of 50.0 yds. at Den. (10/19). Had a 71-yd. punt which t-4th longest of his career.
- Had 4 of his 5 punts downed inside the 20-yd. line with a 43.0 avg. at StL (10/13).
- Averaged 45.8 yds. per punt and pinned Dallas inside its own 20-yd. line on three occasions in the season opener (9/7).

Career Highlights...

- Ranks 5th all-time in highest net avg. (39.5) and 5th in gross avg. (46.2) in NFL history.
- Set the then NFL single-season record in net punting avg. (44.0) in 2011. The previous record was held by Oak. P Shane Lechler (43.9 - 2009). Followed up with a 43.2 net punting avg. in 2012, 4th best single-season avg. in NFL history.

5. Thomas Morstead, NO	2012	43.2

- Since 2007, Lee ranks t-1st in the NFL in net avg. (41.0) and 2nd in the NFL in gross avg. (47.9) and punts downed inside the 20 (235).
- Set an NFL record in 2007 with 42 punts downed inside the 20, and ranked 2nd in the NFL with a 47.3 gross avg. and 41.0 net avg.
- Ranks 1st in franchise history in punts (933), yds. (43,120), gross avg. (46.2), punts inside the 20 (297) and net avg. (39.5)
- Was the first 49ers rookie punter since 1957 to lead the league for the longest punt (81 yds.) of the year in 2004.

THAT'S WHAT HE SAID

On S Antoine Bethea

"He's one of those guys you kind of take for granted while you're working on your problem children. So I am fond of him. I just like guys that are kind of old school - 'I come in, do my job, and the coach never has to worry about me.'"

- Current NBC Analyst and former NFL Head Coach, Tony Dungy

On WR Anquan Boldin

"You watch Anquan and you take things from him every day. That's just being smart. But, he goes a step past that. He will go up and talk to a guy, whether it's the quarterback or the wide receiver, an offensive player. I've even seen him do it with defensive backs, and he'll give them a tip. It gets quiet when he's talking because people are listening." - Head Coach Jim Harbaugh

"Comes to practice, goes straight home, comes back and kicks butt the next day. And then he goes home, comes back and kicks butt again. You feel showered by the attributes that he has in terms of seriousness of being great, and seriousness of our team improving and winning, in all regards."

- Head Coach Jim Harbaugh

On LB Chris Borland

"He's got great instincts. He's got a great ability to take coaching. He's got a great knack for the football. He's moving a step ahead. It's like the great baseball players that are moving at the crack of the bat. He's moving before, a step before some other players that have played this game for a very long time. The way he's able to dip. The way he has a knack for the football. It's like a thief in the night. He'll come steal your football from you."

- Head Coach Jim Harbaugh

"He's very smart. He's very instinctual. He finds the ball. I think he's a very tough kid, so I think those things are what set him apart."

- LB Michael Wilhoite

On CB Perrish Cox

"He is playing as sound at the position as anybody in the league. It's ridiculous the way he's playing. He's taking full advantage. Like a veteran should do and understands how to do, he's taking full advantage of the opportunity he's been given."

- Current NFL Network Analyst and former NFL CB Eric Davis

On WR Michael Crabtree

"Every time he steps on the field he's not playing to have fun. He's not playing just to be out there. He's playing to win. Whether it's on that route, on that block, whatever it is, he's doing it to win."

- QB Colin Kaepernick

On DT Quinton Dial

"He got in there and had a little nastiness to him. That's what I like seeing. Roughing it up a little bit, trying to get in a fight out there. That's good. He's got that fire that you need."

- DT Justin Smith

On WR Bruce Ellington

"He's looked great when he's been out there. He's been on top of it mentally which is a huge thing as a rookie. He doesn't play like a rookie. He's not out there thinking about things or worried about making mistakes. He's playing fast, he's making plays, so we're excited about him."

- QB Colin Kaepernick

On RB Frank Gore

"Words can't describe my feelings towards Frank and all that he brings to this team. Since I've been here, going on my eighth season now, there hasn't been a year that hasn't gone by where I don't look at him like, 'Man, this guy is one of the best.' He's certainly going to go down as one of the best to ever do it."

- LB Patrick Willis

"I think everyone knows just how valuable this young man is. I think he's one of the most unselfish players in all of football and is as tough as they come. When you just go about your business and don't draw a lot of attention to yourself, people tend to overlook you. He has been an underappreciated guy, I believe, around the league."

- Current FOX Analyst and former NFL QB, Troy Aikman

On RB Carlos Hyde

"Carlos, since he got here from the draft, really impressed me as a guy that football just makes sense to him. If you could just tell him what to do, and you don't have to tell him too much. And that's a beautiful thing in a running back because they have a lot of adjustments to make and protection, etc."

- Offensive Coordinator Greg Roman

"You have to like his pad level, his vision, his feet. He is a 235-pound back that has small-man movements. He gets his feet in the dirt quick. He gets in and out of things. He sees things. He's a natural runner and you can see that. Now there are things he's going to have to work on and he certainly will, but you have to like what you see early on."

- General Manager Trent Baalke

THAT'S WHAT HE SAID

On DT Tony Jerod-Eddie

"The guy's developed late in his life and has really matured. I like him because football isn't too big for him. He can go out there and do any job we have and be confident in it that he'll execute."

- Defensive Coordinator Vic Fangio

On WR Stevie Johnson

"He's another guy that's easy to throw to because he creates so much separation. Very quick, very deceptive, and I'm happy he's on our side of the ball."

- QB Colin Kaepernick

On QB Colin Kaepernick

"Colin's hard work and dedication have played an integral role in the recent success of the 49ers organization. His work ethic, leadership and on-field production have positively influenced our team, and we look forward to his continued growth in all areas."

- General Manager Trent Baalke

"Athletically, he looks bionic. If you all remember the Six Million Dollar Man, that's what it looks like to me. He's very gifted and he always has been. He has the look and feel of a guy who's really going to break out, even more so than he already has. I'm really excited about everything about his game right now."

- Head Coach Jim Harbaugh

"He is a good athlete that can stand in the pocket and throw the football really well, too. I think sometimes there are guys who are really good athletes that get pegged as that, but he's obviously a guy that can do it all and play the game really well."

- Baltimore Ravens QB Joe Flacco

"You can see that he's taken his game to another level. He's not struggling with what his identity is as a pocket-passer, what to do with the football. You can see that when he gets pressure, he makes the right decisions."

- Current ESPN Analyst and former NFL WR, Cris Carter

On WR Brandon Lloyd

"He's got the ability to burst at the top of his routes. Runs excellent routes. Acrobatic type of catches that he's able to make. Really good hands. So far really good. No, it does not seem like a guy that's had a layoff from football for a year."

- Head Coach Jim Harbaugh

"When you see him on film, I swear I don't know how he comes out of the breaks, comes off his start, as fast as he does. We're glad to have him on our team and I know he's going to make some plays for us."

- LB Patrick Willis

"It just gives you that much more confidence when you drop back that you're going to have a receiver where he's supposed to in that timing. He's been there through camp. He's been there through OTAs on time. So, that gives all of us confidence."

- QB Colin Kaepernick

On FB Bruce Miller

"Bruce is a hard-working, dedicated young player that has done an outstanding job for us, both on and off the field. He is one of those players that contributes a lot more to the team and to the community than he gets credit for, yet wouldn't have it any other way."

- General Manager Trent Baalke

"That's as close as a relationship as I've seen - a running back and full back. And if you can't get along with Bruce Miller, then there's something wrong with you. He's just one of those great guys."

- Head Coach Jim Harbaugh

On S Eric Reid

"If you kind of drew a picture of what you would want a starting free safety to look like in the league, you would probably draw a picture of him. That dude is big and fast and physical and just he has a nose for the football. The funny thing is that he's from LSU, so I had a chance to kind of keep up with him a little bit while he was playing at LSU and then obviously he gets drafted to San Francisco and you're going, 'Oh man we've got to play against this guy.' But, he's a really good player and has a bright future."

- New Orleans Saints QB Drew Brees

On DT Justin Smith

"Justin Smith might've been the best player in the NFL over the course of the last five years. I know he gets a lot of pub about it. When I would watch tape and stuff, he might've been the defensive player of the year for about three years in a row. He's just exceptional with everything he does."

- Dallas Cowboys QB Tony Romo

On T Joe Staley

"You're not going to find too much of a better tackle than Staley. He's definitely one of the premier tackles. He's one of the best tackles in the league, and I'm not just saying that."

- Baltimore Ravens OLB Terrell Suggs

COLLEGE SOUTHERN METHODIST

BORN 2.6.92 // PORTLAND, OR // GRANT HS, PORTLAND, OR ROOKIE // ACQUIRED D-6 IN '14

Kenneth Acker started every game for Southern Methodist University over the past three seasons, and was rewarded by being named Second-Team All-American Athletic Conference in 2013 and Second-Team All-Conference USA in 2012. He registered a total of six interceptions in his last two years, including one pick-six in 2012.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Placed on the Injured/Reserve List on 8/25 with a foot injury.

// GOLDMINE

- Like many other members on the 49ers roster, Acker's body features tattoos. One of them in particular is very important to him. "The one of myself and my deceased brother [Karols]. He watches over me as my guardian angel. It says playing for two, his eyes watch over me."
- Acker enjoyed a tremendously successful high school athletic career. A versatile athlete on the football field, Acker spent time lined up at quarterback, slot receiver, outside receiver, cornerback, punt returner, kick returner and kicker. He was named both Offensive and Defensive Player of the Year twice (2008 and 2009) while also returning 11 kick and punt returns for TDs in his senior season alone.

// TRANSACTIONS

Originally a 6th-round (180th overall) draft choice by SF in 2014... Placed on the Injured Reserve List on 8/30/14.

// COLLEGE

Played in 46 games (38 starts) for the Mustangs and registered 159 tackles, 1.0 sack, 7 INTs and 29 PDs. Also tallied 15 KORs for 340 yds. (22.7 avg.) and 14 PRs for 113 yds. (8.1 avg.). As a senior, earned Second-Team All-American Athletic Conference honors. Started all 12 games and notched 46 tackles, 1.0 sack, 3 INTs and 13 PDs. In 2012, started all 13 games and recorded 50 tackles, 3 INTs and 12 PDs en route to being named Second-Team All-Conference USA. As a sophomore, started all 13 games and registered 63 tackles, 1 INT and 4 PDs. In 2010, played in 8 games, serving mainly on special teams.

// PERSONAL

- Attended Grant (Portland, OR) HS where he became the first player to be named both Offensive and Defensive Player of the Year by the Portland Interscholastic League, earning the honors in 2008 and 2009.
- Also named first-team all-state at DB and second-team all-state at QB.
- Lettered in basketball and was first-team all-state as a junior.
- Brother, Karl, is a WR at LSU.
- Born Kenneth Acker (2/6/92) in Portland, OR.

// INJURY REPORT

2014: Placed on the Injured Reserve List on 8/25 with a foot injury.

COLLEGE HOWARD

BORN 7.27.84 // NEWPORT NEWS, VA // DENBIGH HS, NEWPORT NEWS, VA
9TH YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '14

An eight-year veteran, Antoine Bethea joined the 49ers in 2014. Since being drafted in 2006, he has proven to be one of the most consistent and reliable tacklers in the NFL. He has started 110 consecutive games dating back to 2008 and has started all 137 games that he's appeared in over his career. The two-time Pro Bowl selection has made an impact off the field as well by launching his Safe Coverage Foundation, hosting free football camps for youth and donating game tickets to underserved children.

// GOLDMINE

- As the founder of the Safe Coverage Foundation, Bethea has made it a goal to help youth stay in school and receive a strong education. The foundation's mission statement reads, "The Antoine Bethea Safe Coverage Foundation is committed to providing access and resources for students to achieve their dreams of a higher education. We believe providing exposure opportunities, enrichment experiences and the tools needed to succeed, we can change communities, one child at a time."

// CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- According to NFL Gamebook statistics, he has recorded the most tackles (878) among all active defensive backs since 2006.
- Has started all 137 games he's appeared in since 2006, including every game since the start of the 2008 season.

// 2014 AWARDS & HONORS

- NFC Defensive Player of the Week (Week 4).

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- In his 100th consecutive start, Bethea registered 1 INT and 1 FF vs. Phi. (9/28/14), becoming the first 49ers player to register an INT and FF in the same game since LB NaVorro Bowman [at Arz. (12/29/13)]. Bethea also tackled Eagles RB LeSean McCoy at the SF 2-yd. line on 2nd and goal on what would eventually be a game-sealing goal-line stand. He was named NFC Defensive Player of the Week for his performance.
- Registered his 1st sack as a member of the 49ers at StL (10/13).
- Registered his 2nd INT of the season and 16th of his career vs. StL (11/2), picking off Rams QB Austin Davis. The takeaway led to a TD pass from QB Colin Kaepernick to WR Anquan Boldin.
- Picked off Saints QB Drew Brees on the opening drive of the game at NO (11/9). The takeaway led to a 4-yd. TD run by RB Frank Gore.

BORN 10.3.80 // PAHOKEE, FL // PAHOKEE HS, PAHOKEE, FL
FLORIDA STATE // 12TH YEAR // ACQUIRED TRADE IN '13 - BAL.

Anquan Boldin made an immediate impact after joining the 49ers in 2013. In his first season with the club, Boldin was selected by the coaches as the team's Bill Walsh Award recipient, given to the 49ers team MVP. He led the team in receptions (85) and receiving yards (1,179) and provided veteran leadership to many of the team's younger players. Boldin, originally a second-round draft selection in 2003 by the Arizona Cardinals, returned to the NFC West in 2013 after spending three seasons in the AFC with the Baltimore Ravens. The 12-year veteran and three-time Pro Bowl selection quickly became a fan favorite in Week 1 by recording 208 yards to break Jerry Rice's franchise record for the most receiving yards on opening day. Boldin has always had a knack for starting fast, exemplified by his possession of multiple NFL rookie records, including most receptions in a season (101) and most receiving yards in the first game of a career (217). He was named the NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year in 2003 and selected to the Pro Bowl that season for his efforts. He is the fastest player in NFL history to haul in his 400th, 500th and 600th career receptions. In 2014, he notched his 900th career reception vs. St. Louis (11/2), becoming the 3rd fastest player to reach the milestone.

- In his first season with the 49ers, Boldin registered 1,179 rec. yds., giving him the sixth 1,000-yd. season of his career.
- Became the 3rd fastest player in NFL history to reach 900 career receipts., doing so in 164 games (Marvin Harrison - 149; Andre Johnson - 150).
- He is now one of 12 players in NFL history to register 12 seasons with 600-or-more rec. yds. He is also one of five players to reach that mark in 12 straight seasons and one of only two players to do it in each of his first 12 seasons, joining WR Jerry Rice.

600+ REC. YDS. IN EACH OF FIRST 12 SEASONS, NFL HISTORY

Player	Consecutive Seasons	Years
Jerry Rice	12	1985-96
Anquan Boldin	12	2003-14

- Set the 49ers franchise record for most rec. yds. on opening day with 208 yds. vs. GB (9/8). The previous mark of 169 rec. yds. was held by WR Jerry Rice vs. LA (9/5/94).
- There have been only three 10+ catch, 200+ yd. rec. performances on Kickoff Weekend in NFL history and Boldin has two of them. In his NFL debut with the Cardinals, Boldin had 10 receipts. for 217 yds. and 2 TDs at Det. (9/7/03), and in his first game with the 49ers he registered 13 receipts. for 208 yds. vs. GB (9/8). The only other player with such a game on Kickoff Weekend is former Dallas WR Frank Clarke, who had 10 receipts. for 241 yds. and 3 TDs on 9/16/62.
- Notched his 800th career receipt. on a 7-yd. pass by QB Colin Kaepernick vs. Arz. (10/13) to become the 4th fastest in NFL history to accomplish that milestone, doing so in 146 games (WR Marvin Harrison - 131 games; WR Andre Johnson - 137 games; WR Torrey Holt - 142 games). He finished the game with 3 receipts. for 28 yds.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Notched game-highs in receipts. (8) and rec. yds. (99), including a 37-yd. receipt. from QB Colin Kaepernick, at Dal. (9/7).
- Registered game highs in receipts. (7) and rec. yds. (94) and caught 1 TD at StL (10/13). He has now recorded a TD in five straight games on ESPN's Monday Night Football. His 10 career TDs on Monday Night Football are the most among active players.
- Recorded 6 receipts. for 93 yds. and 1 TD vs. StL (11/2), giving him 902 career receipts., becoming the 3rd fastest player in NFL history to reach 900 receipts. (164 games).
- Registered team highs in receipts. (6), rec. yds. (95) and rec. TDs (1) at NO (11/9).
- Notched 9 receipts. for a season-high 137 yds. and 1 TD vs. Was. (11/23). On the 49ers game winning TD drive in the 4th qtr., he registered 3 receipts. for 49 yds., helping set up the 4-yd. TD run by RB Carlos Hyde.

// CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- With 931 career receipts., Boldin ranks 16th in NFL history for the most career receipts.
- He recorded 106 receipts. for 1,410 yds. and 7 TDs in his first 20 games since joining the 49ers in 2013. Boldin's 106 receipts. and 1,410 rec. yds. are the most by any player in franchise history through their first 20 games with the team.

- With 6 recpts. for 93 yds. vs. Sea. (12/8/13), Boldin became the 30th player in NFL history to surpass 11,000 career rec. yds. He finished the game with 11,080 career rec. yds.
- Is the fastest player in NFL history to record 600 career recpts., reaching the milestone on 9/26/10 vs. Cle. in his 98th-career game, 4 games faster than former Colts WR Marvin Harrison (102).
- Also holds the NFL record for the fastest to tally 500 career recpts., reaching the milestone on 12/14/08 vs. Min. in his 80th-career game, 9 games faster than former Denver WR Lionel Taylor (89 games).
- Was the fastest in NFL history to reach 400 career recpts., reaching the milestone against Atl. (12/23/07) in his 67th-career game, 5 games faster than the previous record holder (Hall-of-Famer Kellen Winslow Sr.).
- Recorded the 700th recpt. of his career at Cle. (12/4/11), reaching the milestone in his 123rd game (3rd fastest all-time: WR Marvin Harrison - 114 and WR Andre Johnson - 120).
- Finished his Cardinals career as the franchise's all-time recpts. leader (586, since broken by WR Larry Fitzgerald). Also ranks 3rd in rec. yds. (7,520) and 5th in rec. TDs (44).
- In 2003, set NFL rookie records for the most pass recpts. (101) and most rec. yds. in the first game of a career (217) en route to Offensive Rookie of the Year honors.
- Reached the 4,000-yd. rec. mark in his 48th career game and became the 3rd fastest player in NFL history to reach the milestone behind WR Lance Alworth (42) and WR Randy Moss (47); WR Charley Hennigan and WR Jerry Rice also did it in 48 games.
- Despite missing 2 games in the middle of the 2005 season, caught 102 passes, breaking his previous personal best and franchise record of 101 (2003).
- Boldin joined Pro Football Hall-of-Famer James Lofton (1978) and Terrell Owens (2004) as the only players in NFL history with 3 TD recpts. in the first home game of a season with a new team.
- Won his first Player of the Week Award (Week 3, 2010). He was the first Baltimore wide receiver to win Offensive Player of the Week since Qadry Ismail in 1999 (Week 14).
- Is the Ravens all-time playoff leader in recpts. (38) rec. yds. (616) and TD recpts. (6).
- Boldin has notched 9 rec. TDs on Monday Night Football, ranking 1st among all active players.
- In his career, he has recorded 100+ rec. yds. in 36 games.

// GOLDMINE

- Established the Anquan Boldin Foundation in 2004, which is dedicated to expanding the educational and life opportunities of underprivileged children. Core services of the foundation support after-school programs, full-time scholarships with the support of the University of Phoenix, and dental care and food programs. "For me it was something that I always wanted to do," said Boldin. "Even if I didn't make it into the NFL, giving back is something that is close to my heart." More information on the Anquan Boldin Foundation is available at www.Q81.org.
- He was named the Baltimore Ravens 2010 and 2012 Walter Payton Man of the Year, as well as the Arizona Cardinals Walter Payton Man of the Year in 2004 for his efforts on and off the field.

// GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- The NFL Players Association awarded Boldin $100,000 to the Anquan Boldin Foundation for winning the prestigious Byron "Whizzer" White Award, the highest honor given to a player by the NFL-PA. The award honors the player who serves his team, community and country in the spirit of Byron Raymond "Whizzer" White.
- In April of 2014, Boldin hosted the 10th annual Q-Festival with proceeds benefiting his foundation. The weekend-long event took place at the world renowned PGA National Resort & Spa located in Palm Beach Gardens, FL. This year's activities included a golf tournament, a celebrity basketball game at his alma mater, Pahokee High School, and a "Fun Day in the Park." "It's exciting to enter 10 years for the Q81 Foundation and for Q-Festival Weekend," states Boldin. "QFest is more than just a fun time for me; it is also dear to my heart, because I always wanted to give back to my community that was kind to me when growing up. We are proud of the learning experiences and growth of this decade and look forward to more years to come."
- In March of 2013, Boldin went on a trip to Senegal with Arizona Cardinals WR Larry Fitzgerald to try to help understand and change the mining policies that stripped the natives of their land and left them with nothing. "We wanted to go over there, see the entire process, see how things are run and just come back to the U.S. and advocate for the people who really don't have a voice. We have a trip scheduled to Washington D.C. so that we can actually talk to congress and try to get the policies changed."
- Boldin was inducted into the Palm Beach County Sports Hall of Fame on March 25, 2012, and was honored as a 2012 Distinguished Alumni by the Education Foundation of Palm Beach County, Inc. Another special honor that Boldin has earned in his hometown of Pahokee, FL, is the name of Pahokee High School's football stadium, Anquan Boldin Stadium.
- In April 2012, Boldin made a mission trip to Ethiopia along with Arizona Cardinals WR Larry Fitzgerald to bring attention to the horrible drought in East Africa. "One of the villages that we went to had a canal around their crops and they had a huge problem with hippos," he said. "So they needed some kind of protection to keep the hippos out. We went there, bought fences, and built fences around the crops so that the hippos couldn't damage the crops anymore." He also helped build retaining walls in one village so that when it did eventually rain, the villagers could catch the water and grow vegetation.
- After the destruction of Hurricane Katrina in 2005, Boldin, along with several teammates, visited displaced hurricane refugees in Phoenix, AZ. He served food and drinks to the Louisiana residents, while donating money to the Hurricane Relief Disaster Fund.
- Boldin has displayed toughness and tenacity throughout his lengthy NFL career. He credits his parents and hometown. "Both of my parents are strong. They are the type of people that don't let anything get to them. Also being a product of my environment. Growing up in Pahokee (Florida) you have to be tough. It is a place of poverty. It is a place that lacks opportunity. So in order to make it you have to be tough. That probably had a lot to do with it."

WT 300

COLLEGE OHIO STATE

BORN 5.4.87 // LAKEWOOD, OH // ST. EDWARD HS, CLEVELAND, OH
5TH YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '09

After joining the 49ers as an undrafted free agent in 2009 and spending the length of the season on the practice squad, Alex Boone has blossomed into a Pro Bowl alternate. When he reported to mini-camp in 2010, he was in the best shape of his life, replacing 40 pounds of fat with 25 pounds of lean muscle. He competed at right and left tackle, and eventually proved worthy of a spot on the 53-man roster. In 2011, Boone entered each game in jumbo packages and short-yardage situations, and also contributed on special teams. For his efforts, he was rewarded with a four-year contract extension on December 8, 2011, that runs through the 2015 season. In 2012, Boone earned his role as the starting right guard and was part of a 49ers offensive line that used the same five starters for all 16 regular season games and was widely regarded among the best units in the NFL. In 2013, Boone started all 16 regular season games for the second consecutive year and was selected by his teammates as the recipient of the Bobb McKittrick Award, given annually to the 49ers offensive lineman who best exemplifies the dedication, excellence and commitment of its namesake.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Helped pave the way for the 49ers offense to rush for a season-high 218 yds. on 42 atts. (5.2 avg.) vs. Phi. (9/28). Also helped the 49ers offense hold the ball for 42:17, which was the highest time of possession for the team since 11/20/11 vs. Arz. (44:16).
- Part of an offensive line that held the Rams pass rush without a sack at StL (10/13), leading to QB Colin Kaepernick passing for a season-high 343 yds.

- For fans traveling to the San Francisco Zoo, they can keep an eye out for the zoo's endangered black rhinoceros named Boone, whom the zoo chose to name after the 49ers guard. In January of 2013, the San Francisco Zoo invited Alex to be the zookeeper for a day, where he fed giraffes, polar bears and other animals, learned the tools of the trade and met the black rhino who now shares his name. The black rhinos are the most aggressive species of rhinoceros. Black rhinos are known for their power in plowing through and running over things, which matches Boone's playing style on the gridiron. "We're very similar. It's very fitting. I'm very humbled and very honored to have a rhino named after me," Boone said. "I got to feed him, got to pet him, a very soft face, the horn, unbelievable to touch that. It's an honor and a blessing to have such a beautiful animal named after me." This also earned Boone the nickname "The Rhino."

- In the offseason following his rookie season, Boone returned home to Lakewood, OH, where he began working out with former NFL O-lineman LeCharles Bentley. With Bentley's help and guidance, Alex returned for training in the best shape of his life. He dropped 40 pounds of fat before putting 25 pounds of muscle back on. "LeCharles helped me realize what it takes to be successful in the NFL," Boone said. "He has helped me with my footwork, my initial burst and my quickness. I know I'll be ready for whatever the coaches throw at me this season."
- The one person Boone always admired and wanted to be like was his grandfather. "My grandfather raised my brother and I with good morals and good values," said Boone. "He was always there for us." Alex saw him as a smart person who everyone looked up to. A very religious man, the two of them prayed together regularly and attended church every Sunday. His grandfather passed away when he was young, which left a void in his life. "It crushed me. I never really had to be by myself." Boone vividly remembers the moment he heard the news. "I remember I was eating pizza and I was 13 years old." Talking to his grandmother about him has been a breath of fresh air, reassuring Boone that his grandfather will always be with him. "He was a funny guy who loved to laugh. He was real jokester. I try to be like him every day."
- Boone remains very active in the Bay Area community. In late November 2013, Boone participated in the 7th annual tree lighting ceremony in San Francisco.

BORN 12.26.90 // KETTERING, OH // ARCHBISHOP ATLER HS, KETTERING, OH
ROOKIE // ACQUIRED D-3B IN '14

Chris Borland gives the 49ers defense another intelligent, hard-nosed linebacker after being selected in the third round of the 2014 NFL Draft. He made his first NFL start on October 19 at Denver and registered a team-high 15 tackles and brought down Broncos QB Peyton Manning for his first career sack. The following week vs. St. Louis, he registered 22 tackles, the most by a 49er since LB Patrick Willis registered 22 vs. Atlanta (12/23/13). He quickly became a household name when he was selected as the NFC Defensive Player of the Week in Week 11 after picking off Giants QB Eli Manning twice on 11/16, becoming only the second 49ers rookie to win the award (Andre Carter - 2001). He was named the NFL Defensive Rookie of the Month for November after becoming the first player in 20 years to register 70 tackles and two interceptions in a single calendar month. He finished his career at the University of Wisconsin as one of the best defenders in school history. Borland finished his career as a Badger ranked sixth in total tackles (420), fifth in solo tackles (234), fourth in tackles for loss (50.0) and tied for eighth in sacks (17). He set the Big Ten record with 15 forced fumbles in his career, the second most in FBS history.

// 2014 AWARDS & HONORS

- Pepsi Rookie of the Week (Week 10).
- NFC Defensive Player of the Week (Week 11).
- Pepsi Rookie of the Week (Week 11).
- NFL Defensive Rookie of the Month (November)

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his NFL debut at Dal. (9/7).
- Registered a career-high 4 special teams tackles vs. KC (10/5).
- Made his first career start and registered 15 tackles and his first career sack at Den. (10/19).
- Registered 22 tackles vs. StL (11/2), the most tackles by a 49er since LB Patrick Willis notched 22 tackles vs. Atl. (12/23/13).
- Had 17 tackles and recovered a fumble in OT by Saints QB Drew Brees at NO (11/9). K Phil Dawson made a game-winning 35-yd. FG on the next play. He is the only player in the NFL this season to register 17-or-more tackles in back-to-back games. Was named the Pepsi Rookie of the Week for his performance.
- Registered 2 INTs of Giants QB Eli Manning, the first and second of his career, at NYG (11/16). He became the first 49ers rookie LB to register an INT since Jamie Winborn picked off Saints QB Aaron Brooks on 1/6/02. He is also the first 49ers rookie LB to ever register 2 INTs in a game and is one of two LBs in franchise history to do it over the past 40 years [Ken Norton Jr. at StL (10/22/95)]. Was named NFC Defensive Player of the Week and the Pepsi Rookie of the Week for his performance.

// GOLDMINE

- Borland had ties to the team that drafted him in the third round of the 2014 NFL Draft prior to his arrival. His father, Jeff Borland, played football at Edgewood (Madison, WI) High School under George Chryst, the father of current 49ers quarterbacks coach Geep Chryst.
- Despite being an All-American linebacker at the University of Wisconsin, Borland was a spectator to the game until the 9th grade, as his father didn't want his son playing youth football and suggested he play soccer instead. "Dad just made us wait to play tackle football until high school. I don't think he saw a lot of benefit in youth football." In addition to soccer, he played a lot of basketball as well as sports other than football.
- There always seemed to be competition in the Borland household. The fifth of six boys in the family, three of Chris' older brothers each played college athletics. His brothers Mark and Matt played basketball and soccer respectively at Wittenberg University in Springfield, OH, while his other brother, John, played soccer at West Point Military Academy.

COLLEGE PENN STATE

BORN 5.28.88 // DISTRICT HEIGHTS, MD // SUITLAND HS, FORESTVILLE, MD
5TH YEAR // ACQUIRED D-3 IN '10

Talent, hustle, toughness and determination are all attributes 49ers linebacker NaVorro Bowman has displayed during his first four seasons in the NFL. He was selected First-Team All-Pro in 2011, 2012 and 2013, and was named to his first two Pro Bowls in 2013 and 2014. A rock in the middle of the 49ers defense, he led the team in tackles in each of the past three seasons. Creating his own special moment in the storied history of Candlestick Park, Bowman intercepted Falcons QB Matt Ryan late in the 4th qtr., and returned the pick 89 yds. for a game-sealing touchdown in the final game ever at The Stick. The following week at Arizona (12/29/13), Bowman had arguably the best game of his career, becoming the first 49er since LB John Johnson (10/31/93) to record one sack, one forced fumble, one fumble recovery and one interception in the same game, en route to earning NFC Defensive Player of the Month honors in December. On November 27, 2012, Bowman was rewarded with a five-year extension through 2018, solidifying one of the league's most talented linebacking corps for years to come.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Placed on the Reserve/Physically Unable to Perform List on 8/25.
- Activated from the Reserve/PUP List on 12/9.
- Placed on the Injured Reserve List on 12/13 with a knee injury.

// GOLDMINE

- Bowman was born and raised just outside of Washington D.C. in a high-crime area. It was a tough environment to avoid, but sports became his outlet from the streets and drugs. "My parents had been with me since day one. Also, having a support system like my high school coach. He really let me know early on that I had something special and I shouldn't mess it up."
- He earned his degree in criminal law and justice and one day would like to use that to help out his hometown. With all of the violence and drugs in District Heights, MD, he believes being from the area will help others listen to him. "That's one of the reasons I got in that field - to open doors and possibly be able to get into a young child's head from my neighborhood."
- Bowman works with the Bayview Hunters Point YMCA and recently received an award for his efforts in the program. He has participated in numerous events, including a night of bowling to benefit children, and a toy drive during the holiday season.
- Two important and influential people in Bowman's life abruptly passed away. His father passed away from a blood clot that reached his heart, while his high school coach died in a car accident before Penn State's bowl game in 2009. "Dealing with as much adversity as I have in a short period of time has made me the man I am today. It's made me stay on track and strive to do those things that will possibly help me be successful, not just on the football field, but off the field also."

// CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Late in the 4th qtr. vs. Atl. (12/23/13), Bowman intercepted Falcons QB Matt Ryan and returned it 89 yds. for a TD to seal the victory in the final regular season game at Candlestick Park. It marked the longest INT return by a LB in franchise history.

COLLEGE BELHAVEN

BORN 8.20.88 // GULFPORT, MS // LONG BEACH SENIOR HS, LONG BEACH, MS
5TH YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '10

Tramaine Brock made the 49ers opening day roster in 2010, as the first undrafted rookie free agent to do so in five seasons. Just four seasons later, Brock started the final six regular season games at cornerback and all three postseason contests and entered 2014 as the incumbent at one of the 49ers starting cornerback spots. Brock's performance during the 2013 season earned him a four-year contract extension, keeping him in the red and gold through the 2017 season. A converted strong safety out of Belhaven University, Brock only played a dozen snaps at cornerback during his collegiate career, which also included stops at Mississippi Gulf Coast Junior College and the University of Minnesota.

// GOLDMINE

- In February of 2011, Belhaven retired Brock's jersey for his accomplishments on both the collegiate and professional levels. He is the only player in the history of the school's program to have played in the NFL.
- Brock's path to the NFL was not an easy one by any means. From the small country town of Gulfport, MS, he traveled 30 miles north to Mississippi Gulf Coast Community College in Perkinston, MS, where he spent two seasons before transferring to the University of Minnesota. Why would a southern boy decide on Minnesota? "I wanted to see what a big city felt like," Brock said. After one year, he transferred back down south to Belhaven University in Jackson, MS, a small Christian NAIA school.

- Brock's passion for sports was developed at an early age and he would like to remain in athletics either as a coach or personal trainer after his playing career is through. "I want to teach people what I know and watch them perform and compete," Brock said. His father encouraged him to join a football league in elementary school, and he also played basketball and ran track for his school's team. Recreationally, he played kick ball and baseball in his neighborhood. "My friends were all competitive with each other," he said. "We all wanted to be the best in the group."

WT 259

COLLEGE VIRGINIA

BORN 3.14.84 // FAIRFAX, VA // C.D. HYLTON HS, WOODBRIDGE, VA
9TH YEAR // ACQUIRED WAI. IN '08 - CIN.

A two-time All-Pro, Ahmad Brooks established himself as a full-time starter at outside linebacker in 2011 by working his way up the depth chart since joining the 49ers as a middle linebacker in 2008. He earned his first career Pro Bowl selection following the 2012 season, and followed it up with his second selection following the 2013 season. In each of his last five seasons, he has tallied at least 5.0 sacks, and his 39.0 sacks as a 49er rank 2nd most in franchise history among linebackers. During the 2013 postseason, Brooks recorded 4.5 sacks and is now tied for the second most career postseason sacks in franchise history with 6.5. Originally selected in the third round of the 2006 supplemental draft by the Cincinnati Bengals, Brooks joined the 49ers late in the 2008 season. After not dressing that season, he had a breakthrough year in 2009, when he registered 6.0 sacks and five forced fumbles, despite only playing in 14 games as a reserve. His five FFs also set a single-season team record among linebackers and ranked tied for second among NFL linebackers that year. Brooks followed up his solid '09 campaign by posting 5.0 sacks in 2010.

// CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Registered a career-high 8.5 sacks in 2013.
- Set the 49ers record for most FFs by a LB in a single-season with 5 in 2009. The 5 FFs ranked t-2nd among all NFL LBs that year.

// GOLDMINE

- Brooks is no stranger to the NFL. His father, Perry Brooks, played in 92 games at DT for the Washington Redskins from 1978-84. Perry ran a barber shop since Ahmad was a freshman in college, which has been left to his family after he passed away.
- Last year, Brooks returned to Woodbridge, VA, where he attended high school at C.D. Hylton High School, and was inducted into their Hall of Fame.

TANK CARRADINE

DT

HT 6-4

WT 295

COLLEGE FLORIDA STATE

BORN 2.18.90 // CINCINNATI, OH // TAFT HS, CINCINNATI, OH
2ND YEAR // ACQUIRED D-2A IN '13

Nicknamed "Tank" at a young age by his mother, Carradine spent his rookie season recovering from a knee injury suffered during his final season at Florida State. A Third-Team All-American and consensus First-Team All-ACC selection as a senior, he helped lead a Seminoles defense that ranked second in total defense and third in rush defense in 2012. Prior to enrolling at Florida State, Carradine earned Region VI Defensive Player of the Year honors at Butler Community College (KS) in 2010.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his NFL debut vs. Chi. (9/14).
- Registered the first two sacks of his career, bringing down Seahawks QB Russell Wilson twice at Sea. (12/14).

// GOLDMINE

- Born Cornellius Carradine, he was given the nickname "Tank" from his mom. He always used to have a little toy army tank with him. "I could never go anywhere without that army tank," he said. "I just had to have it with me, and I used to always push people over, try to run over people." His mom still has the original toy tank.
- Carradine grew up in a rough neighborhood in Cincinnati, where many of the people he knew got into bad situations with drugs and violence. He grew up without much money and his family struggled to put food on the table. Through it all, he learned to walk the other way. "I saw how certain situations can end up. Talking to the older people and coaches, they told me to do the right thing," he said. "Good things happen when you try to do the right things. That was the biggest thing I learned." Football was the biggest opportunity which propelled Carradine out of the area, receiving a college scholarship and earning a degree in sociology from Florida State. "People kept telling me, 'Man, I wish I had that opportunity to play this sport.' I'd seen my opportunity and knew the chances I had, knew what I would be doing if I didn't accomplish these goals. That's why I thrive on football. I give it all I've got and I try to play every play like it's my last. I respect this game because of what this game has gotten me through. I take advantage of it by doing the right thing, being a positive player and being good to my teammates and for the organization."
- After going through a rough childhood, Carradine has a passion for telling his story to kids. He volunteers his time at charity foundations and football camps. "If kids can hear the importance of doing the right thing, if I can help them succeed in life, if they can get it when they're young, they'll live up to those things instead of trying to get knowledge as they got older," he said. "Then it might be too late, because they've already been on their own in certain situations."

- Carradine loves animals and has a large collection of exotic pets, including snakes, lizards, ferrets, a monkey, a bird, piranhas and a shark. "I could see myself doing animal research working in a zoo," he said.
- Just prior to entering high school, Carradine, a Cincinnati native, frequented Bengals games every chance he could. "At the time, I was playing Pee-Wee football and I was also a big fan of Justin Smith. I remember many of the players, including Justin, came and painted our youth center, so I got a chance to meet him." Carradine continued, "He was my favorite player, first-round draft pick. It's crazy that I'm playing with him now. I always wanted to talk football with him and ask him questions, but I never had the chance to. Now that I'm on the same team as him, I can ask him anything I want. I'm always asking him about how to identify run or pass, tips that the offensive line give away, things like that." Carradine also believes he can help him learn a great deal about how to make the transition from a speed-rushing defensive end to a power-rushing defensive tackle, a change that Justin Smith had to make earlier in his career as well.

COLLEGE BELOIT

2ND YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '13

Derek Carrier, a small-school tight end out of Beloit College in Wisconsin, made his NFL debut with the 49ers at NO (11/17/13). The Edgerton, WI, native joined San Francisco after spending the entire 2012 regular season on the Philadelphia Eagles practice squad. At Beloit College, Carrier set school records for career receptions (189), yards (3,111) and receiving touchdowns (29) while playing wide receiver for the Buccaneers. He earned All-Midwest Conference honors twice and was named the Wisconsin Football Coaches Association Private College Player of the Year as a senior.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Notched his first career recept. on a 22-yd. pass from QB Colin Kaepernick vs. Chi. (9/14). He finished the game with 3 receipts. for 41 yds.
- Made his first career start at Arz. (9/21).

// GOLDMINE

- Spent a summer at Beloit College interning with the Chicago Bulls' strength and conditioning department, with aspirations of one day working in physical therapy. Members of the Bulls training staff wrote him a physical training program, which he followed astutely.
- Carrier chose to attend Beloit College in large part because of their willingness to let him be a two-sport athlete. In addition to football, he made 21 starts for the basketball team and averaged 8.3 points per game. He reluctantly gave up his hoop dream when he began attracting attention from NFL scouts.

BORN 5.29.88 // CINCINNATI, OH // LA SALLE HS, CINCINNATI, OH
3RD YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '12

Garrett Celek was the only undrafted free agent to make the 49ers 2012 opening day roster, and he went on to play in 13 games during the regular season and all three postseason contests. In 2013, Celek appeared in 12 games, including his first career start at Seattle (9/15). The brother of Philadelphia Eagles TE Brent Celek, he became just the fifth undrafted free agent to make the 49ers opening day roster since 2005.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Placed on the Reserve/Physically Unable to Perform List on 8/25.
- Activated from the Reserve/PUP List on 11/27.

// GOLDMINE

- Celek has a strong passion for the packaging industry, which he majored in at Michigan State and plans to go into after his football career. The growing industry looks to cut shipping costs on products and is commonplace in the food and medical fields. "There's so many different areas you can get into, it's crazy. I enjoy the science behind it. It was a great major for me to choose and the possibilities are endless."
- The Celek family has a lake house in Northern Michigan where everyone gathers on vacation, cooks out and goes jet skiing. Closer to the Bay Area, Celek is a dog owner with a Chesapeake Bay retriever that occupies most of his current free time. "I love playing with her and teaching her tricks."

- Football runs in the bloodlines of the Celek family. Garrett's older brother, Brent, plays tight end for the Philadelphia Eagles. Growing up, the brothers were constantly involved in athletics. "My dad was always pushing us just to be into sports. It didn't matter if it was soccer, baseball, football or basketball. As long as we were doing something and we were having fun with it, he was the happiest guy in the world," Garrett said. He didn't begin playing football until high school, but Brent's success became a driving motivation for him. "He got a scholarship to Cincinnati my freshman year in high school," Garrett said. "Right then I had my goals set. I needed to make it to college, and once I got to college, my brother got drafted in the NFL. There's my next goal. I've got to make it to the NFL, I've got to do what my brother did. Honestly, I've been trying to follow in his footsteps and because of him I'm here today. I wouldn't be who I am without him."

A big-bodied tight end with unique size and speed, the former University of Miami standout made his NFL debut after being promoted to the 49ers active roster on September 20, 2014. As a senior at Miami, Cleveland played in all 13 games (8 starts) and was the recipient of the 2013 Nick Chickillo Most Improved Player Award.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his NFL debut at Arz. (9/21).

// GOLDMINE

- Cleveland was a versatile athlete growing up in Sacramento, CA. He began playing soccer at the age of six and continued for eight years as a midfielder, before trying out for football as a freshman in high school. Ironically, baseball coaches tried to sway Cleveland into becoming a pitcher, but the 6-foot-5 tight end declined.

BORN 2.15.87 // LYNCHBURG, VA // HERITAGE HS, LYNCHBURG, VA
5TH YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '14

Originally a second-round pick of the Vikings in the 2010 NFL Draft, cornerback Chris Cook joined the 49ers in 2014. This season, he played in six games and registered three tackles and two special teams stops before being placed on Injured Reserve on October 25. A tall, physical defensive back, Cook led the Vikings with 14 passes defended in 2012 and made a career-high 11 starts in 2013. A former standout at the University of Virginia, Cook was named a team captain his senior season and registered a team-high four interceptions.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Placed on the Injured Reserve List on 10/25 with a hamstring injury.

// GOLDMINE

- Despite working as a professional athlete, Cook believes in the power of graduating college. He spent time during the 2013 off-season on campus at the University of Virginia in order to get closer to attaining his degree. "That's one of the big things for me, to finish my degree," explained Cook. "I feel like a lot of guys that get to the NFL, NBA, MLB, any professional sport, feel that it's not important to go back and get their degree because they reach a point where they don't need it. I feel that it is important because there is life after football. When we're done, we're going to be in our early-to-mid 30s and it's important to have a degree and be able to go into other avenues in life."

// GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- Cook enjoys working with kids and has participated in tutoring programs at middle schools and volunteered at a local recreation center in Charlottesville, VA. "Coming from where I came from, there's not a lot of opportunity for kids to see guys like myself, guys that actually made it to the NFL, to the next level, and actually get to live out their dreams," said Cook. "It's important for me to go back and tell them that it is possible to live out your dreams and be able to do what you want to do if you stay focused and have that dream in mind."

BORN 1.10.87 // WACO, TX // UNIVERSITY HS, WACO, TX
3RD YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '13

Drafted by the Denver Broncos in the fifth round (137th overall) of the 2010 NFL Draft, Perrish Cox ranked third among NFL rookies with 14 passes defended. When he joined the 49ers in 2012, he was reunited with his former position coach in Denver, Ed Donatell, the 49ers secondary coach. In 2014, Cox has been asked to take a more prominent role in the defense. He has started 13 of the 14 games and leads the team in passes defended (14), interceptions (4) and fumble recoveries (2).

// GOLDMINE

- Cox began playing football in large part to his father. His dad was his coach and mentor growing up and taught him the importance of hard work and setting goals. His parents kept him motivated growing up. Cox has three children, who he says are his motivation now. "My family is all I think about all day and that's what keeps me grounded," Cox said.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Notched his 2nd career INT, picking off Cowboys QB Tony Romo at Dal. (9/7). The takeaway led to a 4-yd. TD run by RB Carlos Hyde.
- Recovered a fumble by Cardinals WR Larry Fitzgerald at the SF 5-yd. line at Arz. (9/21). It marked his first career FR.
- Registered 1 INT and 1 FR and a career-high 4 PDs vs. Phi. (9/28). He picked off Eagles QB Nick Foles late in the 4th qtr. to seal the victory.
- Registered his 3rd INT of the season and a team-high 2 PDs vs. KC (10/5). He intercepted a pass by Chiefs QB Alex Smith on Kansas City's final possession to seal the win.
- Picked off Rams QB Austin Davis vs. StL (11/2). It marked his 4th INT of the season.

COLLEGE TEXAS TECH

BORN 9.14.87 // DALLAS, TX // CARTER HS, DALLAS, TX
6TH YEAR // ACQUIRED D-1 IN '09

The 10th overall pick in the 2009 NFL Draft by San Francisco, Michael Crabtree has been described by head coach Jim Harbaugh as "the greatest catcher of all time." Crabtree has caught a pass in each of his 71 NFL games played, which includes recording at least three receptions in 59 of those contests. He set career highs in 2012 with 85 receptions for 1,105 yards and nine touchdowns, becoming the first 49ers wide receiver to record a 1,000-yard season since Terrell Owens in 2003. In 2013, Crabtree missed the first 11 games of the regular season recovering from an Achilles injury. Widely considered one of the most prolific receivers in college football history, Crabtree earned the coveted Biletnikoff Award - given to the nation's best receiver - in each of his two seasons played at Texas Tech, becoming the first player in college football history to win the award twice.

// CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Became the first 49ers player since WR Terrell Owens in 2003 to post a 1,000-yd. receiving season, tallying a career year in 2012 with 85 recpts. for 1,105 yds. and 9 TDs.
- Registered two 100-yd. receiving games in the 2012 postseason with 3 TD recpts.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Registered his first TD recept. of the season and 23rd of his career on a 3-yd. pass from QB Colin Kaepernick vs. Chi. (9/14). It marked the first TD in Levi's® Stadium history.
- Caught a 2-yd. TD pass from QB Colin Kaepernick in the 1st qtr. at Arz. (9/21). It marked his second consecutive game with a rec. TD. He finished the game with a game-high 10 recpts. for 80 yds. and 1 TD.
- With five recpts. vs. Phi. (9/28), Crabtree surpassed 300 recpts. for his career.
- Caught a 32-yd. TD pass from QB Colin Kaepernick at StL (10/13). It marked his 3rd TD recept. of the season.
- Caught a 51-yd. pass from QB Colin Kaepernick to set up the game-tying FG by K Phil Dawson late in the 4th qtr. at NO (11/9). It marked his longest recept. of the season.
- Recorded 3 recpts. for a team-high 85 rec. yds. at NYG (11/16). His 48-yd. TD recept. from QB Colin Kaepernick marked his 4th TD recept. of the season.

// GOLDMINE

- In 2012, Crabtree teamed with the video game "The Hip-Hop Dance Experience," to create a new touchdown dance, the 'Crab Shake.' Each time Crabtree performed the routine in a game, the gaming company donated $1,000 to Crabtree's favorite charity, the Boys & Girls Club. With help from Bay Area musician Too Short, he worked with a choreographer to perfect his dance moves. "Gotta show the Bay Area some love. I'm from Texas and the Crab Shake is straight from the south side, but the music, that's the Bay right there," Crabtree said. "The south side mixed with the Bay Area, to me, that's the best of both worlds." He also competed with Broncos LB Von Miller and Eagles RB LeSean McCoy to win fan votes on Twitter for the best dance moves.
- With every Crab Shake touchdown dance, he chose to donate $1,000 to the Boys & Girls Club because the organization meant so much to him from his own personal experiences. Growing up, Crabtree found refuge at his local Boys & Girls Club in Dallas. "This is real, because every day when I was growing up, I was at the Boys & Girls Club just playing everything," he said. "We played pool and ping pong. We were running and racing, playing football and basketball and boxing. I just grew up there, and they were even there for me when I needed tutoring, so I felt it was only right that I support them back. That's what's so great about this, I'm dancing and celebrating in the end zone, and I'm giving back at the same time. It really means a lot to me." In 2012, he rewarded the club with a career-high 9 touchdowns.
- A Jordan Brand athlete, Crabtree knows fashion and really gives his input on the details of the shoe design, "I tell them what material and color I want and where. I may tell them that I want this leather, this part suede and this part mesh." He hopes to set his own trends, "If everybody is doing it, then I'm not going to wear it."

- Crabtree received a basketball scholarship as well as football coming out of high school, so it's understandable how humbling it is to wear the Jordan brand. "It's the best of both worlds right now. Jordan is real big on who represents him with his brand. He looks for sharp guys with good character."
- A nationally-ranked basketball player at Carter HS in Dallas, TX, Crabtree was rated among the top 50 prospects in Texas and received several scholarship offers from major colleges. As a senior, he averaged 20.8 points, 6.7 rebounds and 3.1 assists per game. Crabtree limited his college options to those that would allow him to play both basketball and football. He chose Texas Tech because both Bob Knight and Mike Leach recruited him.
- His desire to play football can be traced to video games when he was young. "Growing up, all I did was play video games. I was a big Madden fan, and even before that, I was a big Tecmo Bowl guy," Crabtree said. "Tecmo Bowl, that was the game. It was so simple, but at the same time, I think that's what made it so much fun. There weren't even any flags, you could run all around the field with Bo Jackson. I love that game." Even now, he'll have fans come up to him to talk not just his play on the football field, but Crabtree's digital character in the video game and in fantasy football. He said he'd like to have the Crab Shake dance be used in Madden and laughed about being rated higher in the game. "They need to give me some more speed in there. I check the ratings, and I couldn't believe my score. My speed is a little suspect in that game, but I'm going to keep my cool [laughing]," he said jokingly.

- Crabtree has so many pairs of shoes, he can't put a number on it. Shoes take up his parents' garages, his house in Dallas, and any other place he can store them. Some may say that's excessive, but they may not know the real reason behind his shoe collection. "Growing up I didn't have many shoes. I used to love shoes and cherish the ones that I had. I'd clean them up every day and polish them." Crabtree has big plans for a shoe rack at his home in the Bay Area so he can put them all on display. The shoes are not in boxes though, "I want to see them, my closet is going to look like Niketown."

BORN 12.3.90 // NEW ORLEANS, NO // TIMBERVIEW HS, MANSFIELD, TX
2ND YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '14

A tall, agile cornerback, Marcus Cromartie joined the 49ers in November when he was signed to the team's practice squad. He was promoted to the active roster on December 13, and made his NFL debut in Seattle the next day. Following a stellar collegiate career at the University of Wisconsin, which included being named All-Big Ten Honorable Mention in 2012, Cromartie was signed as an undrafted free agent by San Diego and spent the entire 2013 season with the team.

// GOLDMINE

- Marcus Cromartie has many family ties to the NFL. He is cousins with Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie, a cornerback for the New York Giants, and Antonio Cromartie, a cornerback for the Arizona Cardinals. He is also cousins with Da'Mon Cromartie-Smith and Terrelle Smith, who formerly played in the NFL.

COLLEGE SOUTH CAROLINA

BORN 8.17.88 // PHILADELPHIA, PA // GARNER MAGNET HS, GARNER, NC
4TH YEAR // ACQUIRED D-3 IN '11

Chris Culliver saw action in all 32 regular season games and five postseason contests over his first two seasons in the NFL. Culliver spent the 2013 season on the Injured Reserve List with a knee injury, but returned to the field in 2014 with a bang, recovering a fumble and returning it 35 yards for a touchdown in the season opener at Dallas (9/7). In February of 2014, he was awarded the Champion of Compassion Award by Critter Lovers at Work (CLAW) honoring the Chris Culliver Foundation, which promotes animal welfare and helps inner city youth.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Recovered a fumble by Cowboys RB DeMarco Murray and returned it 35 yds. for his first career TD at Dal. (9/7). It marked the first time the 49ers registered a defensive TD as the first TD in the regular season since they faced the Baltimore Colts (9/15/68) and DE Stan Hindman had a 25-yd. INT return for a TD.
- Culliver registered his 1st FF of the season and of his career, knocking the ball away from Eagles WR Riley Cooper vs. Phi. (9/28). The loose ball was recovered by DT Justin Smith.
- Intercepted Saints QB Drew Brees in the endzone just before half-time at NO (11/9) and returned the pick 29 yds.
- Intercepted Giants QB Eli Manning at NYG (11/16). It marked his second consecutive game with an INT.

// GOLDMINE

- Culliver received a "Champion of Compassion" Award by Critter Lovers At Work (CLAW) for his efforts in his foundation that supports animal welfare. His organization, known as the 'Chris Culliver Foundation,' encourages inner city communities to use animals as companions and empower youth to become better stakeholders in the community by partnering with policy issues concerning the welfare of animals. In April of 2014, he hosted the ABKC Dog Show in San Jose. He himself has four dogs and has raised awareness about the evils of dog fighting.

// GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- While 49er fans know Culliver as a cornerback, he hasn't always been a fixture on the defensive side of the ball. At the University of South Carolina, Culliver also contributed on special teams, setting school records in career kick returns (106) and kick return yards (2,476 yards). He finished 3rd in the SEC in return yards in his freshman (809) and sophomore seasons (821). He also made one start at wide receiver in 2007.

COLLEGE NORTH DAKOTA STATE

BORN 6.17.85 // MADISON LAKE, MN // MANKATO EAST HS, MANKATO, MN
8TH YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '13

The 49ers signed Craig Dahl as a free agent in 2013, after he started all 16 games for St. Louis in 2012. Since signing with the New York Giants as an undrafted free agent in 2007 from North Dakota State, he has played in 100 games (42 starts) in his career. Dahl's ability to play safety and also be a consistent contributor on special teams makes him a valuable member of the 49ers secondary.

// GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- He is a part owner of a commercial real estate company named 43 LLC. They handle real estate mostly in Minnesota, but have branched out into Texas as well.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Recorded his first career carry vs. KC (10/5), taking a direct snap on a fake punt and gaining 3 yds. for the first down. The 4th down conversion led to a 27-yd. FG by K Phil Dawson

// GOLDMINE

- Growing up in Minnesota where there are lakes everywhere, Dahl grew fond of water sports. In the summer time, he enjoyed fishing, boating and water skiing. Now out in sunny and mild California, Dahl has taken up golf as a new hobby.
- Dahl's interest in mechanical engineering must have been peaked by working at his father, Terry's, home automation business growing up. A mechanical engineering major, Dahl was lucky enough to land an internship with an inventor in college. "We worked on about 12 projects of his. Inventions, ideas and new designs," said Dahl. "We did some studies in geothermal heating and cooling, which really interested me."

COLLEGE RUTGERS

BORN 10.11.89 // PISCATAWAY, NJ // PISCATAWAY HS, PISCATAWAY, NJ
4TH YEAR // ACQUIRED D-1A IN '10

Armed with tremendous size, strength, and athleticism, Anthony Davis made an immediate impact at right tackle as a rookie after being selected with the 11th overall pick in the 2010 NFL Draft and has been the entrenched starter ever since. Davis was recognized by his fellow offensive linemen as they selected him the 2012 recipient of the Bobb McKittrick Award, given annually to the 49ers offensive lineman who best exemplifies the dedication, excellence and commitment of its namesake. He was one of only three members of the 2010 NFL Draft class to start every game from 2010-13 (Jax. DT Tyson Alualu & Sea. S Earl Thomas).

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Helped pave the way for the 49ers offense to rush for a season-high 218 yds. on 42 atts. (5.2 avg.) vs. Phi. (9/28). Also helped the 49ers offense hold the ball for 42:17, which was the highest time of possession for the team since 11/20/11 vs. Arz. (44:16).

// GOLDMINE

- In 2012, Davis won the 49ers Bobb McKittrick Award, given annually to the 49ers offensive lineman who best represents the courage, intensity and sacrifice displayed by the longtime offensive line coach. It is voted on by the offensive line. At age 23, Davis became the youngest player in franchise history to win the award.
- Anthony saw first hand the struggles of life while growing up, but that never discouraged him, or the person he leaned on most, his mother. "My mom made it happen, she never played the victim. She always taught me you've got to do what you've got to do."
- Anthony got his first tattoo when he was 15 and has added many more to his arms. "The eye on my hand means wisdom and protection." His favorite tattoo is on the inside of his left forearm, "Wealth is of the heart and the mind, not the wallet." The other ink on his arms range from the Rutgers Scarlet Knight, a dream catcher and a clown in a straight jacket. "I haven't named him yet."

BORN 1.31.84 // WASHINGTON, D.C. // DUNBAR HS, WASHINGTON, D.C.
9TH YEAR // ACQUIRED D-1A IN '06

Vernon Davis has established himself as one of the most versatile and explosive tight ends in the game. Drafted by the 49ers with the 6th overall pick in the 2006 NFL Draft, Davis hauled in 13 touchdown receptions in 2013, becoming the first tight end in NFL history to register 13-or-more touchdowns in two seasons (13 in 2009). His performance last season earned him his second career Pro Bowl selection. During the 2011 NFL playoffs, Davis registered 10 catches for 292 yards and four touchdowns, becoming just the fifth player in the Super Bowl era to register at least two receiving touchdowns in consecutive postseason games in the same season. Davis followed up his first trip to the playoffs with 254 receiving yards in the 2012 postseason, joining Cardinals WR Larry Fitzgerald as the only two players in NFL history to register four, 100-yard receiving games in their first five playoff contests. In the 2013 postseason, Davis hauled in a touchdown at Green Bay (1/5/14), and another at Carolina (1/12/14) the following week. He is currently tied for the most postseason touchdown receptions among all tight ends in NFL history with seven. Davis led the team in both receiving yards and touchdowns in 2009 and 2010, and was rewarded with a five-year contract extension on September 11, 2010. Davis is just as active off the field as he is on it, pursuing everything from curling and painting to humanitarian trips overseas.

- Compiled 11 career 25+ yd. repts. in 8 career postseason games, which ranks 2nd in 49ers postseason history, trailing WR Jerry Rice (14 repts. in 23 games).
- Set single-season career highs with 78 repts., 965 rec. yds. and 13 TD repts. in 2009. He was one of only two TEs to lead their team in all three categories (Kellen Winslow, TB). His rec. yds. and TD totals were both single-season records among 49ers TEs all-time.
- He is the only tight end in NFL history to record multiple seasons with 13+ TD repts.
- In 2009, his 13 TD repts. tied the then-NFL record for most in a season by a TE (Antonio Gates - 13 TDs in 2004). Davis' TD repts. tied for the most in the NFL with Patriots WR Randy Moss and Cardinals WR Larry Fitzgerald, making him the third TE (TE Rob Gronkowski - 17; Jimmy Graham - 16) in the Super Bowl era to lead the league (or tie for the lead) in TD repts.
- Registered his 4th career 100-yd. game in the postseason vs. Bal. (2/3/13) (SB-XLVII). With his performance, he tied TE Keith Jackson for the most 100-yd. rec. games by a tight end in NFL postseason history.

- Davis recorded 8 receipts. for a career-high 180 yds. and 2 TDs vs. Arz. (10/13/13). It marked his 6th career multi-TD game, and 2nd of the season. Davis is the only TE in NFL history to tally 180 yds. rec. in both a regular season and postseason game [180 vs. NO (1/14/12)]. He became the first TE in franchise history to record a TD receipt. of 60+ yds. in consecutive weeks with his 61-yd. TD receipt. vs. Arz. (10/13) [64-yd. TD receipt. vs. Hou. (10/6)], and the first in the NFL since 1969. Davis registered 7 receipts. for 171 yds. and 2 TDs in the first half, marking the 3rd time in his career he had 100+ yds. in a half.
- Pulled in 5 receipts. for 79 yds. and 1 TD at TB (12/15/13), notching his 12th TD receipt. of the season. Davis became the 1st TE in NFL history to register at least 12 TD receipts. in two different seasons (13 in 2009).
- Tied his single-season career-high with 13 TD receipts. in 2013.

- Davis opened his own Jamba Juice location in Santa Clara, CA, on March 1, 2013. "Not only are you helping people with a job opportunity, you are helping them to stay healthy and live an active and healthy lifestyle," Davis said about his business.
- On December 10, 2012, Davis celebrated the grand opening of his new art gallery, Gallery 85, which is located in San Jose's upscale Santana Row and features pieces by Davis himself. Vernon has always had an affinity for art and is an avid admirer of Michelangelo and the Renaissance period. In 2010 and 2011, he got the opportunity to give back to his passion for art. Director of Cultural Affairs for the San Francisco Arts Commission Luis R. Cancel, in conjunction with the Young at Art Festival, a project of the San Francisco Unified School District and the Fine Arts Museum of San Francisco, announced the launch of "Art Impact." Vernon was the inaugural speaker for Art Impact, and the San Francisco Unified School District created a scholarship in Davis' name, called the Vernon Davis Visual Arts Scholarship, which will provide tuition support to a San Francisco youth interested in pursuing a career in the visual arts. In May of 2011, he handed out his first scholarship to San Francisco high school student, Sheryl Quock, a promising fashion designer.
- After a breakout season in 2009, Davis was named the recipient of the Len Eshmont Award, the 49ers most prestigious annual honor. The Len Eshmont Award honors the player who best exemplifies the "inspirational and courageous play" of Len Eshmont and is voted on by the players.

- Davis was named an honorary captain of the USA Curling Team at the 2010 Winter Olympics in Vancouver, BC, Canada. He attended the games and served as an ambassador for the team in order to help gain support for the sport.
- During the 2010 offseason, Davis traveled to Afghanistan with five fellow NFL players as part of the NFL-USO tour. They first stopped at Al Udeid Air Force Base, 40 miles outside of Doha, Qatar, then traveled on to Bagram Air Force Base in Afghanistan. The trip gave him perspective and knowledge of the efforts being put forth by our military in the Middle East.
- Davis is not one to sit back and relax during the offseason. In March of 2010, he joined his younger brother, Vontae, and six other NFL players on a humanitarian trip to Uganda and Rwanda. The crew spent 10 days distributing 22,000 hearing aids throughout the African regions as part of the Pros for Africa organization. "It was amazing. It was breathtaking because you look at these kids who can't hear anything and you plug these hearing aids in their ears and all of a sudden they're responding. You can't do anything but be thankful to be able to help them hear and respond. It brought a lot of emotion. I'm already an emotional guy."
- During the 2010 offseason, Davis and his brother, Vontae, hosted a football and mentoring clinic at Howard University in their native Washington, D.C. "It means a lot to me, because I know how important it is to go out and give back and share some of the lessons and just the gifts that you always wanted as a kid," Davis said. "Growing up in a low-income, poverty area in the inner city of Washington, D.C., I know what it's like. When I think of the kids, it touches me in ways you can't even imagine."
- When he was a freshman in college, he wanted to honor the person who raised him to be the person he is today, his grandmother, Adaline. He decided to get a tattoo on the inside of his left arm with her name. His grandmother's reaction wasn't a good one at first, but she understood why he did it because in Davis' words, he could look onto the inside of his left arm just to think of her. "She's really influenced me and really pushed me, made me open my eyes and see that besides football, there are other things that I can get involved with if I don't make it." Adaline was the one who raised most of his siblings and gave Vernon direction in his life, teaching him to set goals and molding him into the person he is today.

16TH YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '13

Coming off the first Pro Bowl selection of his career in 2012, Phil Dawson joined the 49ers in 2013 after spending the previous 14 seasons with the Cleveland Browns. He finished the 2013 regular season with the second most made field goals (32) and points scored (140) in 49ers history. After Dawson kicked the game-winning 33-yard field goal in the Wild Card round at Green Bay (1/5/14), linebacker Patrick Willis couldn't contain his appreciation for the 49ers kicker, "I don't think you realize, I'm one of his biggest fans. That guy is amazing, and I'm so blessed to have him on this team." Dawson made the move to San Francisco after establishing himself as one of the most accurate kickers in NFL history, ranking 11th all-time with a field goal percentage of 84.3% (360 of 427) and 4th in NFL history from 50-plus yards, making 70.2% (33 of 47) of his kicks. Dawson has proven himself to be one of the most reliable kickers in extreme weather conditions in NFL history, registering a single-season career-high with 140 points in 2013.

// CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- One of 19 players in NFL history to surpass 1,500 points scored (1,506).
- Has the highest all-time FG percentage, among kickers with 300+ FGs made, in NFL history at 84.3%.
- Ranks as the Browns franchise leader in FG percentage with a mark of 84% (305-363).
- Is 1st on the Browns all-time FGs made list with 305 kicks made.
- Ranks 2nd in Browns franchise history with 1,265 career points (Lou Groza - 1,349).
- Dawson's total of 33 FGs from 50-or-more yds. ranks 6th in NFL history, while his percentage from the 50-plus yd. range of 70.2% (33 of 47) ranks 4th.
- Holds the Browns franchise single-season record with 30 FGs made in 2008.
- Is the only player in Browns franchise history to account for six 100-point seasons.
- In 2008, he became the first player in Browns franchise history to convert a 50+ yd. FG in three consecutive games.
- Set the 49ers franchise record with 27 consecutive made FGs (10/6/13 - 12/29/13), passing K Joe Nedney's previous mark of 18 in a row (11/26/06 - 9/30/07).
- In 2004, he established a Browns franchise record with 27 consecutive FGs made [vs. SD (10/19/03) - vs. NYJ (11/21/04)], only to one-up his own record in 2012 with 29 consecutive FGs made [vs. Bal. (12/4/11) - at Oak. (12/2/12)].
- Finished the 2013 regular season with the 2nd most made FGs (32) and pts. scored (140) in 49ers franchise history.

- During the 2008 and 2011 seasons, Dawson teamed up with the Adoption Network to invite families who have recently adopted children to each Browns home game so they can form new memories as a family. "The reason behind all this is my wife was adopted so we have a pretty special place in our hearts for families trying to adopt," Dawson said.
- Was active in the Cleveland community and founded the "Dawson's 4 Adoption" season ticket program which provided tickets, apparel and food for the Adoption Network Cleveland organization.
- His wife, Shannon, is a professional singer, who performed as a backup singer for Wayne Newton in Las Vegas. She released her country/contemporary Christian mix album titled Redemption on September 11, 2013.

- Dawson's two main hobbies now are actually his first two part-time jobs growing up. His first official job in middle school was driving the tractor that picks up the golf balls at the driving range. "For every tray of balls I would bring in and pour in the washer, I'd get $3," said Dawson. "The busier the driving range, the more money I made." His other job was mowing lawns. He and a friend would mow about 30 lawns every week during the summers. "I love golf and I love yard work," he said.

WT 318

COLLEGE ALABAMA

BORN 7.21.90 // PINSON, AL // CLAY-CHALKVILLE HS, CLAY, AL
2ND YEAR // ACQUIRED D-5 IN '13

A large force in the middle of the 49ers defensive line, Quinton Dial was placed into the team's starting lineup in Week 11 of the 2014 season. After appearing in three games during his rookie season, Dial has continued to develop and has become a player that San Francisco relies on. He was originally drafted in the fifth round of the 2013 NFL Draft and missed six games that season after being placed on the Reserve/Non-Football Injury List with a toe injury. Dial was activated on October 19, 2013, and made his NFL debut at Tennessee the following day.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Registered his first career sack at NO (11/9), dropping Saints QB Drew Brees for a 5-yd. loss.
- Made his first career start at NYG (11/16).
- Registered a career-high 12 tackles vs. Sea. (11/27).

// GOLDMINE

- Dial's church family has played a major role in his life and has positively impacted him, making him the man he is today. "They have supported me a lot throughout the years," said Dial. "They encouraged me and prayed with me. I would say my church family is my biggest supporter that I have right now and has helped me to get where I am today."

// GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- Can you imagine going to the grocery store and seeing a 6'4", 270 pound, 16-year old bag boy? In Clay, AL, it was a reality because one of Dial's part-time jobs growing up was bagging groceries and pushing carts at his local grocery store. He also worked as a cook at a barbecue restaurant and cut grass to try to make some extra money.

COLLEGE LOUISIANA STATE

7TH YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '13

Glenn Dorsey is in his seventh NFL season and second with the 49ers after originally being selected by the Kansas City Chiefs in the first round (5th overall) of the 2008 NFL Draft. In his first season with San Francisco, Dorsey tallied 100 tackles for the first time in his career, and was selected by his coaches and teammates as the 49ers Defensive Blue Collar Player of the Year. He was rewarded with a two-year contract extension through the 2016 season on 8/19/14. Dorsey grew up in Gonzales, LA, and went on to play at Louisiana State University where he became the first player in LSU history to win the Lombardi, Outland, Nagurski and Lott awards while helping the Tigers win the 2007 BCS National Championship.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Placed on the Injured Reserve/Designated For Return List on 9/2.
- Activated from the Injured Reserve/Designated For Return List on 11/17.
- Placed on the Injured Reserve List on 12/13.

// GOLDMINE

- In 2011, Dorsey teamed up with PETA, urging dog owners across the country to protect their pets during harsh weather conditions by bringing them indoors. "I love my dog. I don't have any kids, so he's like my best friend. PETA came to my house and did a photo shoot with myself, and my three-year-old English Bulldog, Buggy. It was cool. It was a good deal working with PETA. It was for a good cause and it was fun."
- Had the nickname 'Putt' as an infant because he would only get up and walk when a Putt-Putt commercial would come on TV.

// GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- Growing up, Dorsey's grandmother, Pearl Nabor, introduced him to the San Francisco 49ers, foreshadowing his future with the team, "I used to watch the 49ers all the time when they had WR Jerry Rice and all of those great players. I used to watch them with my grandma. That was her favorite team. When I came here, it was like, 'Wow, I used to watch these guys all the time.' This was my favorite team and now I get to play for them. My grandmother passed away a few years ago, but she was the person that turned me on to the 49ers."

HT 5-9

WT 197

COLLEGE SOUTH CAROLINA

BORN 8.22.91 // MONCKS CORNER, SC // BERKELEY HS, MONCKS CORNER, SC
ROOKIE // ACQUIRED D-4A IN '14

A two-sport star at the University of South Carolina, Bruce Ellington was explosive both on the gridiron and on the hardwood during his Gamecocks career. He earned First-Team All-SEC honors in 2013, as he led South Carolina in receptions (49), receiving yards (775) and receiving touchdowns (8). Ellington was named to the 2011 Freshman All-SEC team in football, while also earning the same honors in basketball for the 2010-11 season.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his NFL debut at Dal. (9/7).
- Recorded his first career recept. vs. KC (10/5).
- Registered his first career TD on a 20-yd. TD pass from QB Blaine Gabbert at Den. (10/19).

// GOLDMINE

- Bruce Ellington grew up in Moncks Corner, SC, attended an in-state Division I program, the University of South Carolina, and was drafted by a team in the NFC West, the San Francisco 49ers. His cousin, Andre Ellington, experienced a very similar career path. He grew up in Moncks Corner, SC, attended an in-state Division I school, Clemson, and was drafted by an NFC West team, the Arizona Cardinals.

- He cites his religion as a major contributor to where he is today. "Just taking in every day, praying, asking Him to help me to do things and just going through it and just believing in Him."
- Growing up in a very rural area, Ellington believes he is a product of his environment, "I grew up down a dirt road. Nothing but woods around me. A lot of dogs around and that kind of helped me get faster from them chasing after me. Me and my cousin stayed in the backyard or the front yard and played one-on-one football or one-on-one basketball."
- Ellington knows the value of hard work. When he was younger, he would spend his free time cutting lawns during the hot South Carolina summers.

A young offensive lineman with the versatility to play both guard and center, Dillon Farrell started each of the last 25 games for the New Mexico Lobos. The Baton Rouge, LA., native earned All-Mountain West Honorable Mention honors as a senior. Farrell is just one of two undrafted rookie free agents to make the roster in 2014.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his NFL debut at Arz. (9/21).
- Part of an offensive line that held the Rams pass rush without a sack at StL (10/13), leading to QB Colin Kaepernick passing for a season-high 343 yds.

// GOLDMINE

- Many offensive linemen were built to play in the trenches at a young age, but Farrell was anything but that as a freshman at Christian Life Academy in Baton Rouge, LA. The rookie lineman stood 5-foot-8 and weighed 160 pounds in the ninth grade.
- Football is in Dillon's bloodlines, as his father, Bill Farrell, played outside linebacker at LSU from 1977-79.

BORN 11.15.91 // LAKEWOOD, CA // MAYFAIR HS, LAKEWOOD, CA
ROOKIE // ACQUIRED FA IN '14

A powerful offensive lineman from Michigan State University, Fouimalo Fonoti joined the 49ers as an undrafted free agent prior to the 2014 season. An Honorable Mention All-Big Ten selection in 2013, Fonoti was named Spartan Offensive Lineman of the Week for his performance against Ohio State in the Big Ten Championship Game.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Placed on the Injured Reserve List on 7/30 with a knee injury.

// GOLDMINE

- An extremely active member of the community, Fonoti was named the recipient of the Football Player Association's Community Service & Outreach Award winner while at Michigan State University in 2012. The following year, he was nominated for the Allstate Good Works Team for his community service involvement
- Fonoti draws on past life experiences to push him forward, and he doesn't have to look far for reminders. His body, widespread with tattoos, tells his story one image at a time. "I've pretty much gotten a tattoo for different chapters in my life," said Fonoti. "When I graduated from high school, I got my first one. Then the one on my left arm is the most recent one, the one I got for my injury. Each time I look at things, I know how far I've come to get where I am right now."

// TRANSACTIONS

Originally signed by SF as an undrafted free agent on 5/12/14... Waived/Injured by SF on 7/29/14...Reverted back to the team's Injured Reserve List on 7/30/14 with a knee injury.

// COLLEGE

Played in 30 career games (24 starts) for the Spartans. During his senior season, played right tackle in all 14 games, including 11 consecutive starts to close out the season. Was an Honorable Mention All-Big Ten selection and was nominated for the Allstate Good Works Team for his community involvement. Played 136 snaps in the first two games of the 2012 season before missing the final 11 games of the season with a foot injury. As a junior, started the final 11 games at right tackle, playing 659 snaps during the regular season and did not allow a sack. COLLEGE MISSOURI

BORN 10.15.89 // BALLWIN, MO // PARKWAY WEST HS, BALLWIN, MO
4TH YEAR // ACQUIRED TR IN '14 - JAX

Originally drafted 10th overall by the Jacksonville Jaguars in the 2011 NFL Draft, the 49ers traded for quarterback Blaine Gabbert in March of 2014. The former top-10 draft selection attended the University of Missouri where he was lauded for his intelligence, accuracy, arm strength and athleticism. A two-year starter for Missouri, Gabbert led the Tigers to an 18-8 record, earning First-Team All-Big 12 and Second-Team Academic All-Big 12 honors as a senior.

// GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- Gabbert looks up to San Francisco's head coach Jim Harbaugh and believes that he can become a better quarterback under his tutelage. "He's had success with Alex Smith and now Colin [Kaepernick]. He's had a great track record with quarterbacks," Gabbert said. "He's another asset I can use to get better and in return help this team in any way possible."

// GOLDMINE

- Despite being in his first season with San Francisco, Gabbert is very familiar with the organization. He spent time with 49ers QB Colin Kaepernick during the pre-draft process and even visited Santa Clara prior to draft day. He was also college teammates with the 49ers eventual first selection, LB Aldon Smith.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Completed a 20-yd TD pass to WR Bruce Ellington at Den. (10/19). It marked his first TD pass as a member of the 49ers.

BORN 5.14.83 // CORAL GABLES, FL // CORAL GABLES HS, CORAL GABLES, FL
10TH YEAR // ACQUIRED D-3A IN '05

Frank Gore embodies what it means to do things the Forty Niner Way. As the heart and soul of the 49ers offense for the past nine seasons, the five-time Pro Bowl running back has established himself as one of the premier running backs in the NFL. The franchise's all-time leading rusher (10,771 yards), Gore tallied his team-record seventh 1,000-yard season in 2013, rushing for 1,128 yards, becoming the 20th player in NFL history to record at least seven 1,000-yard rushing seasons during a career. He also holds the team records for career rushing attempts (2,391), rushing touchdowns (63) and 100-yard rushing games (37). Gore and teammate LB Patrick Willis are the only two-time recipients of the Bill Walsh Award, which is voted on by the coaches, and given to the 49ers team MVP.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Recorded 16 carries for 66 yds. at Dal. (9/7). With his performance, Gore surpassed 10,000 yds. for his career.
- Found the end zone with an 8-yd. TD run vs. Chi. (9/14). It marked his first TD of the season and 61st of his career.
- Rushed for 119 yds. on 24 carries while adding 1 recept. for 55 yds. and 1 TD. vs. Phi. (9/28). It marked Gore's 36th career 100-yd. game and his first since 12/8/13 (110 yds. vs. Sea.). He hauled in a 55-yd. TD pass from QB Colin Kaepernick, marking the longest recept. of his career and the longest by a 49ers RB since 12/12/10 (RB Brian Westbrook - 62-yd TD recept. vs. Sea.).
- Registered 18 carries for 107 yds. vs. KC (10/5), to move him past RB Ottis Anderson with the 26th most rushing yds. in NFL history. He rushed for 100-or-more yds. in consecutive weeks for the first time since registering five consecutive 100-yd. games in 2011 [10/2/11-11/6/11].
- Rushed for 81 yds. and 1 TD on 23 carries at NO (11/9).
- Registered 19 carries for 95 yds. (5.0 avg.) at NYG (11/16).
- Found the end zone on a 10-yd. TD run at Sea. (12/14).

// CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Has rushed for 10,771 yds., the 21st most in NFL history.

// CAREER HIGHLIGHTS (CONTINUED)

- Ranks 1st in 49ers history in rushing yds. (10,771), atts. (2,391) and TDs (63).
- Ranks 2nd in franchise history in yds. from scrimmage (13,649), trailing only WR Jerry Rice (19,872).
- Logged seven, 1,000-yd. rushing seasons (2006-09, 11-13), the most 1,000-yd. seasons in 49ers history. Gore's seven, 1,000-yd. rushing seasons rank 2nd among all active players (StL RB Steven Jackson - 8).
- In 2009, Gore and TE Vernon Davis (13 rec. TDs) became just the 2nd set of 49er teammates to each have at least 13 TDs in a season. In 1995, WR Jerry Rice had 17 and RB Derek Loville had 13.
- Since his rookie season in 2005, the 49ers are 38-7-1 when Gore has 20+ carries and 30-7 when he breaks the 100-yd. plateau.
- With 23 touches (21 carries, 2 receipts.) at NE (12/16/12), Gore reached 2,197 total touches and surpassed RB Roger Craig for the most in 49ers history.
- Gore has scored 75 total TDs (63 rush., 11 rec., 1 fumble return), 3rd most in 49ers history.
- His 10,771 rushing yds. since his rookie season in 2005 rank as the most in the NFL during that time span.

// GOLDMINE

- In 2006 and 2010, Gore was named the recipient of the 49ers Bill Walsh Award. The Bill Walsh Award is voted on by the coaches and awarded to the 49ers team MVP. He is one of two players in franchise history to win the award twice (LB Patrick Willis).
- Gore was named 15th winner of the annual Garry Niver Award by reporters covering the team who represent the SF Chapter of the Pro Football Writer's Association in December of 2007. The award is given in honor of the late Garry Niver, the San Mateo Times reporter, and goes to the player who shows "cooperation and professional style" in dealing with Pro Football writers on the job.
- During the 2010 offseason, Gore tried his hand at coaching for the first time as the defensive coordinator of the Little 49ers in a Miami youth league. Although his players were only 4 years old, Gore was still teaching them what's important. "The most important part is that the kids enjoy it. You can see how excited they get when they do something right."
- Gore's determination to run over defenders comes from his tough upbringing in Miami, FL. Some considered his football career over when he suffered two serious knee injuries at the University of Miami. However, he relied on his mother Liz's strength to help him through. "She had been on dialysis (awaiting a kidney transplant) since I was in the 11th grade and raised three kids as a single woman," Gore said. Unfortunately, Liz lost her battle with kidney disease before the 49ers second game of the 2007 season against the St. Louis Rams. Playing with a heavy heart, Frank responded by rushing for 81 yds. and 2 TDs, including a 43-yd. score on a 4th-and-1 carry, helping the 49ers to a 17-16 victory.

4TH YEAR // ACQUIRED D-4 IN '11

Kendall Hunter has been a key element in the 49ers ground game in each of the past three seasons. Coming off an Achilles injury in 2012, Hunter notched 358 rushing yards, and registered a single-season career-high three rushing touchdowns last season. The fourth-year running back from Oklahoma State originally joined the 49ers as a fourth-round draft pick in 2011.

// GOLDMINE

- Kendall developed an appreciation for architecture and building at an early age from watching his uncle, Clyde. "He would build and fix things all the time from screen doors to flooring. I loved to help him. When I was 11 or 12, I built our dog, Fat Daddy, his own house."
- Learned to fish from his grandmother, Earline Rollins, at the young age of five at Lake Tyler and Lake Palestine. "I remember her making me bait my own hook with worms when I was five."

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Placed on Injured Reserve on 8/5 with a knee injury.

BORN 9.20.91 // NAPLES, FL // NAPLES HS, NAPLES, FL
ROOKIE // ACQUIRED D-2 IN '14

One of the most productive running backs in Buckeye history, Carlos Hyde was a two-time All-Big Ten Conference honoree. He finished his collegiate career ranked sixth in school history in rushing yards (3,198), fourth in rushing touchdowns (37) and fifth in 100-yard games (15). As a senior, Hyde became the first running back to rush for over 1,000 yards (1,521) under head coach Urban Meyer. Making his NFL debut in Dallas on 9/7/14, Hyde became the first 49ers rookie to score a TD on opening day since TE Vernon Davis in 2006.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- In his NFL debut, registered 7 carries for 50 yds. (7.1 avg.), including a 4-yd. TD run, at Dal. (9/7). He became the first 49ers rookie to score a TD on opening day since TE Vernon Davis at Arz. (9/10/06).
- Scored on a 6-yd. TD run at Arz. (9/21), marking his 2nd career TD.
- Registered his 3rd rushing TD of the season at NO (11/9).
- Found the end zone on a game-winning 4-yd. TD run with 2:59 remaining in the game vs. Was. (11/23).
- Rushed for a career-high 55 yds. on 6 carries (9.2 avg.) at Sea. (12/14).

// GOLDMINE

- Hyde credits three people in particular for helping him achieve success. "I credit my mom, my grandmother and Bill Kramer, my high school coach. He is basically the one that got me on the right path. Coming from Cincinnati, I wasn't on the right track grade-wise. So, he got me on the right track and got me caught up with my grades." In addition to helping him with everything off the field, he is directly responsible for how Hyde lines up on the gridiron. "I was actually trying to play defense in high school and he let me play running back. He's just always been there for me. He's a real good guy."

// GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- After spending his first year of high school in Cincinnati, he moved to Naples, FL, to live with his grandparents. "It was definitely for the better. I was headed down the wrong route in Cincinnati. Moving to Naples got me on the right route and back into sports and I was fortunate enough to earn a scholarship."
- Hyde has always been a competitive person and that's helped him get to where he is today. "I think that my competitiveness came from having best friends that played the same sports. So, it's like you want to be the best at those sports because everybody recognizes the best."

COLLEGE IDAHO

BORN 5.12.87 // AMERICAN SAMOA // WESTERN HS, ANAHEIM, CA
5TH YEAR // ACQUIRED D-1B IN '10

One of the top guards in the National Football League, fifth-year pro Mike Iupati has been a staple on year-end award lists. He was named First-Team All-Pro in 2012 and was also selected to the 2013 and 2014 NFC Pro Bowl rosters. A mild-mannered native of American Samoa, Iupati plays with a nasty streak on the field. Selected 17th overall in the 2010 NFL Draft, Iupati showcased his rare combination of size and athleticism as he was named the team's starting left guard during rookie training camp.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Helped pave the way for the 49ers offense to rush for a season-high 218 yds. on 42 atts. (5.2 avg.) vs. Phi. (9/28). Also helped the 49ers offense hold the ball for 42:17, which was the highest time of possession for the team since 11/20/11 vs. Arz. (44:16).
- Part of an offensive line that held the Rams pass rush without a sack at StL (10/13), leading to QB Colin Kaepernick passing for a season-high 343 yds.

// GOLDMINE

- Growing up in the village of Nuuli in American Samoa, Iupati took English as a second language, but was still way behind the curve when he arrived in the United States prior to his freshman year of high school. When it came time to head to college and pursue a football career, he was behind academically due to the language barrier. Iupati began looking into junior colleges. While at a recruiting barbecue at Cerritos College, he met Johnny Nansen, an assistant coach at Idaho, who later convinced him to sign with the Vandals as a Prop 48. Four years later, Iupati was a first round NFL draft pick.

- Although Iupati has not lived in American Samoa for several years, his mother will never let him forget his culture. "My mom was tough on us, but it's discipline. That's why a lot of Polynesians are disciplined when they come to the U.S. You have to always respect your elders. It's our culture."
- When Iupati entered the NFL, his hair was very long, reaching the middle of his back. He had not cut it since the summer before his sophomore year at Idaho. When he returned to the Bay Area to begin the 2012 offseason program, he was sporting a buzz cut. "I needed a new start and thought now was the right time. I donated my hair to Locks of Love so that some kid would be able to make good use of it."
- Iupati's brother did all of the tattoos on his arm and leg. All of the art on his body is reflective of Samoan culture. "Some of them are Fala, the centipede, the waves, the ocean, fish. It goes back to what we normally use." The lion on his leg was artwork that Iupati liked and asked his brother to put a Polynesian design around it.

COLLEGE TEXAS A&M

BORN 3.29.90 // DeSOTO, TX // DeSOTO HS, DeSOTO, TX
3RD YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '12

Originally signed as an undrafted free agent from Texas A&M University in 2012, Tony Jerod-Eddie saw his workload increase dramatically in 2013 where appeared in 15 games with two starts, totaling 55 tackles with one interception and one fumble recovery. He became the first 49ers defensive lineman to record an interception since DT Ray McDonald at Carolina (10/24/10), picking off Texans QB Matt Schaub (10/6/13).

// GOLDMINE

- Outside of football, Jerod-Eddie stays active fishing, riding four-wheelers and paint-balling. "I'm an outdoorsman." He picked the hobbies up from his family, as he had a fishing pond in his backyard and numerous lakes in his hometown in east Texas.
- After his playing career, Jerod-Eddie plans to get a barber's license and open up his own barber shop. He would also like to continue working in athletics. "I'll try to get my Master's degree. I'm still trying to decide if I would like to be a coach. But I want to work in sports, as an academic advisor or athletic director."

- At the age of 4, Jerod-Eddie was introduced to football while playing for fun during recess and after school with friends. "Being from Texas, we eat and sleep football, and it starts at a young age," Jerod-Eddie said. "I love basketball too, it was my first love." He joined a basketball league in the 4th grade and started playing organized football a year later. "I started in the 5th grade and haven't stopped since," he said.

DONTAE JOHNSON

CBHT 6-2*WT 200*COLLEGE NORTH CAROLINA STATE

BORN 12.1.91 // PENNINGTON, NJ // PENNINGTON PREP HS, PENNINGTON, NJ
ROOKIE // ACQUIRED D-4B IN '14

A young, talented cornerback from North Carolina State University, Dontae Johnson registered a pick-six at St. Louis on October 13, becoming just the 2nd rookie cornerback drafted in the fourth round or later to return an interception for a touchdown since 2005. While at NC State, he saw playing time at multiple positions, starting 28 games and amassing over 200 tackles.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his NFL debut at Dal. (9/7).
- Picked off Rams QB Austin Davis late in the 4th qtr. and returned it 20 yds. for a TD, sealing the victory at StL (10/13). It marked Johnson's first career INT and TD and he became only the 7th rookie in franchise history to accomplish that feat, and first since CB Jason Webster in 2000 [70 yds. vs. Atl. (11/19/00)].
- Broke up a pass by Giants QB Eli Manning late in the 4th qtr. at the goal line that was intercepted by LB Chris Borland at NYG (11/16).
- Made his first career start at Sea. (12/14).

// GOLDMINE

- Johnson, a sports management and business administration major, spent the summer prior to his senior year as a sports marketing intern with French West Vaughan, a marketing/public relations firm based out of Raleigh, NC. During his internship, he worked with some high-profile athletes and clients which provided great experience. "I actually got to do a few things with MoGo, the flavored mouthpiece that [49ers QB] Colin [Kaepernick] actually wears. I did that and then I did a few things for [Cincinnati Bengals DT] Geno Atkins, getting him some suits for the ESPY's." Johnson believes if he weren't a professional football player, that he had found his calling in sports marketing. He said, "That was definitely something I would do. Just the interaction with players and businesses, I felt like that was cool."

// GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- Hauling in 50 passes for 600 yards and 13 touchdowns is an impressive stat-line for a two-way player, which is exactly what Johnson was in high school. He split time as a receiver and defensive back during his time at Pennington Prep (NJ) High School. What made Johnson focus his attention on the defensive side of the ball moving forward? He credited a defensive mentality. Johnson said, "I was more of a physical player. Just the fact that I liked playing defense better. Playing basketball, I had a defensive mindset. So, I guess it just translated to football. I always had a defensive mindset."

6TH YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '14

A former product of then-head coach Jim Harbaugh at the University of San Diego, Josh Johnson is in his sixth pro season. Johnson attended training camp with the 49ers in 2012 after spending his first four seasons with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Johnson spent the entire 2013 season on the Cincinnati Bengals active roster and appeared in two games. A native of Oakland, CA, Johnson owns four USD career-passing records, including touchdowns (113), completions (724), attempts (1,065) and passing yards (9,699).

- Says Johnson of his time playing for Jim Harbaugh at the University of San Diego. "He started it for me. He took me from playing the quarterback position to a different level. He opened my mind up a lot on how to play the position. He taught me how to play the position. He showed me so many different things that I didn't even know I was capable of doing. He always challenged me daily." While he was there, Johnson set four USD passing records in touchdown passes (113), completions (724), attempts (1,065) and passing yards (9,699). Johnson took over as USD's starter his sophomore season in 2005 and earned consensus first-team All-America recognition in 2006. When Harbaugh was first hired by USD in 2003, the first player he recruited was Johnson. When Johnson left USD four years later, he was the all-time NCAA pass efficiency leader and a Walter Payton Award finalist.

- As with most major cities, Oakland has some rough neighborhoods to navigate, but Johnson wouldn't change his hometown for anything. "It's hard, but it makes you get on that right path right away or you have to go the other way. It's that simple. Now as an adult, I appreciate that. There are no gray areas, you can't play both sides. You have to decide from an early age what path you want. For me, it kept me on the straight and narrow. It kept me focused and pursuing all of the dreams I wanted." Those dreams fueled the fire in him to work hard and pursue his lifelong goal of playing in the NFL.
- Josh helped his mom at a summer camp for 4-12 year olds each summer growing up. He started as a counselor's aid which ignited his passion for developing the Josh Johnson Youth Center. The Center will help teach kids to develop various necessities in life including how to open a bank account, learning to read and write and other opportunities for all age groups. "It will be a one-stop-shop for these kids because they don't always have a place to go. We want the kids to be able to come to one place to explore and open up their minds to more." The plan is to open this youth center by 2014 after the necessary funds are raised.

COLLEGE KENTUCKY

BORN 7.22.86 // SAN FRANCISCO, CA // ANGELO RODRIGUEZ HS, FARIFIELD, CA
7TH YEAR // ACQUIRED TRADE IN '14 - BUF.

A native of Fairfield, CA, Stevie Johnson joined the 49ers in 2014 via a draft-day trade with the Buffalo Bills. Spending his first six seasons in the NFL in Buffalo, Johnson became the first player in Bills history to register consecutive 1,000-yard receiving seasons, reaching the milestone in three straight years (1,073 in 2010; 1,004 in 2011; 1,046 in 2012). Johnson has developed into a consistent threat, recording more than 50 receptions in each of the past four seasons. The former Kentucky Wildcat and 2007 First-Team All-SEC selection provides the 49ers with another experienced scoring threat as he has recorded 31 career receiving touchdowns.

// CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Led the Buffalo Bills in rec. yds. in 2010, 2011 and 2012, while recording 1,000+ yds. each season.
- Became the first player in Bills history to register consecutive 1,000-yard receiving seasons, reaching that milestone in three straight years (1,073 in 2010; 1,004 in 2011; 1,046 in 2012).

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Registered 9 receipts. for a team-high 103 yds. at Arz. (9/21), marking his 9th career 100-yd. game and first as a member of the 49ers.
- On his 12-yd. TD receipt. vs. Phi. (9/28), eclipsed the 4,000-yd. mark for his career. It marked his 1st TD of the season and 1st as a member of the 49ers.
- Caught a 9-yd. pass from QB Colin Kaepernick vs. KC (10/5), his 2nd consecutive game with a TD receipt. It marked the first time he caught a TD in back-to-back games since vs. NE (9/9/13) and vs. Car. (9/16/13), as a member of the Buffalo Bills.
- Registered 5 receipts. for a team-high 79 yds. and 1 TD at Den. (10/19). It marked his 3rd TD receipt. in the past four games.

- During his time with Buffalo, Johnson was very active in the community. He attended the 8th annual Play 60 Challenge Kickoff Event and spoke to 2,500 elementary school students about the importance of eating healthy and exercising. He was also a celebrity judge in the Tim Horton's Donut Duel contest, which raised money to keep Luna the polar bear in the Buffalo Zoo.

- Stevie Johnson has a passion for music and even released a rap song himself by teaming up with popular musician, The Game. He has bloodlines to the music industry as his cousin is Bay Area rapper Ya Boy and his stepfather, Andre Lewis, is a music producer.
- To many, selecting a jersey number seems like a rather unimportant part of sports. However, for some players like Stevie Johnson, the number they wear can mean much more. On his first day at the University of Kentucky, Johnson was offered several number options in the 80s, a typical choice for a wide receiver. But when the equipment manager also mentioned that 13 was available, he jumped on it. "I felt like it was a number that people thought was irrelevant," Johnson said. "And I wanted to make a name for that 13." In addition to serving as a reminder of where he came from, 13 is important to him for another reason. His wife, Britney, also likes it. "I call her 'B.' And you take a 1 and a 3 and slide them together. That's a B," he explained. "And now I'm representing my family."

COLLEGE NEVADA

BORN 11.3.87 // MILWAUKEE, WI // PITMAN HS, TURLOCK, CA
4TH YEAR // ACQUIRED D-2 IN '11

Colin Kaepernick quickly grew into one of the most exciting and explosive players in the NFL after taking over the reins of the 49ers offense in Week 11 of the 2012 season. He continued that trend in 2013, rushing for second most yards (524) by a quarterback in a single season in franchise history, while becoming the first 49ers quarterback to throw 20 touchdown passes in a season since 2002 (Jeff Garcia). Kaepernick is just the fourth quarterback in NFL history to win each of his first three playoff starts on the road. In six postseason starts, he has registered the second most career rushing yards (507) by a quarterback in NFL postseason history, and also holds three of the top five postseason single-game rushing marks by a quarterback. Kaepernick guided the 49ers to the NFC Championship and a berth in Super Bowl XLVII in just his 10th career start, the third fewest of any starting Super Bowl quarterback. In 2012, he went 7-3 as a starter and posted a QB rating of 90.0-or-better in 8 of his 10 games started. Kaepernick also tallied three rushes of 50-or-more yards, including the postseason, and had 22 completions of at least 25 yards. He set the all-time single-game rushing record (regular or postseason) for a QB with 181 yards against the Green Bay Packers (1/12/13) in the NFC Divisional Playoff game.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Completed 16 of 23 atts. for 201 yds., 2 TDs and a QB rating of 125.5 at Dal. (9/7). Posted a QB rating of 156.6 in the first half [11 of 13 for 157 yds. and 2 TDs], which is the highest in any half of his career.
- Had a QB rating of 103.3 after completing 29 of 37 pass atts. for 245 yds. and 1 TD at Arz. (9/21). Set career highs in comps. (29) and comp. pct. (78.4), including starting the game 9 for 9, also a new career high.

- Completed a 55-yd. TD pass to RB Frank Gore vs. Phi. (9/28), marking his longest TD pass of the season and 3rd longest of his career [64t to TE Vernon Davis vs. Hou. (10/6/13); 61t to TE Vernon Davis vs. Arz. (10/13/13)]. He added 7 rush atts. for 58 yds. (8.3 avg.), which marked the first time in his career that he rushed for 50+ yds. in three consecutive games. [64 vs. Chi. (9/14/14); 54 at Arz. (9/21/14)]. It also marked just the 3rd time in franchise history that a QB rushed for 50+ yds. in three consecutive games and the first time since 1992 [Steve Young - 50 vs. Buf. (9/13/92); 50 at NYJ (9/20/92); 65 at NO (9/27/92); Billy Kilmer - 103 vs. Det. (10/1/61); 131 vs. LAR (10/8/61); 115 at Min. (10/15/61)].
- Completed 14 of 26 pass atts. for 201 yds., 1 TD and a passer rating of 90.2. He has now thrown at least one TD pass in 12 straight games.
- Completed 22 of 36 pass atts. for a season-high 343 yds., 3 TDs and a passer rating of 120.5 at StL (10/13). He completed an 80-yd. TD pass to WR Brandon Lloyd, marking his longest career pass and the longest pass by a 49ers QB since 2005 [89 yds. vs. Dal. (9/25/05) - QB Tim Rattay to WR Brandon Lloyd].
- Posted a passer rating of 97.7 after completing 22 of 33 pass atts. for 237 yds. and 1 TD vs. StL (11/2).
- Completed a 30-yd. TD pass to WR Anquan Boldin vs. Was. (11/23). It marked his 18th consecutive game with a passing TD, tied for the longest streak by a quarterback in franchise history. [Steve Young - 18: (10/9/94 - 11/26/95)].

- Kaepernick's 412 passing yds. vs. GB (9/8/13) are the 11th most in a single-game in franchise history. He was the first to surpass the 400-yd. passing mark since QB Tim Rattay [417 yds. vs. Arz. (10/10/04)].
- Kaepernick tallied 51 yds. rushing vs. Atl. (12/23) in Candlestick Park's final regular season game, becoming just the 3rd QB in franchise history to rush for 500 yds. in a single season.
- Finished the 2013 regular season with 524 rushing yds., the 2nd most by a QB in franchise history.
- In 2013, Kaepernick (21) became the first 49ers QB to throw for 20+ TD passes in a season since 2002 (QB Jeff Garcia - 21).

- In July of 2013, Kaepernick held his first annual Against All Odds golf tournament at Del Rio Country Club in Modesto, CA, to benefit Camp Taylor, a camp for children with heart defects. The inaugural event raised over $200,000 to assist children and their families through Camp Taylor.
- In 2010, Kaepernick was drafted by the Chicago Cubs in the 2009 MLB Draft and was offered $30,000 to go to Arizona for a month and throw a few bullpen sessions. Looking ahead to his senior season as Nevada's quarterback, he declined the offer saying, "What would that say about me as a leader of the team?"
- One of Kaepernick's hobbies and favorite activities off the field is collecting and watching movies. "I own around 250 movies," said Kaepernick. His favorites are no surprise; action and comedy, specifically the movie Step Brothers. What might be a surprise to some people is that the 6-4, 250 lb QB also enjoys watching cartoons and Disney movies. "Some movies I own that most people wouldn't think I like are The Incredibles, Finding Nemo, Despicable Me and How To Train Your Dragon."
- Even as a 4th grade student at Dutcher Elementary School in Turlock, CA, Kaepernick knew he was going to play for the 49ers. In a letter that students had to write to their future selves, despite his small stature at the time, he saw something special in himself. He wrote, "I'm 5-2, 91 lbs and a good athlete. I think in 7 years i will be between 6 ft. to 6-4, 140 lbs. I hope I go to a good college in football, then go to the pros and play on the Niners or the Packers, even if they aren't good in seven years."

COLLEGE APPALACHIAN STATE

BORN 12.18.87 // KINGSFORT, TN // DOBYNS-BENNETT HS, KINGSFORT, TN
4TH YEAR // ACQUIRED D-5 IN '11

A four-year veteran, Daniel Kilgore became the team's starting center in 2014 after seeing action in short yardage and goal line packages earlier in his career. He was placed on the Injured Reserve List on October 25, 2014, after suffering a leg/ankle injury at Den. (10/19). Originally selected by the team in the fifth round of the 2011 NFL Draft, Kilgore was a tackle in college before moving to the interior of the offensive line by the 49ers where he began to learn both center and guard. Kilgore played in all 16 regular season games and all three postseason contests for the 49ers in 2012 and 2013.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his first career start at Dal. (9/7).
- Helped pave the way for the 49ers offense to rush for a season-high 218 yds. on 42 atts. (5.2 avg.) vs. Phi. (9/28). Also helped the 49ers offense hold the ball for 42:17, which was the highest time of possession for the team since 11/20/11 vs. Arz. (44:16).
- Part of an offensive line that held the Rams pass rush without a sack at StL (10/13), leading to QB Colin Kaepernick passing for a season-high 343 yds.
- Placed on the Injured Reserve List on 10/25 with an ankle injury.

- As Daniel was preparing for the NFL Draft in 2011, he was also serving as a student-teacher at Hardin Park Elementary School working with special-education students in adaptive physical education classes. The day following his graduation from Appalachian State, Daniel hosted a field trip for his special-education students at ASU. The field trip included a tour of the school's athletic facilities, activities in the Sofield Family Indoor Practice Facility, lunch on the club level of the Appalachian Athletics Center and taking in a few innings of the Appalachian State-Western Carolina baseball game. While football is Daniel's next chapter in life, he aspires to be a coach and special-education teacher following his NFL career. "I'm very happy that I was drafted, but I absolutely love working with these kids," said Daniel. "I have had a great student-teaching experience and I know when my NFL career is over, I will get to work in another field that I love and that is working with special-education students and coaching."

Four-time All-Pro and one of the best punters in the NFL, Andy Lee is looking forward to a new challenge in 2014, Levi's® Stadium. Having punted through the unpredictable weather conditions of Candlestick Park his entire career, Lee is making his case as one of the best punters in NFL history. He has the fifth highest net average (39.5) and gross average (46.2) in league history. In 2011, Lee posted a net punting average of 44.0, the second best in a single-season in the history of the NFL. The following season, he recorded a 43.2 net average, the fourth-highest single-season total in NFL history, on his way to earning his fourth AP All-Pro selection. He is the franchise leader in punts, punting yardage, gross average, punts downed inside the 20 and net average. The former sixth-round pick has earned Pro Bowl honors in three of the past seven seasons ('07, '09, '11).

- Andy is considered a 'hometown hero' by his native Westminster, SC. Former town mayor, Rusty Cater, presented Andy with a key to the city and a declaration commemorating "Andy Lee Day" on July 12, 2008.
- Andy never attended an NFL game growing up in South Carolina. Even when he went on to become a standout punter on the collegiate level at the University of Pittsburgh, he was still a stranger to live NFL action. The first professional game he ever witnessed in person was as a player with the 49ers in 2004. In fact, Andy didn't even set out to play football at all. "I was more of a baseball guy growing up. I actually wanted to be a Major League Baseball player. I played quarterback in 8th grade, and the coach asked, 'Who wants to try out for the punting position?' I didn't know you were supposed to spiral a punt, or turn it over, or any of that."

In his second season in the NFL, Lemonier provides the 49ers with another pass-rushing weapon that also contributes on special teams. Seeing action in every game of his rookie season, Lemonier recorded 14 tackles, one sack, one forced fumble, one safety and three passes defensed, while adding six tackles on special teams. The speedy linebacker attended Auburn University where he finished his Tigers career ranked seventh in school history with 17.0 career sacks. A two-time All-SEC honoree, he led the team in sacks (9.5) and quarterback pressures (15) as a sophomore and added 12 quarterback pressures for the Tigers in 2012.

- Lemonier has traveled to Haiti multiple times, where both of his parents were born. Following hurricanes and earthquakes in Haiti, a few members of Lemonier's family on his father's side were hit hard, but they all remained safe. When the Lemoniers moved to Florida, many sports, including football, were new to them. Corey started out watching football and basketball on television. He played hoops through his sophomore year of high school before switching to football when he was a junior.

- Despite the fact that his parents knew little about football, his father, a former offshore welder, and his mother, a nurse, instilled the value of hard work on Lemonier through their example and have supported him throughout his career. When confronting his parents about the possibility of playing football, his father's advice was consistent with his hard-work mentality. He said, "I told him, 'OK, that's your choice. You can do whatever you want as long as you give it all you have.'"

The 10-year NFL veteran returns to the team that drafted him in the fourth round (124th overall) of the 2003 NFL Draft. He was a member of the 49ers from 2003-05 and registered a total of 105 receptions for 1,510 yards and 13 touchdowns in his three seasons with the club. Lloyd had the best three-year span of his career from 2010-12, having totaled 3,325 receiving yards and 20 receiving touchdowns. With Denver in 2010, he led the league in receiving yards (1,448) and receptions of 25-or-more yards (18), while also ranking fourth in receiving touchdowns (11). His 18.8 yards per reception average that season ranks fourth in NFL history in a single season since 1970 for a player with at least 75 receptions. His play that year earned him a trip to the Pro Bowl as well as AP Second-Team All-Pro honors.

// CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Named to the Pro Bowl following the 2010 season and also earned AP Second-Team All-Pro honors.
- In 2010, led the league in rec. yds. (1,448) and receipts. of 25+ yds. (18), and ranked 2nd in the league with 9 receipts. of 40+ yds.
- Averaged 18.8 yds. per receipt. during the 2010 season, which is the 4th highest single-season mark since the merger in 1970 among all players with at least 75 receipts.
- Returned a blocked punt 9 yds. for a TD at Car. (9/14/08) while with the Bears.
- Blocked a punt in his first career game vs. Chi. (9/7/03).

- Caught an 80-yd. TD pass from QB Colin Kaepernick at StL (10/13). It marked the longest receipt. by a 49ers WR since he caught an 89-yd. TD pass from QB Tim Rattay vs. Dal. (9/25/05).

// GOLDMINE

- Following the conclusion of his football career, Lloyd wants to pursue a career in broadcasting. He majored in speech communications with an emphasis in journalism and interned with Fox Sports Midwest. He had his own show called "Big Man on Campus."
- During the NFL lockout in 2011, Lloyd worked as a sales representative for Re-Steel in Commerce City, CO, a company that sells specialty metals to the aerospace industry.
- In addition to football, Lloyd has displayed a love for music and has even attempted to start a rap career. In 2008, one of his singles made the Billboard R&B chart and another was featured on the Spike TV show Blue Mountain State. He's also made a brief appearance on film, starring in the direct-to-DVD movie "After Effect."
- While in kindergarten, Lloyd was asked what he aspired to do when he was older and he said he wanted to be a professional football player. Unwilling to change his answer, he was sent to the principal's office because his response was deemed "unrealistic."
- While out of football in 2013, Lloyd started working full-time for a specialty metal service center that supplies airplane components. He has worked at his friend's company over the last four offseasons, starting with the NFL's lockout in 2010, while calling the aerospace sector "dynamic."

COLLEGE WAKE FOREST

BORN 8.31.90 // LAKE WORTH, FL // LAKE WORTH HS, LAKE WORTH, FL
3RD YEAR // ACQUIRED D-4 IN '12

Joe Looney saw his first NFL action in 2013 after spending his first year and a half in an understudy role. The 49ers fourth-round pick (117th overall) in the 2012 NFL Draft, he has focused on learning the center and guard positions. A four-year starter at left guard for Wake Forest, he was a Second-Team All-ACC selection in 2011. In each of his last two collegiate seasons, Looney graded out as the team's highest-rated offensive lineman.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his first career start at RG at Dal. (9/7).
- Helped pave the way for the 49ers offense to rush for a season-high 218 yds. on 42 atts. (5.2 avg.) vs. Phi. (9/28). Also helped the 49ers offense hold the ball for 42:17, which was the highest time of possession for the team since 11/20/11 vs. Arz. (44:16).
- Made his first career start at C at Sea. (12/14).

// GOLDMINE

- Looney was a member of Athletes in Action at Wake Forest. AIA is a Christian ministry on campus that is geared towards athletes of all sports. "We had meetings every Tuesday night and we would sing and listen to sermons," said Looney. "It's just amazing." Joe eventually joined the Servant Leadership Team after a life-changing event. "I went to the AIA Ultimate Training Camp that they have in Colorado." Athletes received Biblical perspective on topics like motivation, attitude, persevering through tough times, and winning and losing. "It was a pretty amazing experience and it just changed my life."

COLLEGE SOUTH FLORIDA

BORN 3.8.93 // CAPE CORAL, FL // ISLAND COAST HS, CAPE CORAL, FL
ROOKIE // ACQUIRED D-5A IN '14

Another explosive pass-rusher in the 49ers defense, rookie line-backer Aaron Lynch has made an immediate impact. His 5.0 sacks this season is tied for the most on the team and ranks 2nd in the NFL among rookies. Lynch led the South Florida Bulls defensive unit with six sacks and 12.5 tackles for loss in 2013, on his way to earning First-Team All-American Athletic Conference honors. Before transferring to South Florida, Lynch starred as a true freshman at Notre Dame where he was selected Freshman First-Team All-America.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- His 5.0 sacks this season ranks 2nd in the NFL among rookies [StL DT Aaron Donald - 7.0].
- Made his NFL debut at Dal. (9/7).
- On the first series of the game vs. Chi. (9/14), blocked a punt by Bears P Patrick O'Donnell, giving the 49ers the ball at the Bears 8-yard line. The blocked punt led to a 3-yd. TD pass from QB Colin Kaepernick to WR Michael Crabtree.
- Registered his first career sack at Den. (10/19), dropping Broncos QB Peyton Manning for a 7-yd. loss.
- Notched 1.0 sack vs. StL (11/2), dropping QB Austin Davis for a 3-yd. loss.
- Made his first career start at NO (11/9).
- Sacked Giants QB Eli Manning for a 9-yd. loss at NYG (11/16).
- Dropped Redskins QB Robert Griffin III for a 3-yd. loss vs. Was. (11/23). It marked his 4th sack of the season.
- Registered 1.0 sack of Seahawks QB Russell Wilson vs. Sea. (11/27). It marked his third consecutive game with a sack.

// GOLDMINE

- Lynch draws his passion for the game from his mother, who had a much more difficult task than competing in football. "She was a single mom for 19, 20 years. I learned a lot of morals and values from my mother." As the oldest of three children, Lynch was forced to grow up quickly, "I was basically the dad of the family."
- One event in particular has given Lynch a reason to strive to be the best football player he can be. "My grandfather passing away. It made me want to work harder, push myself harder." He wants to carry himself in a manner that his grandfather would be proud of.

BORN 8.19.89 // PITTSBURGH, PA // HARVARD-WESTLAKE, STUDIO CITY, CA
3RD YEAR // ACQUIRED TR IN '14 - MIA

Jonathan Martin enters his first season with the 49ers where he reunites with his head coach at Stanford, Jim Harbaugh. The experienced offensive lineman has already played both left and right tackle positions in his young NFL career. A second-round draft pick (42nd overall) by the Miami Dolphins in the 2012 NFL Draft, Martin has started 32 career games. A three-year starter at Stanford, Martin earned First-Team All-Pac-10 honors as a junior and was also a finalist for the Lombardi Award, given to the nation's most outstanding lineman.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Helped pave the way for the 49ers offense to rush for a season-high 218 yds. on 42 atts. (5.2 avg.) vs. Phi. (9/28). Also helped the 49ers offense hold the ball for 42:17, which was the highest time of possession for the team since 11/20/11 vs. Arz. (44:16).

// GOLDMINE

- Martin grew up in a well-educated family that saw his great-grandfather, grandfather and both parents graduate from Harvard. Before choosing Stanford University, Martin was heavily recruited by Harvard as well and would have been the first-ever fourth generation African-American at the school.
- A classics major at Stanford, Martin was introduced to the program by a fellow offensive lineman. "I took a class on the Greek Gods and I kind of liked it," said Martin. He enjoys reading the works of philosophers such as Plato.

Marcus Martin was drafted in the third round of the 2014 NFL Draft. After missing the first seven games of the season to injury, Martin returned and was immediately placed into the starting lineup due to Daniel Kilgore being placed on Injured Reserve. A student of the game, Martin is already considered a leader among an experienced offensive line. A team captain and First-Team All-Pac-12 selection for the Trojans in 2013, Marcus Martin proved he could play both center and guard during his three-year collegiate career. He anchored Southern California's offensive line in 2013, helping the Trojans rushing attack score 29 touchdowns on the ground. In 2011, the Los Angeles native became the first true freshman lineman to start at offensive guard at USC since 2004.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his NFL debut and first career start vs. StL (11/2).

// GOLDMINE

- Martin grew up in a large family with two brothers and two sisters. Despite being the youngest of the five children, Martin is the first member of his family to go to college. He credits two of his family members in particular for making him the man he is today, "Having the guidance and the leadership that I had from my brother and my father, they kept me off the streets, they kept me from doing everything that was wrong and doing positive things."

- Martin has a passion for charity work and believes in giving back. Although he's in just his rookie season, he's already got big plans for community work in his hometown of Crenshaw, CA. "I plan on opening up my non-profit and I want to help as many people as I can, touch as many lives as I can," explained Martin. "Coming from where I come from, there's not a lot of hope. So, if I can do anything, I'll pass on some words of advice to the youngsters." He continued, "It's a non-profit that's going to facilitate tutoring and mentorship and kind of act as a safe haven for kids to come after school."
- One particular charitable organization caught the attention of Martin back in college. "I did something a few months ago with the Starkey Foundation. The Starkey Foundation is an organization that creates hearing aids for kids that are deaf. They go around the country doing that and also out of the states. In the United States, they do digital, and out of the states, they do analog because it's easier to maintain. I got the opportunity to do something at USC with the Starkey Foundation and I had a great time."

WT 290

COLLEGE FLORIDA

BORN 9.2.84 // PAHOKEE, FL // GLADES CENTRAL HS, BELLE GLADE, FL
8TH YEAR // ACQUIRED D-3B IN '07

Ray McDonald has been a consistent force on the 49ers defensive line since 2011, having started 59 of 62 regular season games in that span. Whether it's stopping the run or rushing the passer, McDonald's abilities makes him an integral piece of the defense. His 3.5 sacks in 2013 trailed only DT Justin Smith for most sacks by a defensive lineman. A model of determination and resiliency, he has missed just four games because of injury during his seven-year career, after having overcome multiple knee injuries while in college.

// CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Recorded his first career TD after scooping up a QB Kyle Boller fumble on the Rams 11-yd. line and returned it for the score vs. StL (10/4/09).
- Registered his first career INT and returned it 31 yds. for a TD at Car. (10/24/10).

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Registered his first sack of the season at NYG (11/16), dropping Giants QB Eli Manning for a 6-yd. loss.
- Registered 1.0 sack for 7 yds. vs. Was. (11/23), marking his 2nd sack of the season. He has now registered a sack in back-to-back games for the 5th time in his career [Last vs StL (12/1/13) and vs. Sea. (12/8/13)].
- Registered his 3rd sack of the season, dropping Seahawks QB Russell Wilson for a 9-yd. loss at Sea. (12/14).

// GOLDMINE

- McDonald's durability and toughness earned him the 49ers Hazeltine Iron Man and Blue Collar Defensive Player of the Year Awards for the 2012 season. During the year, McDonald started all 16 games and recorded 2.5 sacks, while taking on constant double teams to free up his teammates. The Hazeltine Iron Man Award is given annually to the most courageous and inspirational defensive player as voted upon by the defensive coaches.
- Ray comes from an athletic family as his father, Ray Sr., played wide receiver for the Florida Gators in the mid-80s and was featured on the cover of Sports Illustrated (Nov. 11, 1985) after catching both scores in a 14-10 victory at Auburn in 1985. Ray's grandfather, Willie McDonald, played running back at Bethune Cookman, and his uncle was a cornerback at UCF. Ray didn't have strong aspirations of playing football professionally until later in high school, when his father began to prepare him for the pro game. "He didn't really push me into playing football when I was growing up, but I told him I really wanted to take off with football. So he dedicated his whole year to working me out."

- Ray has had his share of success growing up playing football. While in high school, he won a state championship four straight years, and then a national title at Florida, but still strives to achieve the ultimate prize of an NFL championship. "I have individual goals, but it all comes down to winning. I come from a winning tradition. All I'm missing out on is an NFL Championship."
- Since the 2008 offseason, Ray has looked for other ways to improve himself as a pass rusher. He has been boxing with the 49ers strength and conditioning staff in order to add more moves to his pass rushing repertoire. "It's something that I can add to my tray with hand-eye coordination. It helps with my endurance and my hand placement and I have enough force to knock someone off balance."
- Despite entering the NFL with great concerns regarding the health of his knees, which hurt his draft stock and forced him to be selected in the 3rd round in 2007, McDonald has missed just 4 games in his career to injury.

VANCE McDONALD

TEHT 6-4*WT 267*COLLEGE RICE

BORN 6.13.90 // BEAUMONT, TX // EAST CHAMBERS HS, WINNIE, TX
2ND YEAR // ACQUIRED D-2B IN '13

A second-round draft pick (55th overall) by the 49ers in 2013, Vance McDonald appeared in 15 games (four starts) as a rookie. A two-time First-Team All-Conference USA selection at Rice University, he finished his collegiate career ranked in the top 10 in receptions (7th), touchdowns (t-5th) and receiving yards (6th) in school history. In 2010, McDonald was named the recipient of the George R. Brown Award, given to the Owls top receiver.

// GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- Growing up, Vance spent a lot of his time at the Drake Plantation in Winnie, a large open land full of wildlife such as ducks, geese and deer, which his uncle owned. He went fishing, caught crawfish and rode four-wheelers. "I loved just being an outdoorsman," he said. "It's a big agricultural town."

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Placed on the Injured Reserve List on 12/9.

// GOLDMINE

- Vance grew up in Winnie, Texas, which was discovered to have a large oilfield and currently has about 3,500 residents. "We have three stop lights and any fast food restaurant you can possibly imagine and a bunch of hotels," McDonald said to describe Winnie. "It's a place for truckers to stop off and get some rest and a bite to eat driving off to Louisiana. The whole town is just one highway. Everyone knows everyone's business."
- McDonald spent draft day at home in Winnie with his family and closest family friends. "It was a big thing for the small town," he said. When 49ers head coach Jim Harbaugh called, McDonald slipped into his parents room and jokingly didn't tell the rest of his family that the 49ers were on the other line until he got off the phone. "They kept asking me, 'Who is it? Who is it?' It was just an unbelievable time, surrounded by the people that I care about most. It was finally here," McDonald said. "The people I was around made it that much better."

Originally a third-round selection by the Browns in the 2013 NFL Draft, McFadden joined the 49ers after having spent the beginning of the 2014 season with the New York Jets. As a rookie in 2013, McFadden appeared in all 16 games as a member of the Browns. A former standout at San Diego State, McFadden was a three-time First-Team All-Mountain West selection from 2010 to 2012 and ranked first in the conference in passes defended in both of his sophomore and junior seasons.

// GOLDMINE

- Leon McFadden is not the first person in his family to be a professional athlete. His father, Leon Sr., was a shortstop and right fielder for the Houston Astros from 1968-1970. Leon Sr. was the most influential person in his son's life, constantly pushing him to be the best he could be. He paid for private school to keep Leon focused on his studies and attended all of his sporting events, including baseball, basketball and football during high school. Leon said about his father, "My dad always told me, 'don't let anyone tell you that you can't do anything.'"

COLLEGE OKLAHOMA

BORN 7.25.91 // COLUMBIA, MO // ROCK BRIDGE HS, COLUMBIA, MO
ROOKIE // ACQUIRED D-7B IN '14

Trey Millard was a three-time First-Team All-Big 12 selection at Oklahoma. As a senior, he was the recipient of the Don Key Award, which is given to the player who best exemplifies the many superior qualities of Key, both on the field and in the classroom. Oklahoma coaches describe the award as the highest honor an OU football player can receive while playing for the Sooners.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Placed on the Reserve/Non-Football Injury List on 8/25.

// GOLDMINE

- Millard developed early as an athlete thanks to the motivation of his older brother, Ky. "He has more height. He has a basketball frame. He always drove me. I always tried to play with him and his friends that always came over. That was definitely a driving force," said Millard. Ky used his basketball frame collegiately at Westminster College in Fulton, MO.
- While in middle school, Millard took to a pen and pad in class. He submitted two poems in order to get extra credit. The poems were later published. "The people that I submitted it to liked it and so they published it. I enjoyed it."

BRUCE MILLER

FB

HT 6-2

WT 248

COLLEGE CENTRAL FLORIDA

BORN 8.6.87 // CANTON, GA // WOODSTOCK HS, WOODSTOCK, GA
4TH YEAR // ACQUIRED D-7A IN '11

Moving from one job to another is difficult in any profession, but Bruce Miller welcomed a new challenge. Drafted by the 49ers in the seventh round (211th overall) of the 2011 NFL Draft, Miller immediately made the transition from college defensive end to NFL fullback. The Central Florida product caught on so quickly that he earned a starting role by Week 3 of his rookie season, a role he has owned since. In 2013, Miller continued his development at fullback and set single-season career-highs in both receptions and receiving yards, and paved the way for a San Francisco rushing attack which ranked third in the NFL, averaging 137.6 rushing yards per game. His team-first attitude has helped him gain the respect of his head coach, who commented on his Miller's relationship with RB Frank Gore, "That's as close as a relationship as I've seen - a running back and full back. And if you can't get along with Bruce Miller, then there's something wrong with you. He's just one of those great guys."

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Was the lead blocker for a rushing attack that gained a season-high 218 yds. on the ground vs. Phi. (9/28). The strong ground game helped the 49ers offense hold the ball for 42:17, which was the highest time of possession for the team since 11/20/11 vs. Arz. (44:16).
- Recorded an 8-yd. TD recept. at Oak. (12/7), marking his 1st TD recept. of the season.
- Registered 4 receipts. for 56 yds. at Sea. (12/14), tying his career high in both categories [4 receipts. at Cin. (9/25/11); 4 receipts. at TB (12/15/13)]; [56 rec. yds. at Jax. (10/27/13)].

// GOLDMINE

- Miller hopes to go back and coach his high school's football team. He said high school is the most crucial time where athletes need good coaches. "There's a big development stage between freshman and senior year of high school," he said. "Many important parts of kids' lives happen in that time. When you get to college, pretty much what you come in with is what you have. It'd be fun to be a part of." However, Miller described himself as a late bloomer who really developed athletically in college rather than in high school. "My coaches were very influential and played a big role in my life."
- Miller has been one of the 49ers most active players at community events in the Bay Area. "They're a lot of fun to take part in," he said. "Just having something to give and talking to people is my favorite part."

- Bruce wasn't the most highly recruited player coming out of high school. In fact, saying he was under the radar was an understatement; Bruce wasn't even on the radar. UCF defensive coordinator Dave Huxtable, however, was evaluating other Georgia players and noticed Bruce on film. "He was playing tight end," Huxtable said. "Running and catching balls and making players miss. He was on the kickoff cover team and he was the first one down there on the kickoff cover team plays. Then I got to watch him play basketball. He's a 6-2 center, but he's underneath there just battling on the boards. He's a special guy." Huxtable was one of Bruce's major influences in becoming the two-time Conference USA Defensive Player of the Year. "He played a huge role for me," said Bruce. "I always looked at him for motivation and help. I went to Coach Hux because of the bond we made during recruiting and then playing for him at linebacker."

Nick Moody saw limited action during his rookie season after being selected by the 49ers in the sixth round (180th overall) of the 2013 NFL Draft. In 2012, the FSU senior helped the Seminoles lead the nation in yards allowed per play (3.86) and rank second in total defense (254.1 yards per game).

- Head coach Jim Harbaugh lives by the 'Blue Collar' work ethic, which happens to be the same way of thinking as the Moody family, "My family instilled the mentality, that if you want something you have to work for it and go get it. Nobody owes you anything."
- One of his hobbies includes staying in touch with the latest rap music, "I try to keep up with the newest music every day. Meek Mill and Young Jeezy are my two favorite artists right now."
- Moody has always had a knack for success no matter where he lines up. In high school, he played linebacker, cornerback and safety, while also catching 13 receiving touchdowns as a sophomore wide receiver.

COLLEGE NEW MEXICO STATE

BORN 10.3.86 // NORMAN, OK // CHINA SPRINGS HS, CHINA SPRINGS, TX
3RD YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '14

Having spent the 2012 training camp with the 49ers, Kyle Nelson returns to the team after being claimed off waivers in May of 2013. He made his NFL debut in 2012, playing in six games as the San Diego Chargers long snapper. Nelson originally entered the NFL as an undrafted free agent with New Orleans in 2011, and went on to spend time on the Saints, Chiefs and Eagles practice squads between 2011 and 2012. Nelson is a third generation member of a football family. His grandfather, Roger, was elected into the Canadian Football League Hall of Fame in 1985. Kyle's father, Mark, has more than a quarter-century of coaching experience under his belt with stints at Louisville, Kentucky, Baylor, Arkansas Tech and in the CFL. Mark was instructed by his father, Roger, to learn how to long snap, but refused. Kyle listened and accepted the same advice from his grandfather and father and gives credit to them for teaching him how to long snap.

// GOLDMINE

- Nelson has been working with middle school football players in Phoenix, teaching them the craft of long snapping as colleges begin recruiting students specifically to fill that role. "It helps the kids get into school," he said. "We do it to get them scholarships, get their school paid for so their parent's don't have to."
- Nelson comes from a football family where he is a third generation member. His father, Mark, is the linebackers coach for the Montreal Alouettes in the Canadian Football League, with a quarter-century of coaching experience. Mark played in the CFL for six seasons and spent time coaching in the NCAA at Louisville, Arkansas Tech, Baylor and Kentucky. Kyle's grandfather, Roger, was drafted by the Washington Redskins in 1954. He played offensive tackle for 13 seasons for the CFL's Edmonton Eskimos from 1954 to 1967 and was elected into the CFL Hall of Fame in 1985.

- The Nelson's family secret to football longevity? Become a specialist. Kyle says the story goes like this: "My grandfather told my dad to learn how to long snap and my dad said, 'No, I'm okay. I'll play linebacker.' He played six years in the CFL, but said if he had learned how to long snap, he would have played a little bit more. It's gotten me where I am today, so I owe a lot to my snapping coach, my grandfather and my dad for getting me started," said Kyle.
- Always around football, in the summers, Kyle would help his dad, Mark, when he was coaching in the NCAA and CFL. He worked as ball boy and assisted the equipment staff with laundry. At a young age, Kyle got to see tight knit locker rooms and learned how successful teams work together on and off the field. Mark's career as a football coach meant many moves for the Nelson family. Kyle was born in Norman, Oklahoma and growing up, the family moved between Tulsa, Oklahoma and Canada three times and Kyle spent time living in George, Kentucky, Arkansas, Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico before coming to California.
- In his spare time, Nelson enjoys drawing, reading and going hiking. When Kyle was growing up, his family planned hikes on the weekends where he was able to witness the landscape of Arkansas, Georgia, Texas and Arizona. It translated to painting, where Kyle draws pictures of the outdoors such as oceans, forests and mountains. "I like turning color pictures into black and white, charcoal, Sharpies," he said. "It's a nice, relaxing hobby."

WT 204

COLLEGE LOUISIANA TECH

BORN 8.9.90 // NASHVILLE, TN // LAVERGNE HS, LAVERGNE, TN
2ND YEAR // ACQUIRED D-4A IN '13

Quinton Patton showed flashes of his athleticism during his rookie season after being drafted by the 49ers in the fourth round of the 2013 NFL Draft. He earned First-Team All-WAC honors in each of his two seasons at Louisiana Tech and finished his collegiate career ranked seventh in school history in receptions (183) and receiving yards (2,594). He also hauled in 24 touchdown receptions for the Bulldogs. Patton served as team captain in 2012, while being nicknamed "The General."

// GOLDMINE

- Patton grew up in a couple of rough neighborhoods around Nashville, Tennessee, where drug use and violence ran rampant "I probably have seen everything, people getting shot, all of it," he said. Quinton's friends realized his athletic abilities and made sure he stayed on the proper path. "They'd always tell me, 'No, you're not going to get into anything because we can see you have something that we don't.'"
- Patton learned to cook from his father, Herman, who worked as a chef at Country Pride, a truck stop restaurant in Antioch, Tennessee. "I always used to be in the kitchen, watching and learning them cook everything." Quinton's favorite dish to make is baked chicken with yams, sweet potatoes and brownies for dessert.
- At the 2011 Poinsettia Bowl, Patton showed leadership and maturity when he selflessly gave his bowl gift (a $300 Best Buy gift card) to a Make-A-Wish Foundation kid during the bowl's community service event. Why? The child's wish was to go on a shopping spree and Patton was happy to be able to grant that child's wish.

- In addition, football helped Quinton stay out of trouble. "I put so much time, so much effort in, believed in myself, and wasn't afraid to take a chance," he said. "My chance is football and I always have fun." Patton lives by advice he received from his junior college football coach: "When hard work becomes fun, success will follow. If you aren't working hard and having fun, you're not going to get anything out of it." It's evident on the practice field and in the locker room. Patton makes his friends, teammates and anyone else he encounters, put on a smile and laugh. "That's what I always go by, that's why you always see me with a smile out here, working, running with a smile, cracking jokes, but I'm still working hard, I'm still getting into it."

- Prior to the NFL Draft, Ramsey earned high praise from many of his former teammates at Boston College. LB Kevin Pierre-Louis said, "Him being a hundred percent healthy, he just kills everyone that's in front of him. I've seen him do things to offensive linemen that you never see, I mean, literally throwing a guy in the air parallel to the ground. He's an amazing athlete." DE Kassim Edbali added, "He's truly a beast. With his physical strength, there's nobody who can stop him."
- Ramsey was one of the stars at the 2014 NFL Combine. His 36 reps of 225 lbs on the bench press were the most among all defensive players and t-2nd most overall.

WT 190

COLLEGE FLORIDA ATLANTIC

BORN 7.31.91 // MIAMI, FL // KILLIAN HS, MIAMI, FL
ROOKIE // ACQUIRED D-5B IN '14

An experienced starter from Florida Atlantic University, Keith Reaser finished his collegiate career with 158 tackles and five interceptions. Reaser's cousin was former Washington Redskins S Sean Taylor. "I watched every game he ever played," said Reaser. "From him being at Miami in college to the NFL. We used to run and train together. What I learned most from him was his passion and work ethic. He taught me that, and I will never forget it."

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Placed on the Reserve/Non-Football Injury List on 8/25.

// GOLDMINE

- The strength and conditioning part of football is nothing new to Reaser. He grew up a track star in high school and credits the conditioning of the sport to his success on the field. "I had definitely improved my speed. I would give that advice to anybody playing football coming up that wanted to improve their speed, track definitely helps. I definitely think that's the reason I can run the way I do now." In addition to his speed, he displayed his strength at the 2014 NFL Combine. Reaser's 22 reps in the bench press were tied for the most by a cornerback.
- Growing up on the coast in Miami, FL, Reaser enjoyed both fresh and saltwater fishing. The hobby provided a challenge similar to football. "I like the competition of fishing. I don't just go by myself. I don't know exactly what I like about it. Just the challenge of catching fish. I enjoy it."

ERIC REID

S

WT 213

COLLEGE LOUISIANA STATE

BORN 12.10.91 // BATON ROUGE, LA // DUTCHTOWN HS, GEISMAR, LA
2ND YEAR // ACQUIRED D-1 IN '13

As a first-round pick in the 2013 NFL Draft, Eric Reid did everything the 49ers were looking for when they selected the LSU safety as the 18th overall draft choice. Reid earned his starting spot in training camp and carried his momentum into the season as he started all 16 regular season games and all three games in the postseason. He quickly made a name for himself as a rookie, finishing the season as the only player in the NFC to record four interceptions and two fumble recoveries. He became the first 49ers rookie safety to be named to the Pro Bowl in franchise history. Reid was the recipient of the Thomas Herrion Memorial Award given by the 49ers coaches to the rookie or first-year player who has taken advantage of every opportunity and turned it into a positive situation.

// CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- In 2013, Reid was one of only three players in the NFL to record 4+ INTs and 2+ FRs (LB Kiko Alonso 4 INTs/2 FRs; CB Alterraun Verner 5 INTs/2 FRs).

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Intercepted a pass by Cowboys QB Tony Romo in the 1st qtr. at Dal. (9/7). He returned the INT 48 yds. to the Dal. 2-yd. line. Reid has now registered an INT in each of his two season openers.
- Registered his 2nd INT of the season, picking off Giants QB Eli Manning at NYG (11/16).
- As time expired in the first half, intercepted Seahawks QB Russell Wilson for his 3rd INT of the season and 7th of his career, and returned the pick 73 yds. It marked the longest INT return of his career and the longest by a 49er since LB NaVorro Bowman's 89-yd. INT return vs. Atl. (12/23/13).

// GOLDMINE

- Jim Harbaugh not only wanted to draft Reid to the 49ers roster coming out of college, but Harbaugh had his eyes on the safety when he was still in high school. As Stanford's head coach, Harbaugh tried to recruit Reid to play college football for the Cardinal. Harbaugh exchanged a few phone calls with Eric and his father, Eric Sr., as well as many emails with his mother, Sharon. Reid chose LSU to remain close to home. "[Stanford] was actually the only school that recruited me as hard as LSU did. All of the other schools pretty much gave up knowing that I was an in-state guy, but it said a lot about how much [Harbaugh] wanted me to go to Stanford and I appreciated it."

- Ironically, after choosing to stay local for college, Reid hoped to be drafted by the 49ers so he could be in Northern California's Bay Area. Eric's mother, Sharon Guillory-Reid, works as a traveling nurse. Since Eric was in middle school in 2004, she has been traveling back and forth from Baton Rouge, LA, and the Bay Area, working in hospitals in Oakland, San Jose and San Leandro, staying in each state two to three weeks at a time. Now, Eric remains close to his mother and has insight on the area.
- Growing up, Eric's parent's taught him the importance of hard work, the value of money and focusing on strong academics. His mother expected him to earn straight A's. When Reid wanted money to buy things, his parents made him get a job. He worked at a water park when he was 15 and at Wal-Mart at age 16. He would work four to eight hours a week, even between his regular high school football practices. Sharon bought him a 2001 Honda Civic, which the family still owns. But Eric had one ultimatum, if he wanted gas to be able to drive the car, he'd have to learn to budget his expenses.
- In addition to instilling high character into Eric, his mother made an impact on the gridiron. Sharon also played tackle football, spending one season for the Baton Rouge Wildcats of the Women's American Football League. She played tight end and defensive end in the full-contact, tackle league. However, the Wildcats only lasted one season when the team folded due to Hurricane Katrina.

COLLEGE GRAND VALLEY STATE

6TH YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '13

A versatile linebacker and accomplished special teams player, Dan Skuta stepped into the starting role at outside linebacker on defense at times during the 2013 regular season. He started a career-high eight games and tied his career high with 34 tackles, while also registering his first career touchdown at London's Wembley Stadium against the Jacksonville Jaguars. A six-year veteran, Skuta spent the first four seasons of his career with the Cincinnati Bengals, where he became a special teams standout.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Forced a fumble by Cowboys RB DeMarco Murray in the 1st qtr. at Dal. (9/7). The loose ball was recovered by CB Chris Culliver and returned 35 yds. for a TD. It marked his second career FF.
- Registered 2.0 sacks and 1 FF at StL (10/13), stripping the ball from Rams QB Austin Davis.
- Brought down Raiders QB Derek Carr for a 9-yd. loss at Oak. (12/7). It marked his 3rd sack of the season.
- Registered 1.0 sack of Seahawks QB Russell Wilson at Sea. (12/14). It marked the first time in his career he has registered a sack in back-to-back games.

// GOLDMINE

- While in Cincinnati, Skuta enjoyed spending time in the community, "I had the chance to work with the Boys and Girls Club and the Free Store Food Bank in Cincinnati. It meant a lot to me, just remembering what it meant to me when I was a kid. It was big to me. Just seeing how happy the kids are when we're out there is awesome. That brings a lot of joy to me. I like to go do it for that."

ALDON SMITH

LB

WT 265

COLLEGE MISSOURI

BORN 9.25.89 // KANSAS CITY, MO // RAYTOWN SENIOR HS, RAYTOWN, MO
4TH YEAR // ACQUIRED D-1 IN '11

One of the most feared pass rushers in the NFL, Aldon Smith has made opposing quarterbacks uneasy since entering the NFL as the seventh overall pick in the 2011 NFL Draft. Since entering the league, he ranks 7th in the NFL with 44.0 sacks. Smith registered 33.5 sacks through his first two seasons, the most by any player in their first two seasons since sacks became an official statistic in 1982. Smith tallied 30.5 in his first 27 games, becoming the fastest player to reach the 30-sack mark in league history. In 2012, he registered 19.5 sacks, to set a single-season franchise record and rank 2nd in the NFL. Smith's performance earned him First-Team All-Pro honors and his first Pro Bowl selection. As a rookie, Smith led the team and all NFL rookies with 14.0 sacks, the second-highest total by a rookie in NFL history (Jevon Kearse, 14.5 in 1999).

- Tied a 49ers record with at least 1.0 sack in 7 consecutive games (10/18/12 - 12/9/12), joining Dwaine Board (10/16/83 - 12/4/83) and Dana Stubblefield (9/21/97 - 11/4/90) for the longest streak with at least 1.0 sack in team history.
- Recorded 5.5 sacks vs. Chi. (11/19/12), the most in Monday Night Football history. The total is the 2nd-most in a game in team history [Fred Dean - 6.0 vs. NO (11/13/83)]. Smith has 12.0 sacks in 5 career games on MNF, which is tied for the most among all active players on MNF (Dwight Freeney - 12.0).
- Set the 49ers rookie sack record (14.0) in 2011, surpassing DT Charles Haley's mark of 12.0 in 1986. Smith's 14.0 sacks led SF and all rookies in 2011 and ranked t-5th in the NFL.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- In his first start of the season, registered 2.0 sacks of Redskins QB Robert Griffin III vs. Was. (11/23).

// GOLDMINE

- In 2012, Smith was selected as the recipient of the 49ers Bill Walsh Award. Established in 2004 in honor of San Francisco's Hall of Fame Head Coach, the award, which is voted on by coaches, is given to the 49ers team MVP, honoring his outstanding individual performance.
- In recent years, Aldon has dabbled in boxing and mixed martial arts training, both of which he said are helpful with his pass-rush technique and mental endurance.

// CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Smith's 33.5 sacks in his first two seasons in the NFL are the most by a player in his first 2 years in NFL history. Smith reached the mark by surpassing Hall of Fame DE Reggie White (31.0).

MOST SACKS BY A PLAYER IN THEIR FIRST TWO SEASONS IN NFL HISTORY

Player	Sacks
1. Aldon Smith, SF (2011-12)	33.5
2. Reggie White, Phi. (1985-86)	31.0

- His 33.5 sacks in his first two seasons in the NFL are the most by any player in consecutive seasons in 49ers history. The previous record was held by DE Chris Doleman (27.0 sacks from 1997-98).

- Since his rookie year in 2011, Smith has registered 44.0 sacks, the 7th most in the NFL over that time span.

MOST SACKS IN THE NFL SINCE 2011

JUSTIN SMITH

DT

HT 6-4

WT 285

COLLEGE MISSOURI

14TH YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '08

A relentless and explosive defender, two-time All-Pro Justin Smith anchors the 49ers defensive front. Nicknamed "Cowboy" for his blue-collar, Mid-western approach to his job, Smith is widely recognized as a leader in the locker room. Said head coach Jim Harbaugh, "A man everybody truly respects. Chuck Norris calls Justin Smith, 'sir.'" In 2014, Smith's 5.0 sacks mark the 12th time in his career that he has tallied at least 5.0 sacks in a season. In 2012, he was named Second-Team AP All-Pro at two different positions (DT & DE) after registering 130 tackles, 3.0 sacks, one fumble recovery and two passes defended. Among all defensive tackles since joining the 49ers in 2008, he ranks first in the NFL in sacks (43.5) and forced fumbles (10) over that span. Smith's 43.5 sacks also rank 2nd in franchise history among DTs to Dana Stubblefield (46.5). Smith was rewarded with a two-year contract in June of 2013 that will keep him in red and gold through 2015.

// CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Selected to five consecutive Pro Bowls (2010-14).
- Was selected AP All-Pro at two different positions in consecutive seasons - First-Team DT and Second-Team DE in 2011; Second-Team DT and DE in 2012.
- Owned a streak of 185 consecutive starts, beginning during his rookie season through 12/16/12.
- Set a single-game career-high with 3.5 sacks at StL (1/3/10).
- Played the most snaps of any NFL defensive lineman in 2007, lining up for 97.9 percent of plays on defense as the Bengals franchise player.
- Has posted at least 5.0 sacks in 12 of his 14 seasons played and is one of 13 players since sacks became an official statistic in 1982 to register 5-or-more sacks in 12-or-more seasons.
- Posted at least 6.0 sacks in four consecutive seasons (2008-11), becoming just the 3rd player in franchise history to do so.
- With 6.5 sacks during the 2013 regular season, Smith became just the 20th player in NFL history to register at least 5.0 sacks in 11 separate seasons since sacks became an official statistic in 1982.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Brought down Cowboys QB Tony Romo twice at Dal. (9/7), marking his first multi-sack game since 11/25/13 at Was. (2.0 sacks). This marked the eighth time Smith has registered a sack on opening day. It also marks his 3rd multi-sack game on opening day [3.0 at KC (9/10/06); 2.0 vs. Sea. (9/11/11)].
- Registered 1.0 sack of Bears QB Jay Cutler vs. Chi. (9/14). It marked his 3rd sack of the season and 85th of his career. His 3.0 sacks are tied for the most he's had through the first two games of a season in his career (2006).
- Recovered a fumble by Eagles WR Riley Cooper vs. Phi. (9/28).
- Forced a fumble by Chiefs RB Jamaal Charles vs. KC (10/5).
- Sacked Redskins QB Robert Griffin III and forced a fumble with 59 seconds remaining in the game at Was. (11/23). The loose ball was recovered by LB Ahmad Brooks and sealed the victory.
- Registered 1.0 sack of Seahawks QB Russell Wilson vs. (11/27).

// GOLDMINE

- Smith joined RB Frank Gore and LB Patrick Willis as the only two-time recipients of the 49ers Bill Walsh Award in team history. The Bill Walsh Award is voted on by the coaches and awarded to the 49ers team MVP.
- In 2012, Smith's teammates voted him the Len Eshmond Award winner, the 49ers most prestigious annual honor. The Len Eshmond Award honors the player who best exemplifies the "inspirational and courageous play" of Len Eshmont. Smith fought through an elbow and triceps injury that required surgery in the offseason to anchor the team's defensive line during the team's run to Super Bowl XLVII.

WT 315

COLLEGE CENTRAL MICHIGAN

BORN 8.30.84 // ROCKFORD, MI // ROCKFORD HS, ROCKFORD, MI
8TH YEAR // ACQUIRED D-1B IN '07

Tasked with the duty of protecting the quarterback's blind side, three-time All-Pro and Pro Bowl selection Joe Staley has excelled in his role since being selected as the second of San Francisco's two first-round draft picks in 2007. In addition to being named All Pro in 2011, 2012 and 2013, he was also selected to three consecutive Pro Bowls (2012-14). In 2013, Staley helped pave the way for a rushing attack that ranked 3rd in yards (2,201) and 4th in touchdowns (18). In Week 2 of the 2014 season, Staley started his 100th career game, becoming just the 20th offensive lineman in franchise history to have played in 100+ games. A product of Central Michigan, Staley became the first player in school history to be drafted in the first round of the NFL Draft. On July 17, 2014, Staley signed a two-year contract extension to keep him with the 49ers through the 2019 season.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Started his 100th game with the 49ers vs. Chi. (9/14), becoming the 20th offensive lineman in franchise history to have played in 100-or-more games.
- Helped pave the way for the 49ers offense to rush for a season-high 218 yds. on 42 atts. (5.2 avg.) vs. Phi. (9/28). Also helped the 49ers offense hold the ball for 42:17, which was the highest time of possession for the team since 11/20/11 vs. Arz. (44:16).

// GOLDMINE

- Entering his sophomore season at Central Michigan, Staley and the football program experienced a coaching change. New head coach Brian Kelly and offensive line coach Jeff Quinn asked the young tight end to make the switch to offensive tackle. He agreed and the transformation began. The 250-pound tight end began to wake up at 2 a.m. to consume a 2,000 calorie weight-gaining shake and would later work out twice a day to prepare his body for its new life in the trenches. In the first offseason, Staley added 20 pounds to his lean frame. By the time he was a senior, he reached 290 pounds and went on to become the first Chippewa to be drafted in the first round of the NFL Draft.
- In 2013, Joe was an ambassador for San Francisco's first Electric Run, a 5K race that benefits Smile Train, the world's largest cleft lip and palate charity. The race, which was held at Candlestick Park, raised $10,000 for Smile Train and more than 8,000 people participated in the event. "Anything that benefits children is just a great cause and I was very excited to put my name down for the charity and the event itself," Staley said.

// CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Became the first 49ers rookie O-lineman to start every single game in a season since Cas Banaszek (1968-77), who started all 14 contests in 1968.
- Was 1 of only 3 NFL rookies (49ers LB Patrick Willis and Browns LT Joe Thomas) to line up for every single snap in 2007, and was 1 of 35 NFL players overall to accomplish the feat out of 1,898 total players.
- When Staley recovered a fumble for a TD [vs. NYJ (12/7/08)], he became the 6th offensive lineman in 49ers history to register a TD.

Andrew Tiller originally signed with the 49ers practice squad on October 7, 2014. His combination of size and athletic ability helped him earn a promotion to the active roster and make his NFL debut at Seattle on December 14. After being drafted by the Saints in the sixth round of the 2012 NFL draft, Tiller spent time with the Chargers and Packers practice squads before making his way to San Francisco. A former All-Big East First-Team selection, Tiller started all 12 games at Syracuse in 2011 and helped the offensive line produce a 1,000-yard rusher.

// GOLDMINE

- In 2007, Tiller recorded the 19th-best discus throw in Suffolk County Section XI (122-06.50).
- Tiller was a dominant two-way player in high school. As a senior in 2006, he posted 103 tackles as a defensive lineman, the fourth-best total in Long Island. He also led all players in Long Island with 12 sacks.

Brandon Thomas was a mainstay on the offensive line at Clemson, helping pave the way for the Tigers offense as they amassed over 6,000 yards from scrimmage in each of the past three seasons. He was named First-Team All-ACC in 2013, and Second-Team All-ACC in 2012. Thomas was also selected to the ACC Academic Honor Roll twice during his collegiate career.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Placed on the Reserve/Non-Football Injury list on 8/25.

// TRANSACTIONS

Originally the third of three 3rd-round (100th overall) draft choices by SF in 2014...Placed on the Reserve/Non-Football Injury List on 8/25/14.

// GOLDMINE

- The word versatile has been used frequently to describe Thomas on the football field. During his days at Paul M. Dorman (Spartanburg, SC) High School, Thomas played guard his freshman and sophomore years, tackle his junior year and tight end/fullback his senior year. He took that versatility with him to Clemson, where he predominantly played tackle, starting 30 games at the position, but he also started nine games at guard for the Tigers. Through all of his experience, Thomas knows what it takes to be successful at both the tackle and guard positions and will use that to his advantage with the 49ers. "Basically, out there (at tackle) you have to have quick feet and good hips," Thomas said. "But inside (at guard), you have to be strong and have a solid base."
- Despite a knee injury late in the draft process, Thomas is aware of the positive situation that surrounds him with the Niners. He understands that there is an established offensive line that will work with him to improve. "This injury could be a blessing in disguise," Thomas said. "To take a year to learn from those guys, and get stronger, get better, get my knee stronger. So, it's going to be a fun process."

// COLLEGE

Played in 49 games (39 starts - 30 at T and 9 at G) for the Tigers. In 2013, earned First-Team All-ACC honors while starting all 13 games at left tackle. Helped pave the way for Clemson's offense to total 6,600 yds., which ranked 10th in the nation, and marked the second highest output in a single-season in the school's history. In 2012, was selected Second-Team All-ACC after starting all 13 games at left tackle. Part of an offensive line that helped the Tigers tally a school-record 6,665 yds. in total offense. Started 9 games at left guard and 1 game at left tackle in 2011, helping to set a then-school record with 6,171 yds. in total offense. Also became the first Tiger offensive lineman since 1966 to score a TD, recovering a fumble in the end zone vs. Georgia Tech. In 2010, saw playing time in 10 contests. Redshirted as a freshman in 2009.

// PERSONAL

- Attended Paul M. Dorman (Spartanburg, SC) HS, where he earned Class 5A All-State, All-Area and All-Conference honors during his last three seasons.
- Rated the 8th overall player in South Carolina, and the 14th best offensive tackle in the nation by Rivals.com.
- Earned ACC Academic Honor Roll accolades in 2012 and 2009.
- Graduated with a degree in secondary education.
- Born Brandon Thomas (2/8/91) in Spartanburg, SC.

ROOKIE // ACQUIRED D-1 IN '14

Jimmie Ward, the 49ers first-round pick in 2014, was called into action immediately, making his first career start in Week 1 at Dallas. A hybrid cornerback and safety, Ward earned the starting nickelback role in training camp. A two-time First-Team All-Mid-American Conference selection while at Northern Illinois, he is one of two defensive backs to amass over 300 career tackles. As a senior, Ward ranked 7th in the nation with seven interceptions, en route to earning Second-Team All-America and First-Team All-MAC honors. In 2010, he made an immediate impact for the Huskies, being named the team's Special Teams Player of the Year and Freshman of the Year.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Made his first career start and NFL debut at Dal. (9/7).
- Placed on the Injured Reserve List on 11/15 with a foot injury.

// GOLDMINE

- Growing up in Mobile, AL, Ward knew when to separate himself from others in his neighborhood. Said Ward, "From where I come from, the neighborhood that I grew up in, a lot of people don't make it out. There's a lot of stuff. They either flunk out of school, end up having a child so they have to drop out of school and raise that child, or end up going to jail. It really just made me want to do something more than what my peers were doing." Ward would surround himself with positive influences to help combat the negative. "As I got older I hung out with positive guys. The guys I was hanging with, they wanted to do something with their life too. That really helped me out."

- On draft day, Ward drove several hours for the opportunity to do something for his mother that he never had before; buy her a luxurious gift. He said, "I never really bought her anything expensive, because you're a kid. Growing up you would write a card, color a card or just buy a card or simple flowers. That's the most I ever did. She likes purses, so I just decided to get her a purse. It really didn't matter how much it cost, you just wanted to see that smile." His act of generosity shows his true character. "I'm not a selfish person. I just like to see and make other people smile too. It makes me feel better as a person."
- While playing youth football, Ward went by the nickname 'Nico' and was teammates with former Alabama QB AJ McCarron with the Mobile Youth Football's Municipal Raiders. He played linebacker for the team that won multiple Youth Bowl Championships in Mobile.
- Ward's family is no stranger to professional athletics. He is the cousin of current NBA player, Caron Butler.

COLLEGE WASHBURN

BORN 12.7.86 // TOPEKA, KS // HIGHLAND PARK HS, TOPEKA, KS
3RD YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '11

Michael Wilhoite took advantage of his opportunities in 2013, starting two games in place of injured LB Patrick Willis, registering 19 tackles in those games. He began his professional football career with the Omaha Nighthawks of the UFL as an undrafted free agent in 2011. A short time later, the 49ers added him to the practice squad in December of 2011. Wilhoite attended training camp with the Niners in 2012, and was later signed to the team's practice squad where he spent the first 11 games of the season. He was promoted to the 49ers active roster for the final five games of 2012 and all three postseason contests. Wilhoite was the recipient of the team's Thomas Herrion Memorial Award in 2012, which is presented to a rookie or first-year player who best represents the dream of Thomas Herrion and makes the most of their opportunities.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Tied his career high with 14 tackles at Dal. (9/7).
- Forced a fumble by Cardinals WR Larry Fitzgerald, which was recovered by CB Perrish Cox at the SF 5-yd. line at Arz. (9/21), marking his first career FF.
- Registered his first career INT at NYG (11/16), picking off Giants QB Eli Manning.

// GOLDMINE

- Wilhoite took an interesting road to the NFL that began at Division II Washburn University in Topeka, KS. With two redshirt years, one due to an injury, Wilhoite spent six years developing his skills as a safety. Despite playing in the Cactus Bowl, the Division II all-star game, he did not latch on with a NFL team following his final season, in 2010. He later signed with the nearby Omaha Nighthawks of the UFL. "I had never played linebacker in my life until I got to the UFL. I used that experience as a research project. There were former first round picks on the team that I could learn what the NFL was like. The coaches had all worked in the NFL, so I made sure to pay attention to them in case I ever got a shot."

- He was the recipient of the 2012 Thomas Herrion Award. The award is presented annually to a rookie or first-year player who has taken advantage of every opportunity, turned it into a positive and made their dream come true like Thomas Herrion and is voted on by the coaches. After signing with the 49ers as an undrafted free agent from Washburn, Wilhoite made the 49ers practice squad and became a special teams captain after he was promoted to the team's active roster in December.
- A mass media major at Washburn, Wilhoite would one day like to be a sports commentator. While in school, he completed an internship at WIBW radio where he did everything from pre- and post-production to occasionally participating on air.
- He worked several part time jobs growing up, including Red Lobster. "I loved the job. I got to talk to people and I really wanted to make sure that their experience was really nice. They were spending good money, so I wanted to take care of them."

COLLEGE NOTRE DAME

BORN 8.31.89 // ALTAMONTE SPRINGS, FL // LYMAN HS, LONGWOOD, FL
4TH YEAR // ACQUIRED FA IN '11

Ian Williams has continued to grow and develop since signing with the 49ers as an undrafted free agent out of Notre Dame in 2011. After beginning 2013 as the 49ers starting nose tackle, his season was prematurely ended by a broken ankle suffered in Week 2. The team rewarded Williams with a two-year contract extension on March 7, 2013, keeping him in the red and gold through 2015. While at Notre Dame, former 49er Bryant Young coached Williams during his junior year and still talks to Young regularly, seeking his advice.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Registered a career-high 8 tackles at Arz. (9/21).
- Sacked Eagles QB Nick Foles for a 4-yd. loss vs. Phi. (9/28), marking his first career sack.
- Placed on the Injured Reserve List on 11/17 with a fibula injury.

// GOLDMINE

- Ian learned that one of the most important things you have to learn when entering the NFL is time management, and attributes much of the early lessons he's learned to the older veteran players. "Just seeing the older players has helped me. You'd think once you've been in the league for a few years, guys start to relax, but that's not the case here, especially with Justin Smith. Those are the guys who I'm around every day, Justin and Ray McDonald. Those guys are going hard every single day. They're coming in and doing extra stuff all the time."

// GOLDMINE (CONTINUED)

- Ian values having relationships with people who have played in the league. Former 49er Bryant Young coached Ian during his junior year at Notre Dame. "Just to have him as a reference and to be able to talk to him about stuff is huge, especially since he was out here for so long. He's like a legend and is going to be a Hall-of-Famer. It's great to have somebody like that who you're able to talk to and just run things by him."

COLLEGE MISSISSIPPI

BORN 1.25.85 // BRUCETON, TN // CENTRAL HS, BRUCETON, TN
8TH YEAR // ACQUIRED D-1 IN '07

Arguably the greatest linebacker in the game today, Patrick Willis' sheer athleticism and knack for getting to the football make him an annual candidate for NFL Defensive Player of the Year. His superman-like performances week-in and week-out have contributed to the six-time All-Pro leading the NFL in tackles on multiple occasions. As the 11th overall selection in the 2007 NFL Draft, Willis made an immediate impact as a rookie, earning First-Team All-Pro, Pro Bowl and NFL Defensive Rookie of the Year honors. He has continued to build a resume that is destined for Canton. Not only has Willis been named All-Pro six times, but he has also earned Pro Bowl recognition every year, becoming the only 49er to earn Pro Bowl honors in each of their first seven seasons, and just the seventh player since the merger in 1970, to accomplish that feat. A team captain in 2013, he ranked 2nd on the team in tackles (147) and finished the season with 3.0 sacks, two forced fumbles and three passes defended. The leader of the 49ers defense was rewarded with a five-year contract extension that will keep him in the Bay Area through 2016.

// CAREER HIGHLIGHTS

- Became the first player in franchise history to be selected as an All-Pro in each of his first six seasons (First-Team - 2007, 2009-12; Second-Team - 2008).
- A seven-time Pro Bowl selection, Willis was the only rookie to earn All-Pro honors in 2007, as he was named the AP Defensive Rookie of the Year. He became the first 49ers defensive rookie to make the Pro Bowl and First-Team All-Pro since CB Ronnie Lott in 1981. He joined CB Bruce Taylor (1970), DT Dana Stubblefield (1993) and DT Bryant Young (1994) as 49ers who have won the Defensive Rookie of the Year award.
- Is one of just three defensive players since the merger in 1970 to be selected to the Pro Bowl in each of their first seven seasons.
- Became the first 49er since S Ronnie Lott to be selected to the Pro Bowl in each of his first four seasons. Willis has since become the first player in franchise history to be selected to the Pro Bowl in each of his first seven seasons.
- Is the only player in the NFL with at least 20.0 sacks (20.5), 15 FFs (16) and 8 INTs (8) since 2007.

1. Lawrence Taylor	10	1981-90
2. Derrick Thomas	9	1989-97
3. Patrick Willis	7	2007-13

- Was named Defensive Rookie of the Month for October 2007 after totaling 43 tackles, and for December after amassing 53 stops, 3.0 sacks, 1 FF and 1 PD.
- In 112 starts, Willis has tallied 10-or-more tackles in 70 games and 20-or-more stops in 5 contests.
- Was one of three NFL rookies (49ers T Joe Staley and Browns T Joe Thomas) in 2007 to line up for every single snap.
- According to statistics compiled by Elias Sports Bureau, his 174 total tackles in 2007 led the NFL by more than 30 tackles, his 141 stops in 2008 ranked 2nd (behind Browns D'Qwell Jackson's 154 tackles) and his 152 tackles in 2009 ranked 1st. Finished with 128 tackles in 2010, ranking 9th in the NFL.

// 2014 HIGHLIGHTS

- Intercepted Cowboys QB Tony Romo in the endzone at Dal. (9/7). It marked his 8th career INT and 2nd on opening day [1 INT at Arz. (9/13/09)].
- Placed on the Injured Reserve List on 11/11 with a toe injury.

- Willis and his siblings were separated from his biological father when he was 16. He moved in with his guardians, the Finleys, who were in their 20's when they took in Patrick and his three other siblings. Chris Finley was a math teacher and Patrick's basketball coach in high school. Julie Finley taught 5th grade. He refers to Chris and Julie as mom and dad.

- Willis believes several of the jobs he held as a youth have made him into the hard-working person he is today. At the ripe age of 10, Patrick worked in a cotton field to help financially support his family. "My grandmother got me a job chopping cotton. I got $110 a week for chopping the weeds around the cotton so it could grow." Patrick's next job was in masonry, where he would mix mortar for the building of structures. He then worked alongside his father, who was a logger. "I would use a chainsaw and cut the limbs off. It was a pretty crazy job, I would get cut up all over." When Willis was a sophomore and junior in high school, he would perform general maintenance around the school, which included waxing all the floors on the property.
- Willis was a standout basketball player at Central High School, where he averaged close to 20 points and 10 rebounds per game throughout his career. An all-district, all-region and All-West Tennessee selection, Willis played every position on the court and was named the district's Most Valuable Player. It wasn't on the black-top where he crafted his game, but rather on the dirt in front of his house. At the age of 7, Willis, his brother and his dad constructed a basketball hoop from cedar planks. For the next 10 years, one could often find Willis and his family playing toe-to-toe on that very same hoop. "That's what kept me busy. We didn't have sport clubs, malls or movie theatres nearby. All we had was each other."
- Competition is what has driven Willis throughout his life. "I love to compete, no matter what sport it is. Basketball, baseball, football, golf, bowling, fishing, whatever. Basketball was my first love. I played everything, guard, forward, center. In baseball, I played everything too, except for catcher." Willis set the record for most home runs in his Little League. He started playing golf with his dad, Chris Finley, when he was 16. "Even though I'm not too good, I love to compete."
- One of Willis' biggest influences growing up was his uncle, Arthur Joe Willis, who was a professional light-heavyweight boxer from 1989-2000, and competed in 33 pro fights. Willis looked up to his uncle because he was able to make a name for himself as a successful boxer. Arthur matched up against James "Lights Out" Toney in 1990, and Toney later went on to beat former heavy-weight champion Evander Holyfield in 2003.

- Since moving to the Bay Area, Willis has been able to purchase a house of his own. "Buying my house in the Bay Area was awesome, truly a blessing. To grow up in a house like I grew up in and then now to have my real, own house that I can call home feels amazing. I'm truly grateful." Having his own house has served as a great place for his family to come and visit. Pat, being the leader he is both on the field and off, also uses his house to host team get-togethers to bring the guys closer together. "I think having get-togethers at my house, hanging out with teammates and getting to know them off-the-field is big. At the end of the day, one or two guys don't win as a team, three guys don't win as a team, the whole group does. And I think we've built a camaraderie hanging out like we did last year, having get-togethers, just bonding time because it's like family."
- Willis has a variety of tattoos, with each carrying its own special meaning. One of his most inspirational tattoos is the word 'Believe' on his forearm. "When a person says 'I think,' I feel that leaves room for doubt. If I want to do something, I want to 'believe' I can do it, not just think." Willis has three tear drop tattoos, which signify three significant people that have passed away in his life - his grandfather, uncle and brother.
- Tragedy struck Willis' family right before his senior year at Ole Miss. His brother, Detris, drowned in a swimming hole when he was just 17 years old. Detris was a talented FB/LB who was heading into his senior year at Central High School and was a Division I-A prospect. In memory of his late brother, Willis had the Superman shield tattooed on his chest. "We both loved Superman growing up. We were strong no matter what, but also had our weaknesses." Below Willis' Superman tattoo reads, "My brother shall rise again." "I believe someday when my time on earth is over, I'll see him again."
- In 2007 and 2009, Willis was named the recipient of the 49ers Bill Walsh Award. The Bill Walsh Award is voted on by the coaches and awarded to the 49ers team MVP. He is 1 of 3 players in franchise history to win the award twice (RB Frank Gore, DT Justin Smith).

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 7 SAN FRANCISCO 28, DALLAS 17 AT&T STADIUM

Four defensive takeaways and 21 points in the first half propelled the 49ers to a 28–17 victory over the Dallas Cowboys in the 2014 season–opener at AT&T Stadium. On just the third play of the game, LB Dan Skuta stripped RB DeMarco Murray causing the fumble, which was recovered and returned for a TD by CB Chris Culliver to give the 49ers an early 7–0 lead. Following the defensive score, Dallas regained possession and drove to the 49ers two yd. line before a sack by DT Justin Smith and an incomplete pass on 3rd down forced a 29–yd. FG by Dan Bailey to make the score 7–3. On the 49ers first offensive possession, QB Colin Kaepernick led a 3–play, 80–yd. drive which was capped off by a 29–yd. TD strike to TE Vernon Davis to give San Francisco a 14–3 lead with 5:54 left in the 1st qtr. On the next Dallas drive, S Eric Reid recorded his first INT of the season and returned it 48 yds. to the Cowboys 2–yd. line. Immediately after, Kaepernick found TE Davis for a 2–yd. score off the play–action, his second TD of the half, to give the 49ers a 21–3 lead with 4:25 remaining in the first qtr. After a quick strike from San Francisco, Dallas drove 75–yds. to open the 2nd qtr., but ran into the 49ers defense again. LB Patrick Willis intercepted Romo in the end zone for the defense’s 2nd pick of the game, keeping the Cowboys out of the end zone again. Following the turnover, the 49ers began at the 20–yd. line and drove 61–yds. before P Andy Lee pinned the Cowboys at the 2–yd. line. Four plays after the punt, Romo was intercepted again, this time by CB Perrish Cox, giving San Francisco its 4th takeaway of the game (3rd INT). Kaepernick countered with an impressive drive at the end of the half, including a 21–yd. strike to WR Stevie Johnson, which was capped off by a 4–yd. TD run by rookie RB Carlos Hyde to give the 49ers a 28–3 lead going into halftime. Following three consecutive punts to start the second half, Dallas put together an 87–yd. scoring drive, which was capped off by a 2–yd. run by Murray to bring the score to 28–10 with 0:29 seconds remaining in the 3rd qtr. San Francisco took the field at the start of the 4th qtr. but was forced to punt after a 37–yd. drive. On the ensuing possession, the 49ers defense forced its second three–and–out of the game. Following the missed FG attempt, Romo and the Dallas offense marched down the field on a 73–yd. scoring drive as Romo connected with Terrance Williams on a 2–yd. TD pass to cut the lead to 28–17. The Cowboys failed to recover the ensuing onside kick. The 49ers finished in victory formation as Kaepernick took two kneel downs to close out the 28–17 victory.

NOTES: RB Frank Gore rushed for 66 yds. on 16 carries, eclipsing the 10,000–yd. mark for his career. Gore now has 10,033 career rushing yards, becoming the 29th player in NFL history to rush for 10,000 or more yds. in a career, and just the 10th player to reach that mark while also playing 10 seasons with one team.... The 49ers offense converted 7 of 12 (58.3 pct.) 3rd–down attempts. The 58.3 pct. conversion rate on 3rd–down was the 3rd–highest by the team, since 2011 [6 of 9 (66.7 pct.) at Jax. (10/27/13); 7 of 11 (63.6 pct.) vs. Buf. (10/7/12)].... The 49ers scored 21 points in the first quarter, the most by the team in the first quarter since 12/18/95 vs. Min. (21 points). The 28 first half points scored by the 49ers are the most scored in a first half since 10/27/13 at Jax. (28 points).... TE Vernon Davis hauled in 2 TD passes from QB Colin Kaepernick in the 1st qtr. This marked Davis’ 7th career multi–TD game and 2nd on opening day [2 TDs vs. GB (9/8/13)].... RB Carlos Hyde became the first rookie to score on opening day since Vernon Davis in 2006 [at Arz. (9/10/06)], and finished the day with 7 carries for 50 yards and 1 TD.... The 49ers defense registered 4 takeaways in the first half (3 INTs, 1 FR), the most by the team in either half since 12/14/09 vs. Arz. [5 takeaways (2 INTs, 3 FRs) in the first half].... LB Dan Skuta forced a fumble of Dallas RB DeMarco Murray on the first drive of the season. The loose ball was picked up by CB Chris Culliver and returned 35 yds. for a TD. It marked the 2nd FF of Skuta’s career and Culliver’s 2nd career FR and first career TD. The last time the 49ers registered a defensive TD as the first TD in Week 1, was against the Baltimore Colts (9/15/68) when DE Stan Hindman had a 25–yd. INT return for a TD.... S Eric Reid registered his 5th career INT and returned it 48 yds. to the Cowboys 2–yd. line. Reid has now recorded an INT in each of his two season openers.... Both CB Perrish Cox and LB Patrick Willis notched an INT in the first half. The INT was Willis’ second career INT on opening day [1 INT at Arz. (9/13/09)].... DT Justin Smith brought down Romo twice on day, marking his first multi–sack game since 11/25/13 at Was. (2.0 sacks). This marked the eighth time Smith has registered a sack on opening day. It also marks Smith’s 3rd multi–sack game on opening day [3.0 at KC (9/10/06); 2.0 vs. Sea. (9/11/11)].

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 14 CHICAGO 28, SAN FRANCISCO 20 LEVI'S® STADIUM

San Francisco enjoyed a strong start to its first ever game at Levi's® Stadium but couldn't sustain the early momentum and fell to Chicago, 28–20, on NBC's Sunday Night Football. After the 49ers defense forced a quick three–and–out on the opening drive, rookie LB Aaron Lynch blocked Bears P Pat O'Donnell's punt to give San Francisco the ball at Chicago's 8–yd. line. Two plays later, San Francisco's offense capitalized on the turnover when QB Colin Kaepernick found WR Michael Crabtree for a 3–yd. TD, giving the 49ers an early 7–0 lead. On the ensuing possession, the 49ers clamped down on defense and forced the Bears to punt for the second consecutive drive. Kaepernick and company countered with a steady, 14–play, 72–yd. drive that resulted in three points as K Phil Dawson connected on a 27–yd. FG to give the team a 10–0 lead with 2:48 remaining in the first quarter. Unable to turn takeaways into points, Chicago was forced to punt for the fifth consecutive drive. On the ensuing possession, Kaepernick was stripped by DE Jared Allen and the football was recovered by S Danny McCray at the Chicago 20–yd. line. But the 49ers defense continued its stellar play, forcing its second three–and–out of the first half to regain possession. The 49ers offense took over at the Chicago 30–yd. line following a 19–yd. punt return by rookie WR Bruce Ellington. After Kaepernick connected with TE Derek Carrier across the middle for 22 yds., RB Frank Gore found his way into the end zone on an 8–yd. carry, his first TD of the season, to give the 49ers a 17–0 lead with 2:27 to play in the quarter. With a few minutes remaining, QB Jay Cutler and the Bears orchestrated a 7–play, 80–yd. drive capped off by a 17–yd. TD pass from Cutler to WR Brandon Marshall to cut the lead to 17–7 at the half. San Francisco received the ball to begin the second half and quickly went to work. Kaepernick connected on two throws of 20–plus yds. as the 49ers marched down the field on a 14–play, 84–yd. drive, which was capped off by a 24–yd. FG by Dawson. Chicago's offense responded with an 80–yd. drive of its own that saw Cutler connect with Marshall for the second time of the game on a 5–yd. TD pass at the beginning of the 4th qtr. to make the game 20–14. On the next drive, Kaepernick was intercepted for the second time of the game by CB Kyle Fuller, who returned the ball to San Francisco's 6–yd. line. On the following play, Cutler found TE Martellus Bennett in the end zone to give Chicago a 21–20 lead with 13:17 remaining in the 4th qtr. On the ensuing possession, Kaepernick was intercepted by Fuller again on a deep pass intended for Carrier. Chicago began its next possession at San Francisco's 42–yd. line and scored its fourth TD on a 3–yd. pass from Cutler to Marshall to give the Bears a 28–20 lead with 6:55 left in the game. The 49ers drove the ball inside the red zone on their final possession, but failed to punch it in the end zone on 4th down as Kaepernick and Crabtree could not connect for the score.

NOTES: The 49ers offense converted 7–of–13 (53.8%) 3rd down atts. vs. Chi. This marks the second time under Jim Harbaugh that the team has converted at least 50 pct. of its 3rd down atts. in consecutive games [7–of–12 (58.3%) at Dal. (9/7/14)]. The last time the 49ers converted at least 50 pct. of their 3rd down atts. in consecutive games was 10/20/13 at Ten. [8–of–16 (50.0%)] and 10/27/13 at Jax. [6–of–9 (66.7%)].... T Joe Staley started his 100th game with the 49ers, becoming the 20th offensive lineman in franchise history to have played in 100–or–more games.... WR Michael Crabtree registered his first TD recept. of the season and 23rd of his career on a 3–yd. pass from QB Colin Kaepernick. It marked the first TD in Levi's® Stadium history.... RB Frank Gore found the end zone with an 8–yd. TD run, marking his first TD of the season and 61st of his career.... TE Derek Carrier notched his first career recept. on a 22–yd. pass from QB Kaepernick. He finished the game with 3 receipts. for 41 yds.... On the first series of the game, LB Aaron Lynch blocked a punt by P Patrick O'Donnell, giving the 49ers the ball at the Bears 8–yd. line. It marked the first blocked punt by the 49ers since WR Kassim Osgood blocked P Jon Ryan's punt vs. Sea. (12/18/13).... DT Justin Smith registered 1.0 sack of Bears QB Jay Cutler. It marked his 3rd of the season and 85th of his career. His 3.0 sacks are tied for the most he's had through the first two games of a season in his career (2006).

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 21

ARIZONA 23, SAN FRANCISCO 14

UNIVERSITY OF PHOENIX STADIUM

San Francisco fell to NFC West rival Arizona, 23-14, in a tightly contested battle at the University of Phoenix Stadium on Sunday. On the game's opening possession, the 49ers defense thwarted a 7-play, 47-yd. drive by the Cardinals offense, which resulted in a 51 FG by Chandler Catanzaro. QB Colin Kaepernick led the 49ers offense on the ensuing drive, completing 7-of-7 passes for 61 yds., including a 2-yd. TD strike to WR Michael Crabtree. The score marked the third consecutive game in which San Francisco scored a touchdown on its opening possession, which leads the NFL. Following the score, the Cardinals countered with a 17-play, 66-yd. drive of their own but were forced to settle for a 32 FG after the 49ers defense held up inside their own 20-yd. line. The FG cut the score to 7-6 with 13:42 left in the 2nd qtr. Picking up where they left off, the 49ers offense pieced together a 14-play, 80-yd. drive that saw RB Carlos Hyde find the end zone on a 6-yd. TD run for the second time this season. Kaepernick finished the first half with a career-tying high 14 pass completions. Following a San Francisco punt to begin the 3rd qtr., Arizona started at its own 15-yd. line and capped off a 7-play, 85-yd. drive with a 24-yd. TD pass from Stanton to WR John Brown. Another defensive stop by the Cardinals setup a 66-yd. drive that saw Stanton connect with Brown on a 21-yd. TD pass for the duo's second score of the game. With the score 20-14 in favor of the Cardinals, the 49ers took over at their own 20-yd. line with 4:39 remaining in the 3rd qtr. Kaepernick connected on 8-of-8 throws, including a team-high 32-yd. pass to WR Stevie Johnson, but the 49ers were unable to produce points after Arizona's DT Tommy Kelly blocked a 45 FG att. by K Phil Dawson. San Francisco regained possession 13 plays later, when LB Michael Wilhoite stripped WR Larry Fitzgerald and the fumble was recovered by CB Perrish Cox. It marked the first forced fumble of Wilhoite's career and Cox's first fumble recovery of his career. Arizona, however, forced a punt and capitalized on its next drive with a 35 FG by Catanzaro to extend its lead to 23-14, with just 29 seconds remaining in the game.

NOTES: On the 49ers first series of the game, QB Colin Kaepernick led the 49ers on a 12 play, 80-yd. TD drive. Kaepernick completed 7-of-7 pass atts., for 61 yds., including a 3-yd. TD pass to WR Michael Crabtree This marked the third consecutive game that the 49ers offense scored a TD on their opening drive of the game. According to the Elias Sports Bureau, the last time the 49ers scored a TD on their opening drive in three consecutive games was 2003 (10/19/03 vs. TB, 10/26/03 at Arz. And 11/2/03 vs. StL) Kaepernick completed 29 of 37 atts. for 245 yds, 1 TD and a QB rating of 103.3 Kaepernick's 29 comps. set a new career high. His previous career high was 27 [vs. GB (9/8/13)]. His 78.4 comp. pct. also set a new career high [18 of 23 (78.3 pct.) vs. Mia (12/9/12)] Kaepernick completed his first 9 pass atts., setting a new career high. His previous career high was 7 [at TB (12/15/13)] WR Michael Crabtree scored a TD on 2-yd. TD pass from Kaepernick. Crabtree has now scored 7 TDs against Arz. in his career, the most against any team WR Stevie Johnson hauled in 9 receipts. for 103 yds., marking his first 100-yd. game as a member of the 49ers and his first since 9/15/13 (8 receipts. for 111 yds. and 1 TD vs. Car.), as a member of the Buffalo Bills Rookie RB Carlos Hyde scored on a 6-yd. TD run, marking his 2nd career TD LB Michael Wilhoite stripped the ball from Cardinals WR Larry Fitzgerald deep in 49ers territory. The fumble was recovered by CB Perrish Cox. It marked Wilhoite's first career FF and Cox's first career FR.

PHILADELPHIA 21, SAN FRANCISCO 26

LEVI'S® STADIUM

The San Francisco 49ers defeated the Philadelphia Eagles, 26–21, to give the franchise its first win at Levi's® Stadium. On the second drive of the game, Philadelphia TE Trey Burton blocked P Andy Lee's punt in the end zone and the ball was recovered by WR Brad Smith for a touchdown. QB Colin Kaepernick and the 49ers countered with a 14–play, 69–yd. drive that ended with a 29–yd. FG by K Phil Dawson. With the score 7–3, San Francisco took over with 1:31 remaining in the 1st qtr. Kaepernick capped off a 5–play, 80–yd. drive with a 55–yd. TD pass to RB Frank Gore. The score was the longest receipt. of Gore's career and the longest by a 49ers RB since 12/12/10. On San Francisco's next drive, Kaepernick's pass intended for WR Brandon Lloyd was intercepted by S Malcolm Jenkins and returned 53 yds. for a TD, giving the Eagles a 14–10 lead with 12:16 remaining in the 2nd qtr. On the 49ers' ensuing punt, Eagles RB Darren Sproles returned the ball 82 yds. for a TD. Two drives later, however, San Francisco orchestrated a late 2nd qtr. drive that was capped off by a 51 FG by Dawson to bring the score to 21–13 at the end of the first half. On the Eagles opening drive of the 3rd qtr., S Antoine Bethea stripped TE Zach Ertz and the fumble was recovered by CB Perrish Cox at the Eagles 23–yd. line. The FF was Bethea's first of the season and 6th of his career, and Cox's second FR of the season. San Francisco capitalized on the great field position with a 12–yd. TD strike from Kaepernick to WR Stevie Johnson, who eclipsed the 4,000–yd. mark for his career on the catch. Following a three–and–out by the Eagles offense, the 49ers orchestrated a 6–play, 36–yd. drive that ended with a 46–yd. FG by Dawson to bring the score to 23–21. On the next drive, QB Nick Foles' pass intended for WR Jeremy Maclin was intercepted by Bethea at the 49ers 26–yd. line. Bethea became the first 49ers player to register both an INT and FF in a game since LB NaVorro Bowman at Arz. (12/29/13). Two drives later, San Francisco took over at its 41–yd. line and ended the 10–play, 46–yd. effort with Dawson's 4th FG of the day, a 31 FG to give the 49ers a 26–21 lead with 6:38 remaining in the 4th qtr. It marked the first time Dawson has made four–plus FGs since 12/15/13 (at TB). On the Eagles ensuing drive, Foles and company drove down to the 49ers 1–yd. line, but the defense held them out of the end zone, forcing a turnover on downs. The Eagles had one more chance on offense, but CB Perrish Cox sealed the win with an INT with 40 seconds remaining in the game. Gore finished the day with 119 yds. on 24 carries while adding 1 recept. for 55 yds. and 1 TD. He has rushed for 100 yds.–or–more in 4 of his last 5 game against Phi.

NOTES: The 49ers offense amassed 407 net yds., marking the first time its recorded 400–plus offensive net yds. since gaining 494 yds. (90 rushing, 202 passing) vs. GB (9/8/13).... The 49ers offense held the ball for 42:17, which was the highest time of possession for the team since 11/20/11 vs. Arz. (44:16).... RB Frank Gore rushed for 119 yds. on 24 carries while adding 1 recept. for 55 yds. and 1 TD. He has rushed for 100 yds.–or–more in 4 of his last 5 game against Phi. This marked Gore's 36th career 100–yd. game and his first since 12/8/13 (110 yds. vs. Sea.). His 36 career 100–yd. games ranks 2nd among all active players.... Gore hauled in a 55–yd. TD pass from QB Colin Kaepernick, marking the longest receipt. of Gore's career and the longest by a 49ers RB since 12/12/10 (RB Brian Westbrook – 62–yd TD receipt. vs. Sea.).... Kaepernick completed 17 of 30 atts. for 218 yds., 2 TDs, 1 INT and a QB rating of 87.9.... Kaepernick added 7 rush atts. for 58 yds. (8.3 avg.). This marked just the 3rd time in franchise history that a QB rushed for 50+ yds. in three consecutive games and the first time since 1992.... On his 12–yd. TD receipt. in the 3rd qtr., WR Stevie Johnson eclipsed the 4,000–yd. mark for his career. It marked his 1st TD of the season.... The 22 rushing yds. allowed by the 49ers defense was the 9th fewest allowed in a single game in franchise history.... S Antoine Bethea tallied his 1st FF of the season and 6th of his career. The ball was recovered by CB Perrish Cox, marking his 2nd FR of the season.... Betha registered his 1st INT of the season and 15th of his career. He became the first 49ers player to register an INT and FF in the same game since LB NaVorro Bowman [at Arz. (12/29/13)].... Betha started his 100th consecutive game, the longest active streak by a S in the NFL.... Cox tallied 1 INT, 1 FR and a career–high 4 passes defended. Cox registered his 2nd INT of the season and 3rd of his career, picking off Eagles QB Nick Foles late in the 4th qtr to seal the victory.... CB Chris Culliver registered his 1st FF of his career. DT Justin Smith recovered the fumble, marking his 1st FR of the season and 10th of his career.... NT Ian Williams sacked Eagles QB Nick Foles late in the 4th qtr., marking his first career sack.... K Phil Dawson connected on all four FG atts. It marked the first time Dawson has made 4+ FGs since at TB (12/15/13).

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 5 KANSAS CITY 17, SAN FRANCISCO 22 LEVI'S® STADIUM

The San Francisco 49ers prevailed over the Kansas City Chiefs, 22–17, in a tightly contested game at Levi's® Stadium. On the opening drive of the game, QB Alex Smith led the Kansas City offense on a 12–play, 81–yd. drive that was capped off by a 2–yd. TD pass to TE Travis Kelce. Down 7–0, the 49ers responded with a 10–play, 59–yd. drive, which included an 18–yd. strike from QB Colin Kaepernick to WR Anquan Boldin, that ended with a 31 FG by K Phil Dawson. Following a 42 FG by K Cairo Santos to give the Chiefs a 10–3 lead, Dawson connected on a 55 FG, his longest connection of the season and t–3rd longest made FG of his career. San Francisco orchestrated a 13–play, 93–yd. drive in the 2nd qtr. that resulted in a 9–yd. TD pass from Kaepernick to WR Stevie Johnson. The 93–yd. drive was the longest by the 49ers since 11/19/12 vs. Chi. and marked the second consecutive game in which Johnson has recorded a TD recept.. Following a three–and–out by the 49ers to open the 3rd qtr., Chiefs' D. Thomas scored on a 17–yd. TD run to give Kansas City a 17–13 lead. On the ensuing possession, San Francisco drove 43 yds. and called on the stout play of Dawson, who connected on a 52 FG to bring the score within one. It marked the 4th time in Dawson's career that he's made two–or–more FGs of 50–plus yds. in a game. The 49ers began the 4th qtr. at their own 27–yd. line and pieced together a 71–yd. drive, which included a 29–yd. pass from Kaepernick to a leaping WR Brandon Lloyd. The drive was kept alive with a converted fake punt at the 49ers 29–yd. line as S Craig Dahl gained 3–yds. up the middle on 4th and 1. Dawson capped off the drive with a 27 FG through the uprights to give San Francisco a late 19–17 lead. The Chiefs were unable to respond as the 49ers defense buckled down and forced yet another three–and–out with 8:42 left to play in the game. On the very next drive, San Francisco took 4:58 off the clock on a drive that ended with a 30 FG by Dawson. His five FGs are tied for the 2nd most he's converted in a single game in his career. The Chiefs took over at their own 20–yd. line with 2:12 left in the game. On the second play, CB Perrish Cox sealed Kansas City's final chance with an INT with 2:00 left to play. It marked his 3rd INT of the season and his 2nd consecutive game with a victory–sealing INT on the opponent's final possession.

NOTES: The 49ers offense did not commit a turnover against the Chiefs, marking the 3rd game this season in which the team hasn't committed a turnover [at Dal. (9/7) and at Arz. (9/21)]. The +1 turnover differential on the day marked the 4th game this season in which the team has won the turnover battle [+4 at Dal. (9/7); +1 at Arz. (9/21); +3 vs. Phi. (9/28)].... The 49ers improved to 30–4–1 under head coach Jim Harbaugh, and 3–1 this season when winning the turnover battle.... RB Frank Gore had 18 carries for 107 yds., marking his 37th career game with 100–or–more rushing yds., the 2nd most among all active players in the NFL. Gore rushed for 100–or–more yds. in consecutive weeks [119 yds. vs. Phi. (9/28/14)] for the first time since registering five consecutive 100–yd. games in 2011 [10/2/11–11/6/11].... QB Colin Kaepernick completed 14 of 26 pass atts. for 201 yds., 1 TD and a passer rating of 90.2. He has now thrown at least one TD pass in 12 straight games, the 4th longest streak by a quarterback in franchise history [Steve Young – 18: (10/9/94 – 11/26/95); Steve Young – 15: (9/6/98 – 12/27/98); Jeff Garcia – 15: (12/3/00 – 12/2/01); John Brodie – 13: (12/29/70 – 11/14/71)].... Kaepernick's 9–yd. TD pass to WR Stevie Johnson capped off a 13–play, 93–yd. drive. This marked the longest TD drive by the 49ers since 11/19/12 vs. Chi. (8–play, 96 yds. – 14–yd. TD run by RB Kendall Hunter) and Johnson's 2nd consecutive game with a TD recept. It marked the first time he caught a TD in back–to–back games since vs. NE (9/9/13) and vs. Car. (9/16/13), as a member of the Buffalo Bills.... The 49ers converted on 4th down by running a fake punt, which was a direct snap to S Craig Dahl. Dahl rushed for 3 yds. to pick up the first down. It marked his first career carry and led to a 27–yd. FG by K Phil Dawson.... Dawson connected on all 5 FG atts. His 55–yd. FG marked the longest FG by Dawson this season and is tied for the 3rd longest made FG of his career.... Dawson's 5 made FGs are tied for the 2nd most he's made in a single game in his career.... It marked the 4th time in his career Dawson has made two or more FGs of 50+ yds. in a game and the first time since 2012.... It marked the 2nd time in his career that he made 4–or–more FGs in consecutive games after making 4 of 4 last week vs. Phi. CB Perrish Cox registered an INT of Chiefs QB Alex Smith late in the game to seal the win for the 49ers. It marked his 3rd INT of the season and his 2nd consecutive game with a victory–sealing INT on the opponent's final possession. DT Justin Smith registered his 2nd FF of the season and 15th of his career, stripping the ball from Chiefs RB Jamaal Charles.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 13 SAN FRANCISCO 31, ST. LOUIS 17 EDWARD JONES DOME

The 49ers defeated the Rams on ESPN's Monday Night Football, 31–17, at the Edward Jones Dome in St. Louis, extending their winning streak to three games. On the opening drive of the game, QB Austin Davis led the Rams 80 yds. on 11 plays that resulted in a 1–yd. TD run by RB Benny Cunningham. On the Rams' third possession, Davis connected with TE Lance Kendricks for a 22–yd. TD pass to give St. Louis an early 14–0 lead. Following consecutive sacks by LB Dan Skuta on the Rams next offensive possession, St. Louis was forced to punt with 8:11 remaining in the 2nd qtr. The 49ers capitalized on the change of possession with their first score of the game, a 54 FG by K Phil Dawson. With 0:27 seconds left in the 2nd qtr., QB Colin Kaepernick threw an 80–yd. TD pass to WR Brandon Lloyd to bring the score to 14–10 heading into halftime. It marked the longest pass of Kaepernick's career and was the first pass play of 80–or–more yds. by the 49ers since Lloyd's TD recept. from QB Tim Rattay on 9/25/05 vs. Dal. On the opening drive of the 3rd qtr., Kaepernick picked up where he left off, finding WR Anquan Boldin for an 11–yd. TD pass to give San Francisco its first lead of the game. It marked Boldin's league–leading 10th career TD on Monday Night Football. Three possessions later, the 49ers offense took over and orchestrated its third–consecutive TD drive of the game with a 32–yd. TD pass from Kaepernick to WR Michael Crabtree, which capped off a 7–play, 78–yd. drive. With 4:19 remaining in the 4th qtr., the Rams drove 46 yds. and connected on a 38 FG by Greg Zuerlein to bring the score to 24–17. On the next Rams drive, CB Dontae Johnson intercepted Davis' pass intended for WR Kenny Britt and returned it 20 yds. for a TD to seal the victory. Head coach Jim Harbaugh improved his record to 40–13–1, becoming the seventh coach to have won at least 75 pct. of his games at time of 40th career win.

NOTES: Head coach Jim Harbaugh improved his record to 40–13–1. According to the Elias Sports Bureau, Harbaugh became the 7th coach to have won at least 75 pct. of his games at time of 40th career win. ST. LOUIS 13, SAN FRANCISCO 10

LEVI'S® STADIUM

The 49ers dropped a hard-fought battle to the St. Louis Rams in the waning seconds of the game. San Francisco's offense struck early on its first drive of the game with a 34 FG by K Phil Dawson. Two possessions later, St. Louis tied the score at 3-3 following a 37 FG by K Greg Zuerlein. After a three-and-out to begin the 2nd qtr., 49ers S Antoine Bethea intercepted QB Austin Davis' pass intended for WR Tavon Austin at the Rams 35-yd. line. Soon after, QB Colin Kaepernick connected with WR Anquan Boldin on a 27-yd. TD reception to extend San Francisco's lead to 10-3. On the Rams' ensuing drive, Davis' pass intended for WR Kenny Britt was sniffed out by CB Perrish Cox and intercepted at the 49ers' 29-yd. line. It marked Cox's 4th INT of the season and 5th of his career. Three drives later, St. Louis regained possession and drove 15 yds. before Davis found Britt in the end zone for a 15-yd. TD with 0:55 seconds remaining in the first half. San Francisco failed to turn the final drive of the 2nd qtr. into points after Dawson missed a 55-yd. FG as time expired in the first half. In the 3rd qtr., Boldin hauled in his 4th recept. of the game, becoming one of 17 players in NFL history to haul in 900 receptions, accomplishing the feat in the third-fewest amount of games. Following the scoreless 3rd qtr., the Rams took over at the 49ers' 29-yd. line with 7:37 left in the game. San Francisco's defense prevented St. Louis from converting a red zone touchdown and forced Zuerlein to settle on a 39-yd. FG to give the Rams a 13-10 lead with 5:30 left in the 4th qtr. Following two, three-and-outs, the 49ers regained possession with 3:11 left in the game. San Francisco drove 87 yds. to the Rams' 1-yd. line, but Kaepernick was unable to produce the go-ahead TD after fumbling the ball on 3rd down. The Rams ran out the remaining seconds of the game.

NOTES: QB Colin Kaepernick completed 22 of 33 pass atts. for 237 yds. and 1 TD. He has now thrown at least one TD pass in 15 straight games, tied for the 2nd longest streak by a quarterback in franchise history. [Steve Young - 18: (10/9/94 - 11/26/95); Steve Young - 15: (9/6/98 - 12/27/98); Jeff Garcia - 15: (12/3/00 - 12/2/01); John Brodie - 13: (12/29/70 - 11/14/71) WR Anquan Boldin recorded 6 receipts. for 93 yds. and 1 TD, giving him 902 career receipts. He is one of only 17 players in NFL history to reach 900 career receipts., doing so in the 3rd fewest games (164 games). With 540 rec. yds. this season, Boldin is now one of 22 players in NFL history to register 12 seasons with 500-or-more rec. yds. He is also one of 10 players to reach that mark in 12 straight seasons and one of only four players to do it in each of his first 12 seasons, joining WR Jerry Rice, WR Terrell Owens and WR Randy Moss According to the Gamebook Statistics, LB Chris Borland registered 18 tackles. His 18 tackles are the most by any player in a single game this season, according to the Gamebook Statistics. It also marked the highest total tackles by the 49ers since LB Patrick Willis notched 18 tackles vs. Atl. (12/23/13) CB Perrish Cox registered an INT in the 2nd qtr. It marked his 4th INT of the season and 5th of his career S Antoine Bethea registered his 2nd INT of the season and 16th of his career, picking off Rams QB Austin Davis early in the 2nd qtr. The takeaway led to a TD pass from Kaepernick to Boldin LB Aaron Lynch registered his 2nd career sack, bringing down Rams Davis for a 3-yd. loss.

SAN FRANCISCO 27, NEW ORLEANS 24 (OT)

MERCEDES-BENZ SUPERDOME

A late-game sack and forced fumble by LB Ahmad Brooks setup a game-winning FG in overtime by K Phil Dawson, as the 49ers defeated the Saints, 27-24, at the Mercedes-Benz Superdome. On the opening drive of the game, QB Drew Brees' pass intended for WR Marques Colston was picked off by S Antoine Bethea and returned to the Saints' 19-yd. line. Three plays later, RB Frank Gore scored from four yards out to give the 49ers an early 7-0 lead. On the drive, Gore moved past RBs Eddie George and Tiki Barber for the 24th most rushing yds. in NFL history. A three-and-out by the Saints gave San Francisco the ball at its own 21-yd. line. The 49ers offense pieced together a 13-play, 79-yd. drive that was capped off by a 9-yd. TD run by RB Carlos Hyde. With the 49ers leading 14-0, the Saints responded with a scoring drive of their own as K Shayne Graham connected on a 40 FG to make the score 14-3. Early in the 2nd qtr., Brees found WR Brandin Cooks for a 31-yd. TD pass to bring the score to 14-10. San Francisco's offense countered with a 15-yd. TD pass from QB Colin Kaepernick to WR Anquan Boldin to extend his streak of at least one TD pass to 16 consecutive games, the 2nd longest streak by a QB in franchise history. Boldin recorded 6 recpts. for 95 rec. yds. and 1 TD, and now has 635 recpt. yds. this season, becoming one of 12 players in NFL history to register 12 seasons with 600-or-more rec. yds. Both teams exchanged punts before the Saints drove down to the 49ers 22-yd. line, where CB Chris Culliver picked off Brees' pass in the end zone to close the first half. On New Orleans' second drive of the 3rd qtr., Brees led the Saints offense on a 10-play, 64-yd. drive and found TE Jimmy Graham for an 11-yd. TD. With the 49ers leading 21-17 late in the game, Brees connected with Graham for the duo's 2nd TD of the game to give the Saints a 24-21 lead with 1:55 remaining. Unable to gain ground on its first three plays, San Francisco's offense faced a critical 4th-and-10 on its own 22-yd. line. Kaepernick scrambled to his right and found WR Michael Crabtree on a 51-yd. reception. Three plays later, K Phil Dawson kicked the game-tying FG from 45 yds. out to send the game into overtime. After both teams failed to score points on their first drives, the Saints regained possession with 7:43 left in OT. On 2nd-and-15, Brooks sacked and stripped Brees and the fumble was recovered by LB Chris Borland. On the ensuing play, Dawson kicked a game-winning, 35-yd. FG to give the 49ers the victory on the road.

NOTES: The 49ers improved to 20-9 on the road in the regular season under head coach Jim Harbaugh. The 49ers .690 winning pct. on the road since 2011 ranks first in the NFL over that time span. Harbaugh became the 2nd fastest head coach to reach 20 road victories in franchise history, reaching the mark in just 29 games ... With 5:28 remaining in overtime, LB Ahmad Brooks sacked and stripped the ball from Saints QB Drew Brees deep in Saints territory. LB Chris Borland recovered the loose ball on the Saints 17-yd. line. On the ensuing play, K Phil Dawson nailed a 35-yd. FG to give the 49ers the win. This marked the 49ers first overtime victory since 11/14/10 vs. StL (won 23-20). Brooks now has 4.0 sacks on the season, 39.0 for his career. It also marked his first FF of the season and 11th of his career. For Borland, it marked his first career FR. Trailing 21-24 with 1:34 left in regulation and the 49ers facing a 4th-and-10, QB Colin Kaepernick connected with WR Michael Crabtree on a 51-yd. reception to the Saints 27-yd. line. That play set up the game-tying, 45-yd. FG by Dawson. The 51-yd. recpt. by Crabtree marked his longest reception of the season ... Kaepernick hooked up with WR Anquan Boldin on a 15-yd. TD pass ... Kaepernick completed 14 of 32 pass atts. for 210 yds. and 1 TD. He has now thrown at least one TD pass in 16 straight games, the 2nd longest streak by a quarterback in franchise history. [Steve Young - 18: (10/9/94 - 11/26/95)] ... Boldin recorded 6 recpts. for 95 rec. yds. and 1 TD. He now has 635 rec. yds. this season, becoming one of 12 players in NFL history to register 12 seasons with 600-or-more rec. yds. He is also one of only five players in NFL history to reach the mark in 12 straight seasons, and one of only two players to do it in each of his first 12 seasons, joining WR Jerry Rice ... RB Frank Gore had 23 carries for 81 yds. and 1 TD, marking his 2nd rushing TD of the season and 62nd of his career. The 49ers improved to 38-7-1 when Gore has 20-or-more carries in a single game ... Gore moved past RBs Eddie George and Tiki Barber for the 24th most rushing yds. in NFL history ... RB Carlos Hyde added 4 carries for 36 yds. (9.0 avg.) and 1 TD ... S Antoine Bethea picked off Brees on the opening drive of the game. Bethea now has 3 INTs on the season and 17 for his career. This marks the 3rd time in his career that he registered an INT in consecutive games. [at Car. (10/28/07) & vs. NE (11/4/07); at Mia. (9/21/09) & at Arz. (9/27/09)]. CB Chris Culliver notched his first INT of the season, and 4th of his career, just before halftime. DT Quinton Dial registered his first career sack in overtime.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 16 SAN FRANCISCO 16, NEW YORK GIANTS 10 METLIFE STADIUM

A five-interception performance by San Francisco's defense helped propel the 49ers past the Giants, 16-10, at MetLife Stadium. The Giants capitalized on an early 49ers turnover on their opening drive when QB Eli Manning found TE Larry Donnell on a 19-yd. TD pass. Following the score, San Francisco drove 67 yds. on 11 plays before K Phil Dawson connected on a 31-yd. FG to bring the score to 7-3. San Francisco forced a three-and-out on New York's ensuing drive and responded with a 37 FG by Dawson. Down 6-7, LB Chris Borland intercepted Manning's pass intended for WR Odell Beckham and returned it 12 yds. to the Giants 29-yd. line. The turnover led to Dawson's third FG of the day, a 44-yd. FG, to give the 49ers a 9-7 lead with 7:34 left in the first half. On New York's next possession, Manning was intercepted by LB Michael Wilhoite at the 49ers 17-yd. line. Along with Borland, they became the first pair of 49ers LBs to register an INT in the same game since 11/12/95 at Carolina. The 49ers defense forced its second three-and-out of the game to open the second half. Two plays later, QB Colin Kaepernick threw a 48-yd. TD pass to WR Michael Crabtree, giving the 49ers a 16-7 advantage. It marked Crabtree's 26th career TD receipt. and 4th of the season. The Giants drove 34 yds. on their next possession and capped off the drive with a 34-yd. FG to make it a one possession game. The Giants successfully recovered an onside kick before S Eric Reid intercepted Manning's first pass of the drive. One drive later, San Francisco's defense held on a 4th-and-1 play to regain possession with 0:22 left in the 3rd qtr. With 13:59 left in the game, New York drove down to San Francisco's 32-yd. line before CB Chris Culliver intercepted Manning's pass intended for Randle. Following a 49ers punt, the Giants took over at the 6:18 mark and drove to the 49ers 4-yd. line. On 4th-and-goal, Manning and the Giants went for the go-ahead TD but failed to convert when Borland recorded his 2nd INT of the game, and 5th INT for the 49ers defense. It marked the first time the 49ers have notched 5-or-more INTs in a game since 11/12/09 vs. Chicago. Under head coach Jim Harbaugh, the 49ers improved to 21-9 on the road in the regular season. The team's .700 winning pct. is the best in the NFL over that time span.

NOTES: The 49ers improved to 21-9 on the road in the regular season under head coach Jim Harbaugh. San Francisco's .700 winning pct. on the road is the best in the NFL over that time span. SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 23

WASHINGTON 13, SAN FRANCISCO 17

LEVI'S® STADIUM

The 49ers used a five-sack performance to oust the Redskins, 17-13, at Levi's® Stadium to win their third-consecutive game and sweep the NFC East on the season. After a three-and-out to begin the game for the Redskins, the 49ers capitalized on good field position and drove 59 yds. on five plays and capped off the possession with a 30-yd. TD pass from QB Colin Kaepernick to WR Anquan Boldin. Up 7-0, San Francisco's defense recorded two sacks and held Washington scoreless in the 1st qtr. The Redskins began their second drive of the 2nd qtr. on their own 39-yd. line and put together a 10-play, 61-yd. drive that ended with a rushing TD by RB Alfred Morris to tie the game at 7-7 with 5:33 left to play in the half. San Francisco took advantage of their final drive of the quarter, marching 70 yds. on 12 plays before K Phil Dawson connected on a 41 FG to give the 49ers a 10-7 lead heading into halftime. With 4:49 remaining in the 3rd qtr., the Redskins tied the game with a 27-yd. FG by K Kai Forbath. Both teams exchanged possessions before Washington took over on San Francisco's 36-yd. line following a fumble recovery. The 49ers defense held the Redskins to a 46-yd. FG by Forbath. Down 10-13, San Francisco began its next drive on its own 25-yd. line. Kaepernick found Boldin for a 29-yd. reception before Redskins S Ryan Clark was flagged with a 15-yd. unnecessary roughness penalty. Two plays later with 3:03 remaining in the game, RB Carlos Hyde found the end zone for a 4-yd. game-winning TD to give the 49ers a late 17-13 lead. On the Redskins final drive, DT Justin Smith sacked and stripped QB Robert Griffin III and the ball was recovered by LB Ahmad Brooks.

SAN FRANCISCO 13, OAKLAND 24

O. CO COLISEUM

The 49ers fell to the Raiders at the O.co Coliseum, 13–24, dropping to 7–6 on the season. An opening takeaway by Oakland’s defense led to a 57–yd. FG by K Sebastian Janikowski to give the Raiders a 3–0 lead. Following consecutive punts by both teams, QB Colin Kaepernick led a 7–play, 60–yd. drive that was capped off by an 8–yd. TD pass to FB Bruce Miller. It marked Miller’s 1st TD recept. of the season and 2nd of his career. On Oakland’s next drive, QB Derek Carr threw a 3–yd. TD pass to T Donald Penn to regain the lead. On the final drive of the half, San Francisco’s offense began at its own 9–yd. line and drove 57 yds. before K Phil Dawson connected on a 52–yd. FG to tie the game at 10–10 heading into the 3rd qtr. Dawson’s 70.2 career FG percentage from 50–or–more yds. ranks 4th in NFL history. The 49ers defense forced a three–and–out to begin the second half, and the offense moved the ball 44 yds. on 9 plays before Dawson kicked the go–ahead FG from 20 yds. out. On the next Oakland possession, Carr found FB Marcel Reese on a 9–yd. TD pass to give the Raiders a 17–13 lead. Following a 49ers punt, Carr found the end zone for a second consecutive drive on a 5–yd. TD pass to TE Mychal Rivera to give the Raiders a 24–13 victory.

NOTES: QB Colin Kaepernick connected with FB Bruce Miller on an 8–yd. TD pass in the 1st qtr. It marked Miller’s 1st TD recept. of the season and 2nd of his career. It was his first TD recept. since his rookie season [at Was. (11/6/11)] ... SUNDAY, DECEMBER 14 SAN FRANCISCO 7, SEATTLE 17 CENTURYLINK FIELD

San Francisco dropped a tight, NFC West contest versus Seattle, 17–7, at CenturyLink Field. The Seahawks found points first on a 38–yd. FG by K Steven Hauschka in the 1st qtr. Down 3–0, the 49ers responded with a lengthy, 11–play, 85–yd. drive that was capped off by a 10–yd. TD run by RB Frank Gore. The TD marked Gore's third of the season and 63rd of his career. San Francisco's defense would not allow another point in the first half on its way to recording a season–high 3.0 sacks of QB Russell Wilson through the first two quarters. As time expired in the first half, S Eric Reid intercepted Wilson and returned the pick 73 yds. to retain the lead, 7–3, going into halftime. Following punts by both teams to begin the 3rd qtr., Seattle drove 60 yds. on 10 plays before RB Marshawn Lynch found the end zone on a 4–yd. TD run to give the Seahawks a 10–7 lead. The 49ers were unable to counter with a scoring drive of their own and were forced to punt on their next possession. On Seattle's opening drive of the 4th qtr., Wilson orchestrated a 6–play, 44–yd. drive that resulted in a 10–yd. TD pass to WR Paul Richardson to extend the Seahawks' lead, 17–7. Despite a 14–play, 55–yd. drive, the 49ers were unable to close the gap and fell to Seattle, 17–7. The 49ers defense finished the game recording 5.0 sacks, tying the season–high mark.

NOTES: The 49ers registered 5.0 sacks of Seahawks QB Russell Wilson, tying the single–game high for the team this season [5.0 sacks at StL (10/13/14); 5.0 sacks vs. Was. (11/23/14)] ... LB Ahmad Brooks registered 1.0 sack for 3 yds., marking his team–leading 6th sack of the season. He now has 41.0 sacks in his career ... LB Dan Skuta brought down Wilson for a 2–yd. loss. Skuta now has 4.0 sacks on the season and 4.5 for his career and has now registered a sack in back–to–back games for the first time in his career ... DT Ray McDonald registered 1.0 sack for 9 yds., marking his 3rd sack of the season. He now has 19.5 career sacks ... DT Tank Carradine registered 2.0 sacks of Wilson, marking his first, two career sacks ... As time expired in the first half, S Eric Reid intercepted Seahawks Wilson for his 3rd INT of the season and 7th of his career, and returned the pick 73 yds. Reid's 73 INT return yds. was the longest INT return of his career and the longest by the 49ers since LB NaVorro Bowman's 89–yd. INT return vs. Atl. (12/23/13) ... The 49ers rushed for 140 yds. and 1 TD on 32 carries (4.4 avg.) ... RB Frank Gore capped off an 11–play 85–yd. drive with a 10–yd. TD run on 4th and 1. This marked Gore's 3rd rushing TD of the season and 63rd of his career ... RB Carlos Hyde rushed for 55 yds. on 6 carries (9.2 avg.), setting a new single–game career high [50 yds. at Dal. (9/7/14)] ... FB Bruce Miller registered 4 repts., for 56 yds., tying his career high in both categories [4 repts. at Cin. (9/25/11); 4 repts. at TB (12/15/13)]; [56 rec. yds. at Jax. (10/27/13)].

Trent Baalke*Borland showing to be Baalke's exceptional exception

By Matt Maiocco

November 18, 2014

A lot of the principles 49ers general manager Trent Baalke applies to his evaluations of players was formed when he worked as a scout for two seasons in the late-1990s for Bill Parcells' New York Jets.

Parcells' believed all his players had to meet certain size standards, depending on the position. In addition, players at certain spots had to run speeds he believed would allow them to compete against NFL-caliber players.

And Parcells further believed if a personnel department started making exceptions in player acquisitions, pretty soon that organization would field a team full of exceptions. So any time a player did not fit a certain profile, there had to be a darn good reason to still go ahead and employ him.

And that's where Chris Borland comes in.

Borland is 5 foot 11. He has 29 1/4-inch arms. His time in the 40-yard dash was 4.78. His vertical leap was 31 inches. In short, he would not stand a chance on Parcells' draft board.

In fact, Baalke and Parcells spoke extensively about Borland around draft time, Baalke told CSNBayArea.com.

"Bill and I were talking about the draft, prior to the draft, and talking about different players," Baalke said. "He coached Dat Nguyen at Dallas. And when he first got there, for Bill, he was an exception. Coach liked his team to look a certain way by position. There were certain traits and characteristics that he wanted to see. So when he got to Dallas and Dat Nguyen was there, he didn't fit that profile."

Nguyen was also 5-11. But he had already been in the NFL for four seasons as a productive player by the time Parcells arrived in 2003 as Cowboys coach.

"At first, he probably wasn't his type of guy," Baalke said. "But as he got into the season and watched him play and saw how productive he was, Dat was an exception Bill was willing to make."

Baalke spoke to Parcells about Borland – a player both men acknowledged was not tall enough, did not have long enough arms and was not fast enough to warrant much consideration as an NFL draft pick.

But in Baalke's scouting of Borland, he ultimately became convinced Borland was worth an exception. He compared him to Nguyen and Zach Thomas, the seven-time Pro Bowl linebacker of the Miami Dolphins.

"You put on the film and they're always around the ball, making plays," Baalke said. "And he (Borland) is making plays in different ways: slipping blocks, playing off of blocks, beating blocks instinctually. And he's just one of those guys who was able to do it and do it at a high level in a very good conference, the Big-Ten."

Baalke had to work through any hesitancy there might be in selecting Borland, based on his conversations with Parcells.

"We talked about that principle," Baalke said. "Is this a guy you're willing to make an exception on? And if so, why? And the reason you make exceptions is because they're productive players at their position. They've proven they can overcome the limitations or liabilities that they have physically."

"So it was a good conversation and he put it all in perspective. We had a lot of discussions internally with respect to him. Could he play at the same level in the NFL, overcoming the limitations he has physically? And at the end of the day, our belief was that he could. And he's proven through the first few games as a starter that he's more than capable of doing that at a high level."

The 49ers already had seven-time Pro Bowl Patrick Willis and All-Pro NaVorro Bowman under contract for multiple seasons, but that did not matter. The 49ers selected Borland, an All-America and Big-Ten Defensive Player of the Year, in the third round with the No. 77 overall draft pick.

After taking over for Willis, who opted for season-ending toe surgery, Borland has been outstanding. Borland has recorded 18, 17 and 12 tackles in the past three games. He showed extraordinary quickness and determination in recovering a fumble against the New Orleans Saints that led directly to the winning field goal in overtime.

On Sunday, Borland demonstrated his instincts when he jumped a route in front of New York Giants wide receiver Odell Beckham to intercept Eli Manning's pass. He later added a second interception on a decisive goal-line stand after a deflection from cornerback Dontae Johnson, a fellow 49ers rookie.

"One thing that has become clear to us as a staff over the period we've been together evaluating talent is that the one constant with the linebacker position is if they make plays in college, they are generally going to step in and make plays at the NFL level," Baalke said.

"Guys who don't make plays but run fast and jump high, have all the characteristics physically that you're looking for but don't make any plays in college, generally come to the National Football League and don't make plays, either. It's a position where instincts matter a great deal, production matters a great deal, and the carryover from college to pro is usually very consistent."

Borland has proven, thus far, to be one exceptional exception.

Trent Baalke*The Intimidating Presence of 49ers GM Trent Baalke

By Greg A. Bedard

June 10, 2014

San Francisco's football boss has traded his stopwatch for a tailored suit, but the longtime scout remains a road warrior and a film study aficionado who refuses to waste time or tip his hand on what's next. But the man always has big plans

Inside his tidy and surprisingly small office at the 49ers' training facility, general manager Trent Baalke sits at a desk with his back to the practice fields and his eyes facing San Francisco's depth chart, which is laid out on a wall by positions and color-coded by contract situations for at least the next three years.

"You're not just looking at today, you're looking at tomorrow and the day after that and the day after that," says Baalke, who just last week signed still-unpolished quarterback Colin Kaepernick to a forward-thinking, pay-as-you-go six-year, $121-million contract. "You need a vision and you need it moving forward. In our minds we want to be at least a year ahead of the curve."

Though the former vice president of player personnel became the GM in January 2011, Baalke largely remains an enigma despite having pulled the strings for a franchise that has appeared in three straight NFC Championship Games (and gone to Super Bowl XLVII). Most inside the 49ers' headquarters are so intimidated by his presence that team president Paraag Marathe pleads with Baalke to attend happy hours that are thrown with the sole purpose of enhancing relations between the football and business sides of the organization.

Then there Baalke's perceived discord with coach Jim Harbaugh—his own hire, by the way—that stems from the fact that neither man has polished interpersonal skills. In NFL circles, Baalke likes to talk shop with the best and the brightest, but few walk away with a deep understanding of what he is all about. It doesn't appear that any of this has been cultivated by design.

Baalke simply remains a small-town Wisconsin boy at heart. He has spent much of his life in tiny outposts—he once served as a high school athletic director in Fargo, N.D.—and that relative solitude continued when he became ensconced in the nomadic life of an NFL scout, starting with the Jets in 1998.

At least part of his current success has to do with the fact that none of Baalke's competitors have any guesses about what he's up to. Whether it's the draft picks he's targeting (for example, trading up for right tackle Anthony Davis, safety Eric Reid and running back Carlos Hyde), or trades he might be considering (Bills receiver Stevie Johnson), or free agency plans (former Colts safety Antoine Bethea) or signing a young quarterback to a huge contract extension, very few of Baalke's moves can be anticipated because they're rarely—if ever—rumored beforehand.

"Not many people know him well," says Marathe, one of Baalke's closest friends within the franchise. "The benefit is that there's not many who know exactly what he's thinking, nor does he share it with anybody ... He knows what he wants and he's focused on getting that guy."

Baalke has done that as well as anyone in the NFL since 2010, when he began overseeing the 49ers' personnel department. Under his guiding hand, the 49ers' drafts have yielded standout starters such as Davis, Mike Iupati, NaVorro Bowman, Aldon Smith, Kaepernick and Reid. Since Baalke took over as general manager, the 49ers have gone 36-11-1.

"It's a very strong team and organization, and they're tough to beat, as we're witness to," Packers GM Ted Thompson says. "Just knowing him as a person, he's an honest guy that does his work and he watches the tape. He can discuss a player on different levels and I think he has a good eye for talent."

Thompson and Baalke are kindred spirits. Each in his own way is a loner who would rather be on the road scouting instead of pushing papers in an office. "The passion's in the hunt," Baalke says. "Finding guys that can be contributors at every level. Not just frontline guys, but within every level of your roster. Building it from top to bottom and bottom to top. There's an art to that."

The 49ers show no signs of slowing down. They possessed six of the top 100 picks this year's draft, and Baalke's wheeling and dealing kept the 49ers looking down the road. He turned San Francisco's 56th, 61st and 94th selections into the 57th, 70th, 106th, 150th and 180th picks, a fourth-round pick in 2015 and Bills receiver Stevie Johnson.

"I've heard the phrase, They have too many picks. They all can't possibly make the team," Baalke says. "Our mentality is you can never have enough picks. Our job is to create the most competitive team, the most competitive environment that we can possibly create, and there's no better way than to draft good players. And that's not to say that every pick you make is going to pan out, because that's not reality. Anyone that thinks differently has probably never sat in this chair."

Of all the executives who have ever sat on the throne of an NFL front office, you'd be hard-pressed to find another with a background as varied as Baalke's.

He grew up in Rosendale, Wis., one of those one-stoplight farming towns west of Lake Winnebago, and he did several lunch-pail jobs, from working in cornfields as a 10 year old to canning vegetables on an assembly line and making paint rollers as a teenager. After starring in football at Laconia High School, he earned a partial scholarship to play outside linebacker at Bemidji State in Minnesota. After college, he worked in construction and as a teacher before returning to football at North Dakota State, where he was the strength and defensive line coach.

In 1995, content with a young family and unable to get a Division I job, he left football to become a high school athletic director. He was also considering an offer to work in finance when Jets general manager Dick Haley happened to call out of the blue. On the recommendation of scout Lionel Vital (now the Falcons' director of player personnel), Haley asked Baalke to interview for a scouting position. Thirteen years later Baalke became general manager of the 49ers.

"He's intelligent and worldly beyond his years, and he has a much deeper résumé than what you would think," Marathe says. "Everything he had done, whether he knew it or not, had uniquely prepared him to be a good scout because each experience covered an angle of how to be a good scout. He was a position and strength coach, so he understands body types and technique. He was almost in finance, so he has an understanding of value. He was a teacher, so he understands the administrative and parenting side of it—along with having been a young parent. He's got all the angles."

If Baalke lacks anything, it's charisma. What most people see is what they get. He's borderline OCD about working out and maintaining his physical appearance. He's a neat-freak who organizes reporters' recording devices by size before starting press conferences. Baalke walks with a purpose, wasting few movements. Even during casual conversations you get the feeling that he's already moving onto the next thing or the next person. His speech is deliberate, always delivered with a half-hoarse voice. No, he's not the warmest person you'll ever come across.

"When you know Trent—and this isn't meant to be mean—but he's just not a happy guy," says 49ers CEO Jed York. "He likes work. He's so structured and so uptight about getting it right he doesn't have time to go fraternize, to go out to have a nice dinner. That's just not who he is. The most pissed off he gets is when he's not working out. If he doesn't work out and he's not watching film, he's even more pissed off than normal."

But Baalke isn't just a scouting and workout robot who is the first into the building and the last to leave, assuming it's not one of those nights when he sleeps at the team's facility despite living 20 minutes away. There's a warm human being in there, even if it takes a while to get to know him well.

Marathe plays racquetball with Baalke and often has dinner with him on the road. Baalke can savor a good bottle of wine and, believe it or not, can actually be funny. Thompson remembers asking Baalke what he told kicker Adam Vinatieri when he coached him in college at South Dakota State. What was the wisdom that he passed along to the future Hall of Famer? "I told him to kick it through the uprights," Baalke responded.

From 2001-04, Baalke worked as a national scout for the Redskins and became the team's college scouting coordinator. In '05, when the 49ers tabbed him to be their West region scout, he and wife Beth, his college sweetheart, made the tough decision to have the family stay behind in Loveland, Colo., so that their daughters Katy and Cassie could finish high school. There were a lot of cell phone minutes used. And whenever Baalke could, he boarded a plane just to spend a few hours with them.

"It's normal to us to talk to our dad over the phone every night and not see him every night," Katy told the Loveland Reporter-Herald in 2013. "That just became normal. Growing up, it became easier the older we got, knowing he's doing this for the family and not to be selfish."

When the nest finally became empty, Beth moved to Santa Clara, where she threw a surprise birthday bash for her husband's 50th in February. Several of his grade-school friends from Wisconsin attended and roasted their long-time pal.

"They love him," Marathe says. "He doesn't have a lot of friends, but they're very loyal ... He's actually really genuine. Almost to a fault."

On several occasions, Marathe has poked his head inside Baalke's office and found him feverishly writing reply cards to fans/critics who have sent him correspondence. He refuses to pawn the duty off to his assistant.

"That's just the way he is," Marathe says. "He comes across as the guy who has all the answers by the way he talks. He's as insecure as anybody, as all of us are. He's as easy to get to know as anybody. But it takes one to three times to get there spending time with him."

At some point during the 49ers' five-game losing streak at the start of the 2010 season, some seven months after then-GM Scot McCloughan left the organization for unexplained reasons, York pulled Baalke aside for a private conversation.

"I don't know if you're going to be the general manager going forward, but you should assume that you are and you should prepare that way," York told him. "And we should sit down and figure out how we want to rework the organization."

There was no hesitation from Baalke, who didn't need to pull together some grandiose powerpoint presentation. He simply enacted his plan, which included beating several other suitors to lure Jim Harbaugh from Stanford to replace Mike Singletary.

"He was ready for it and you could tell it's something he wanted," York says. "There's some guys that don't want to be in that top spot. He's not somebody who angled for it, but he's somebody who prepared for it. He hands down had a better vision of what we were looking for as an organization and he executed on it."

If Baalke's vision looks familiar, it's because he essentially turned the 49ers into a West Coast version of the Baltimore Ravens: big, strong and intimidating. It wasn't a coincidence either. Ozzie Newsome learned how to construct a team from his days with Bill Belichick in Cleveland, and much of Baalke's belief system took root during his time with the Jets under Belichick and Bill Parcells.

"You look at Baltimore's team and you look at San Francisco's team, they're basically built like the Giants back in the 1980s when Bill and Bill were working together," Newsome says.

As for Baalke working with Harbaugh, well, the 49ers coach couldn't be more effusive about his boss—and it's not just lip-service to overcome a negative public perception of their relationship.

"We have one of the best organizations in the football, if not the very best, because we have two things: infrastructure and people," Harbaugh says. "He spearheaded both areas ... I do know this about Trent: he watches the tape. He gets on the road and scouts and watches the tape of players in the league, our players and practice. He gets a lot out of a day with very little fanfare or taking a deep breath. Everybody has a high level of respect for that."

When asked to provide an example of Baalke's eye for talent, Harbaugh doesn't have to pause to think. He cites Bruce Miller and Michael Wilhoite. San Francisco took Miller—Central Florida's all-time sacks leader and a two-time Conference USA defensive player of the year—in the seventh round of the 2011 draft. Not to play defensive end, but fullback.

"He projected an end, who had never played offense before, as a fullback and he's been our starting fullback the last three years," Harbaugh says. "With any great relationship, you have to have trust and I trusted that Trent and our scouts had done the work."

Wilhoite was a college safety at Washburn and out of football for a year when he came in for a tryout. He worked his way up from the practice squad to become a special-teams standout. Last season, he filled in as a solid starter for an injured Patrick Willis, and he'll likely be counted on to do the same this year for NaVorro Bowman.

“The perception [of our relationship being contentious] is not the reality,” Harbaugh says. “I have a great deal of respect for the work ethic and the intelligence of Trent Baalke. And I’ve said it before, as a partner—teammate is a better word—it’s not him or I, it’s a team effort and that’s a core fundamental belief of our organization. We’ve been successful doing it that way.”

Baalke may be hard to pin down, for opponents and even most of his colleagues within the 49ers’ organization. But Trent Baalke is working, there’s no question about that.

Vic FangioFrom early age, Fangio knew his future

By Eric Branch
San Francisco Chronicle
November 8, 2014

To understand why 49ers defensive coordinator Vic Fangio became a football coach, it's helpful to visit his hometown, a borough of about 14,000 in the northeast corner of the Keystone State.

Fangio, 56, grew up in a two-story house on Electric Street, a quarter-mile from Dunmore High, which is where Jack HENZES greeted an out-of-town visitor in early August.

HENZES was Fangio's high school coach. He is also the second-winningest coach in Pennsylvania high school football history (392-155-8). He is also 78 years old, still teaching health, P.E. and driver's education, still rising at 5:30 a.m. to serve Mass, still weighing a lean and well-sculpted 158 pounds and still coaching the Dunmore Bucks, a job he has had for 43 years, starting in the middle of the Nixon administration.

In August, he lifted his shirt to reveal a scar on his chest where a surgeon inserted a defibrillator nearly 20 years ago. He has collapsed during a game four times since 1995, which inspired the question that was already begging to be asked: When will the husband of 56 years and the grandfather of 13 finally hang it up?

"Oh," he said, cheerfully waving off the question, "I've still got that fire in my belly."

HENZES is the reason Fangio, a sports-crazed teenager who refused to take piano lessons, knew his future would involve a clipboard and whistle before he even graduated high school. Long before Fangio met Jim Harbaugh, he knew all about an enthusiasm unknown to mankind.

"He was a guy (who) was so enthusiastic and passionate about football," Fangio said. "Growing up, baseball and basketball were my favorite sports, but he was so good that football became contagious to me. I got the coaching bug then. I felt after I left Dunmore that I already could coach in high school because of all that I learned from him. That's probably a young kid being stupid or brash, but that's how much confidence I had because he'd been my coach."

His NFL start

Fangio's confidence was clearly well-founded. On Sunday, the 49ers will visit New Orleans, where Fangio, then 28, landed his first NFL job in 1986 as the Saints' outside-linebackers coach. And he'll return to the Superdome in the midst of perhaps the most impressive season of his 30-year career in professional football.

After eight games, the 49ers have yet to field a defense that includes All-Pro linebackers Aldon Smith and NaVorro Bowman, or nose tackle Glenn Dorsey. In addition, All-Pro inside linebacker Patrick Willis has missed two games and starting cornerback Tramaine Brock has missed six starts.

Still, the Niners' defense has maintained the high standards established after Fangio arrived in 2011. The team ranks second in the NFL in yards allowed per game and among the top two in the league in first downs allowed, plays of 10-plus yards allowed and passes of 20-plus yards surrendered.

After the defense forced four turnovers and scored a touchdown in a season-opening 28-17 win against Dallas, Harbaugh beamed: "Thanks for being great, Vic!" he said.

After the Eagles' high-octane offense was held scoreless and failed to cross midfield in the first 55 minutes of the 49ers' 26-21 win on Sept. 28, NFL Network analyst Brian Billick said Fangio was "the best (defensive coordinator) in the league. Hands down, no contest."

Billick hired Fangio as the special assistant to the head coach with the Ravens in 2006 and he's hardly the only colleague or player, past or present, to hold him in high esteem. Fangio's acumen explains why he hasn't had to formally interview for a job in a career that has included stops with six NFL teams, two colleges and two high schools.

What separates Fangio? The answers vary.

Former Pro Bowl cornerback Eric Davis cited Fangio's ability to convey complex schemes in an easy-to-understand manner.

"Vic understood how to get it from the screen where we were watching film into guys' heads in a way that everyone could understand," said Davis, who was with Fangio in Carolina from 1996 through '98. "You've got guys with different levels of learning abilities and they learn in different ways. Vic knew how to reach each guy."

Jim Mora, 79, gave Fangio his first job in pro football — as an unpaid assistant with the USFL's Philadelphia Stars in 1984. Fangio earned $20,000 in his second year with the Stars, but Mora and general manager Carl Peterson still occasionally handed him $100 bills to keep him afloat. When Mora was hired by the Saints in 1986, he took Fangio with him. Mora then hired him as his defensive coordinator with the Colts in 1999.

Reaching the players

Mora kept hiring Fangio partly because his X-and-O's mastery made his straight-talking approach with players effective. In his first year in the NFL, Fangio inherited two ultra-talented outside linebackers — Rickey Jackson and Pat Swilling — who weren't ultra-easy to reach. Mora gives Fangio credit for Jackson's induction into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 2010.

"Vic was unusually effective coaching those guys," Mora said. "He was very demanding, but they loved him. He could tell them whatever he wanted to tell them. Sometimes they didn't like it, but they listened because they knew he'd come up with stuff that would make them the best players they could be."

Given his knowledge and ability to relate with players, it's fair to wonder why Fangio hasn't been an NFL head coach. He hasn't been a serious candidate since he was one of two finalists for the Chargers' job that went to Kevin Gilbride in 1997.

It hasn't helped Fangio that he doesn't possess an outsize personality and is allergic to self-promotion. After the win over the Eagles this season, a member of the 49ers' public-relations staff had to cajole

Fangio to speak with reporters. Mora also said Fangio's honest assessment of players has rankled personnel executives in the past.

For his part, Fangio doesn't regret his candor and insists he'll be fine if the stars never align.

"It wouldn't be an empty feeling at all," he said. "Because what I've been able to do with my background is more than I could have asked for or dreamed of."

Indeed, Fangio's background differs from many NFL coaches'. He didn't play football after high school, didn't have a football-coaching father — his late dad, Vic Sr., had a tailor shop in Scranton — and his climb up the ladder wasn't assisted by influential contacts.

He was solely responsible for his first big break, which was a job as a graduate assistant at North Carolina when he was 25. Before Tar Heels defensive coordinator Denny Marcin arrived in Scranton for a speaking engagement, Fangio wrote him a letter and asked if they could meet. They ended up connecting in a hotel elevator and Marcin, who later became an NFL assistant, still teases Fangio about begging for a job.

"I went back after that and told our coach, Dick Crum, 'Boy, this guy is sharp,'" Marcin said. "It was clear right away Vic Fangio had the football smarts."

Fangio also had Henzes, who gave him his first job and whose emphasis on discipline, fundamentals and physicality remains the bedrock of Fangio's coaching.

Career begins

Fangio was so eager to begin his 9-to-5 job that he began assisting at Dunmore before he graduated from East Stroudsburg University, which required him to make a 45-minute daily drive to practice. Shortly after Fangio graduated, Henzes promoted his linebackers coach to defensive coordinator.

"We weren't very good when he coached here, but teams that should have beaten us by 40 points were beating us 10-6," Henzes said. "His placement of people and knowing what to call at certain times was amazing."

Henzes encouraged Fangio to pursue bigger dreams and the roles have reversed in their teacher-pupil relationship since Fangio left Dunmore. Over the past 33 years, Henzes often has contacted Fangio — he calls him "Victor" — before the Bucks meet an imposing opponent. In the left-hand drawer of the metal desk in his office, Henzes keeps the faxes filled with notes and diagrams Fangio has sent in return.

"I'll say, 'Victor, I don't think we match up this week. What should we do?'" Henzes said. "He'll say, 'Let me work on it and I'll get back to you.'"

Fangio sees Henzes about twice a year when he returns to Dunmore to visit his mom, who still lives on Electric Street. At 87, Alice Fangio still mows her lawn, shovels snow and jokes that she shares something in common with the town's football coach, whose Bucks are 10-1 after a first-round playoff win Friday.

"The work?" she said. "Oh, that's the Polish in both of us."

It's also in her son, who inherited his mom's work gene and appears to have the same fire in his belly as the high school coach who inspired him.

"I don't see an end in sight," Fangio said. "I don't see myself doing it when I'm 75 like some of these guys, but you never know. I've talked to some of those guys and they say you just keep going."

D.J. Boldin*Boldin Brothers Unite in San Francisco

Across the way from the trailer park where Anquan and D.J. Boldin lived as kids was a vacant road.

Other than farmland, not much else surrounded their Pahokee, Fla., mobile home.

But there was that unwinding stretch of road.

When Anquan was a budding star in high school, D.J. often biked behind his big brother, who ran the mile-long path as part of his workout regimen.

"I was just encouraging him while he jogged there and back," D.J. said. "I trailed him with the water just in case he needed it."

Anquan has always pushed D.J. to be better.

When Anquan was playing college ball at Florida State, D.J. regularly made the six-hour trek north to Tallahassee in the summertime so the two could train.

While they were in the gym, Anquan wouldn't stop lifting until D.J. tapped out.

"If you're going to work with Anquan," D.J. said, "he's going to demand your best. That's just who he is."

Anquan has always pushed D.J. to be better.

Years later, Anquan and D.J. vacationed to Las Vegas together during an offseason.

While on the Strip, the siblings stumbled upon the New York-New York Hotel's iconic roller coaster.

Anquan knew D.J. feared coasters, so he challenged him to go on the ride.

"Once you double dare a man, it's kind of hard to turn it down," D.J. said. "I screamed the entire time while he just laughed."

Anquan has always pushed D.J. to be better.

At their cores, Anquan and D.J. are strikingly similar. Their foundations as men are built on fervent work ethics. And much of what they've accomplished can be credited to their mutually beneficial big brother-little brother relationship.

Fittingly enough, they've found their way together once again, each working for the San Francisco 49ers – Anquan as the team's leading receiver and D.J. as an offensive assistant on the coaching staff.

Setting an Example

Although they have two older siblings, one brother and one sister, Anquan and D.J. were the closest growing up.

Six years older, Anquan stayed out of trouble to avoid sending the wrong message to D.J.

"He's always looked up to me. That's one of the reasons I tried to do things the right way, because I knew I had somebody coming up behind me," Anquan said. "I had to look out for him."

Part of that responsibility included making sure that D.J. never felt like he needed to be anything other than himself.

Joe Marx, who coached Anquan at Pahokee High School, always saw the younger kids in town trying to emulate his team's star player, the town's proud son.

"They all wanted to be Anquan," Marx said. "D.J. included."

Anquan, being the protective older brother that he is, wanted D.J. to have a clean slate.

"Everyone would try to compare him to me, and that's something that I thought was unfair," Anquan said. "We're two different people."

Anquan went as far as telling D.J. to pick any position on the football field other than receiver. As a safety, the spot Anquan felt his brother should play, D.J. wouldn't hear as much about Anquan's accolades, which included being named Florida's Mr. Football his senior year after scoring 56 total touchdowns.

That decision, however, was not Anquan's to make, and D.J.'s mind was made up.

"Anquan has always been a special guy, and being a kid, you want to be special too so you mimic those things," D.J. said. "It never got to the point where I felt any pressure to be like him. I just always looked up to him and always respected him. Nothing else mattered."

As turned out, D.J. was a talented receiver in his own right. Following a standout prep career at Pahokee, D.J. went on to star at Wake Forest, leading the ACC in receptions as a senior with 81 catches.

"He was real good," Anquan said, smiling and looking out onto the practice fields at the 49ers training facility. "Real good."

Together in Red and Gold

After going undrafted in 2009, D.J. signed with the Detroit Lions. He spent the entire preseason with the team, but he was among the final cuts before the regular season.

He later spent time with the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League before hanging up his cleats and deciding what to do next.

"I think every player goes through a process after they're done playing where they try to figure out what's next," D.J. said. "I thought to myself, 'Do I have a college degree? Yes. Do I love working with people? Yes.' I knew those things and I knew I loved teaching, so it was obvious what to do."

In the spring of 2013, D.J. began his coaching career in the Professional Developmental Football League, which pits former college athletes against each other with the goal of feeding players to the NFL. It was there, back in South Florida and far away from the bright lights of the NFL, that D.J. fell in love with coaching.

Anquan took notice and vouched for his brother. After being traded to San Francisco in March of 2013, Anquan approached Jim Harbaugh about bringing D.J. on to the 49ers staff as an intern.

The coach agreed, but he only guaranteed D.J. a position for the duration of training camp. Anquan had helped get his brother's foot in the door, but it was up to D.J. to get all the way through.

He did not disappoint.

"I worked my tail off," D.J. said. "I blocked out everything. Even though Anquan is my brother, we barely saw each other. That's just how it goes in the coaching world. It's late nights and early mornings, but I can't picture me doing anything else."

After D.J. proved his worth in camp, Harbaugh extended his internship through the entire 2013 season. Then during the offseason, the 49ers offered D.J. a full-time job as an offensive assistant.

D.J. now has an office at the 49ers facility just down the hall from defensive coordinator Vic Fangio. It's not a glamorous working space; there are no windows, and it's maybe the size of a broom closet, but D.J. doesn't mind. He's too busy to care – or eat lunch for that matter.

His weekly responsibilities include diagramming different schemes that the 49ers offense might see from its opponent and presenting them to the players.

"It's my job that when Sunday comes, they've seen every possible look," D.J. said.

Anquan and D.J. talk frequently about football, and on gamedays, they'll make adjustments together if one of them sees something specific from the sideline. D.J. also relays observations to the other coaches.

Although he's focused on the present, D.J. has found himself looking to the future at times. He aspires to be an offensive coordinator, and one day, "a great head coach like Harbaugh."

Anquan won't take any credit for his brother's success. It's not in his nature. But when talking about how far D.J. has come and how hard he has worked, Anquan's default stern expression rapidly fades. He looks like a proud papa.

"He's still here," Anquan said. "How about that?"

All-around Greatness

D.J. usually takes a beat before providing a thoughtful answer, but for one question, his reply comes without delay.

Should Anquan be in the Pro Football Hall of Fame one day?

"Definitely. First ballot," D.J. said. "I've seen probably more than anybody else has seen of the hard work Anquan puts in. And the hard work that it took for him to get to this point hasn't stopped."

Anquan's career resume certainly should have him in the discussion for enshrinement at least. After all, he was the fastest player in NFL history to reach 400 career receptions (67 games), 500 career receptions (80 games) and 600 career receptions (98 games). He also has a Super Bowl ring to his name and more than 12,000 career receiving yards.

But these numbers don't play a big factor in how D.J. views his brother. He believes Anquan is an all-time great because of his selflessness.

As a big brother, Anquan learned how to be a role model throughout his youth. Perhaps by pushing D.J., Anquan simultaneously pushed himself.

And now that D.J. has found his calling, Anquan has directed those same skills toward philanthropy.

"We all know the hard work he does on the field, but I think it's downplayed what he does off of it," D.J. said. "He does phenomenal things. Things that should be characterized as what a Pro Bowler or Hall of Famer does. He's changing lives. That speaks to me more than anything."

Anquan's nonprofit, the Anquan Boldin Foundation, supports many worthy causes like after-school activities and summer-enrichment programs. Anquan and his wife, Dionne, recently announced a $1 million endowment to the foundation to be used for need-based scholarships.

D.J. gets involved in Anquan's charitable work as much as he can. The siblings apply the same passion they have for football to helping the community. What else would you expect?

"With his success, he's been able to see so many things in life," D.J. said. "He's helped me and so many others do the same by giving opportunities that we normally wouldn't get. He genuinely cares."

Antoine BetheaBethea helps solidify 49ers' secondary

When St. Louis quarterback Austin Davis drifted to his right early in the second quarter in Week 9, the 49ers' Antoine Bethea drifted with him.

The veteran safety was responsible for the shallow receiver, tight end Corey Harkey. But Bethea also knew he'd be able to stop Harkey for a minimal gain if the ball went in that direction.

Bethea instead hedged his bets, playing midway between Harkey and the deeper receiver, Tavon Austin. When the Rams quarterback tried for the bigger play, Bethea backpedaled a few steps, leaped and made the interception.

The takeaway was 25 percent athletic ability, 75 percent smarts.

"That just shows the type of awareness he has," fellow safety Eric Reid said. "Knowing the down and distance, knowing the situation, knowing that he can let his guy catch the ball and it's not going to hurt us. He helped another (defender) out, and he made a play for us."

With new faces – including Bethea's – at nearly every key position in the secondary this year, that unit was supposed to be a 49ers weakness, at least early in the season. Instead, it's been the strongest, most consistent part of the squad.

The 49ers enter Sunday's game against Washington with an NFL-best 16 interceptions, three by Bethea, who has taken over as captain of the secondary and could end up being the team MVP in his first year with San Francisco.

"This guy comes in, and he's very complete," defensive backs coach Ed Donatell said. "He does a little bit of everything, and he does it well. He's also proven to be a quick study. We just were fortunate a guy like this was available."

As Donte Whitner's replacement at strong safety, Bethea may not be the emotional force or heavy hitter Whitner was. But he has been better in coverage and certainly hasn't cost the defense penalty yardage, which became a hallmark for the fiery Whitner.

Last year, Whitner was called for five 15-yard penalties. Through 10 games, Bethea has not been penalized.

Bethea has been a starter for nine seasons and played in a similar system in Indianapolis before signing a four-year deal with the 49ers. At the same time, Reid has been given more responsibilities in his second year with the team. That has allowed the 49ers to be more complex in their coverages than they were a year ago and perhaps compensate for other deficiencies on defense.

For example, neither of the 49ers' Pro Bowl linebackers, Patrick Willis and NaVorro Bowman, is currently in the lineup. Both are excellent tacklers but are more unique in their ability to cover tight ends, running backs and sometimes even receivers one on one, something the 49ers are doing less without them this season.

San Francisco's pass rush also flagged without its top contributor, Aldon Smith, who was suspended for the first nine games. The 49ers' 17 sacks rank 25th in the NFL, yet the pass defense and overall defense rank fourth.

"They do a great job of mixing it up," Washington coach Jay Gruden said of the 49ers' safeties. "They play enough man to man to throw you off, but they also do a great job in their zones. ... They just do a great job mixing it up and keeping the quarterback off balance."

Bethea and Reid will be particularly wary of the long ball against Gruden's team, which has two receivers, DeSean Jackson and Pierre Garcon, with the speed to break away from secondaries.

Despite playing with three starting quarterbacks this season, Jackson has been perhaps the top deep threat in the league with nine catches of 40 yards or more.

The next-best player in that category, Green Bay's Jordy Nelson, has six such catches. All of the 49ers' pass catchers have combined for just four catches of 40 or more yards.

Every defense enters games intending to keep Jackson in front of them, but he consistently finds ways to sneak through.

"I don't know how it happens, but sometimes it just does," Bethea said. "We just have to be on our P's and Q's in knowing certain situations, when they like to throw it (deep), certain formations and where he's aligned in them. ... We need to know where No. 11 is, the secondary as a whole."

Antoine Bethea

49ers counting on Bethea for veteran leadership in secondary

The Indianapolis Colts had expectations for Antoine Bethea when they drafted him in 2006, but they were the grounded expectations any team would have for an undersized safety who played at Howard and lasted until the sixth round.

With Peyton Manning, Marvin Harrison, Reggie Wayne and the Colts' offense rocketing to big leads, Indianapolis needed a defensive back who could be used against opponents who played catch-up by trotting out three or more receivers in the second half of games. Tony Dungy and Bill Polian – the coach and general manager, respectively, at the time – figured they'd turn Bethea into a cornerback and have him compete for a role in an alignment when five defensive backs were employed.

It didn't take long for them to change their plan.

"The first practice of minicamp – boom! – he intercepts a pass," said Polian, an ESPN analyst. "This was his first practice. He couldn't even find the lunch room. The second practice of minicamp, he intercepts another pass. Third practice – I think he had two interceptions. Tony walks over to me and says, 'I think we'll leave him at safety.' "

Recalled Dungy, who left the Colts after the 2008 season: "We saw a lot of things we liked in him (before the draft) – the range and the ball skills. But I don't think we ever dreamed we would get what we ended up getting. He exceeded all our expectations."

While Bethea, now 29 and entering his ninth season, was serendipity at safety in Indianapolis in 2006, he enters his first season with the 49ers as an indispensable figure – and easily the team's most critical offseason acquisition. Bethea, a free agent, signed a four-year contract with the 49ers in March. He not only will take over at starting safety from well-respected Donte Whitner, he's expected to galvanize and lead the 49ers' largely rebuilt secondary.

Whitner and cornerbacks Carlos Rogers and Tarell Brown – all starters since 2011 – moved on via free agency in the offseason. Tramaine Brock and Chris Culliver likely will start at cornerback this year, but neither has been a full-time starter. The other safety, Eric Reid, is entering his second season. The "nickel" cornerback may be rookie Jimmie Ward.

Dungy thinks Bethea is up to the task. It took only one week of spring minicamps for the Colts to see that he was starter material. It took only a week of summer training camp to see he was a leader, too.

"Just the way he picked up on things," said Dungy, a former defensive back. "He knew what everybody else was supposed to do. And he had that demeanor that kind of calmed everybody else down. He wasn't frazzled. He wasn't looking for answers. And even his first year, he was someone you could talk to on the sideline: 'What happened out there? What's going on? What adjustments do we need to make?' He could help even the coaches understand what was going on."

Bethea started 14 games as a rookie, and the Colts won the Super Bowl. In eight seasons in Indianapolis, he intercepted 14 passes and made the Pro Bowl twice.

The statistic the 49ers like best: zero, as in no games missed over the past six seasons. And Polian said it's hard to remember Bethea, only 198 pounds when he entered the league, missing any practices.

Toughness is crucial in the best and most rough-and-tumble division in the league. If the AFC South eight years ago was an elegant Indy car sprint, the NFC West is closer to a bumper-bending NASCAR smash-up. The 49ers' archrivals, the Seahawks, are one of the few NFL teams that still runs more than they throw, and they do so with relentless, 215-pound running back Marshawn Lynch.

The 49ers prefer to run, too. Instead of racing out to big first-half leads as the Colts did under Manning, the 49ers prefer to keep games close early and wear down opponents. That requires run support and physical play from the safeties.

No problem, Bethea said.

"Don't get me wrong – I like to cover," he said. "But as far as sticking my nose in there and tackling – that's something I love. Not a lot of guys love to tackle. That's all want-to. You have to want to do it. And I do."

Bethea played linebacker from Pop Warner through high school, and he said the position is hard-wired into his nervous system. That he refuses to miss a game or a practice is related to his upbringing.

Bethea grew up in the military town of Norfolk, Va. His father, Larry Bethea, was in the Army for nearly 30 years, but he wasn't the type of military father who would have his sons up at 5 a.m. to test their bed-making skills by flipping a quarter on the sheets. Nonetheless, there was an understanding in the household.

"There was always a sense of, when you leave this house, you have a name to represent – don't throw any dirt on this name," Antoine Bethea said. "And whatever you're supposed to do, you go do it. And he always treated me like a young man. He never treated me like a child or a teenager."

Polian called Bethea the "consummate professional and the consummate self starter." Dungy said the 49ers, who have dealt with a slew of ugly, embarrassing police-blotter incidents with their players in the past two years, won't have any problems with their new safety.

Told that after 20 minutes of sky-high praise, it sounded as if Bethea must have been one of his favorite players. Dungy laughed, paused and confessed that in an NFL locker room full of disparate personalities and characters, Bethea was the one guy who never cost his coaches a second of sleep.

"He's one of those guys you kind of take for granted while you're working on your problem children," Dungy said. "So I am fond of him. I just like guys that are kind of old school – 'I come in, do my job, and the coach never has to worry about me.' "

Clearly, if Dungy and Polian still were running the show in Indianapolis, Bethea would not have been allowed to leave for San Francisco. "I was astounded when they let him go, to be honest with you," Polian said. "That shocked me."

Anquan Boldin*Boldin Brothers Unite in San Francisco

Across the way from the trailer park where Anquan and D.J. Boldin lived as kids was a vacant road.

Other than farmland, not much else surrounded their Pahokee, Fla., mobile home.

But there was that unwinding stretch of road.

When Anquan was a budding star in high school, D.J. often biked behind his big brother, who ran the mile-long path as part of his workout regimen.

"I was just encouraging him while he jogged there and back," D.J. said. "I trailed him with the water just in case he needed it."

Anquan has always pushed D.J. to be better.

When Anquan was playing college ball at Florida State, D.J. regularly made the six-hour trek north to Tallahassee in the summertime so the two could train.

While they were in the gym, Anquan wouldn't stop lifting until D.J. tapped out.

"If you're going to work with Anquan," D.J. said, "he's going to demand your best. That's just who he is."

Anquan has always pushed D.J. to be better.

Years later, Anquan and D.J. vacationed to Las Vegas together during an offseason.

While on the Strip, the siblings stumbled upon the New York-New York Hotel's iconic roller coaster.

Anquan knew D.J. feared coasters, so he challenged him to go on the ride.

"Once you double dare a man, it's kind of hard to turn it down," D.J. said. "I screamed the entire time while he just laughed."

Anquan has always pushed D.J. to be better.

At their cores, Anquan and D.J. are strikingly similar. Their foundations as men are built on fervent work ethics. And much of what they've accomplished can be credited to their mutually beneficial big brother-little brother relationship.

Fittingly enough, they've found their way together once again, each working for the San Francisco 49ers – Anquan as the team's leading receiver and D.J. as an offensive assistant on the coaching staff.

Setting an Example

Although they have two older siblings, one brother and one sister, Anquan and D.J. were the closest growing up.

Six years older, Anquan stayed out of trouble to avoid sending the wrong message to D.J.

Anquan Boldin

Anquan Boldin's strong family upbringing set him on a path of service

Anquan Boldin is best-known as a prolific NFL wide receiver. He currently has 11,344 career receiving yards, which puts him among the top 30 receivers in NFL history. However, as remarkable as his on-field achievements have been, first with the Arizona Cardinals, then the Baltimore Ravens and now with the San Francisco 49ers, his work with The Anquan Boldin Foundation may be even more noteworthy.

The foundation's mission is focused on "expanding the educational and life opportunities for underprivileged children." For the last 10 years, Boldin has done just that and he has a special understanding of the challenges of the children he is assisting.

Growing up in Pahokee, Florida, on the shores of Lake Okeechobee, Anquan Boldin was a member of a very tight-knit family and his parents expected a lot from Anquan, the third of their four children and his three siblings, which included his sister (the oldest), older brother and younger brother. The family often struggled, sometimes not knowing if they were going to have things as basic as food or electricity.

The importance of hard work was instilled in the Boldin children from a very young age, especially by their father, who Boldin said all four children referred to as a "drill sergeant."

In fact, Carl Boldin had a unique way of making sure his offspring were always challenged and were one step ahead in school.

"I had to do my older brother's homework," Boldin recalled. "He had to do my older sister's homework and she had to do homework that was made up."

As a child, it was frustrating. However, as an adult Boldin soon saw the wisdom of his father's ways and now uses some of it when parenting his own two sons, ages ten and four.

"As kids you see friends who get away with a lot more," he said. "They don't have that giant figure standing over them. As an adult you can appreciate it and those are some of the things you model when raising your kids."

As a husband and father, Boldin decided that he wasn't going to just be an example and support for his own children, but to as many others as he could help and that was the start of the The Anquan Boldin Foundation, also known as Q81.

Now in its 10th year, the foundation has helped countless children in myriad ways. And Boldin's commitment to his foundation is equal to, or exceeds, his commitment to his own career.

One of the foundation's programs is to provide college scholarships and the impact and success has been significant. Boldin related a story about a young man who had dropped out of high school in the ninth grade. A few years later, he came across the Boldin foundation and told them he wanted to continue with school. He got his GED and earned a college scholarship from the foundation. That young man is now a teacher.

The foundation also supports an eight-week academic summer program in Pahokee, which is targeted toward high school students who have fallen behind in their school work. The program also provides speakers and field trips to expose the teens to other ideas and highlight opportunities that exist for them if they make the right choices.

Another service the foundation offers is a dental program in the Phoenix, Arizona area. In 2008, when Boldin was playing for the Arizona Cardinals, he sustained an injury to his face after a severe collision during a game. He required facial surgery and that experience made him realize how many others with similar needs were out there, but who couldn't afford this type of care.

There are also numerous programs, which the foundation provides throughout the year including providing meals and gifts at the various holidays, and items that children need for school – everything from pens and notebooks to electronic equipment.

After all these years, the tight-knit Boldin family support is still there and they have all embraced their own various roles with Q81.

"My wife (Dionne) is involved," Boldin said. "My father is involved. My uncle is involved. And the great thing about it is all of them do it because they want to, No one is paid. We are family. Some things we agree on, some we don't. We do what's in the best interest of the foundation. We raise questions and we take votes."

Boldin knows football retirement is in sight, but he also knows that will only provide him with even more time to put into his foundation and community work.

"I've outplayed my NFL career already," Boldin said. "The life expectancy there is three years. I've done that four times over. But the effect you have on people's lives can last forever."

Through Anquan Boldin's efforts, children who might otherwise have limited opportunities are discovering that they have very bright futures.

Anquan Boldin*Hometown roots run deep for Anquan Boldin, 49ers' fierce wide receiver

"They have better uniforms, newer cleats. They have twice as many kids on their team. They live in fancy homes, drive fancy cars. They're going to college, and their rich parents will pay for it all.

"You? All you have is heart and hustle. You're the sons of bean pickers. You've had to work for everything you've got. Everything they've got has been spoon-fed. And today you have a chance to take something from them ..."

Anquan Boldin, the 49ers' veteran wide receiver, grew up hearing variations of that speech – after practices, before games, in the locker room before tearing into the humid Friday night air for the second half. It might as well be the anthem of his hometown of Pahokee, Fla., a town just shy of 6,000 residents that typically attracts media attention for two reasons: football and misfortune.

In 1928, Pahokee was struck by the second most deadly storm in U.S. history. The Okeechobee Hurricane killed at least 2,500 in south Florida, many of them poor field workers who now rest anonymously in a mass grave in another part of the county. In the 1980s, the region had the highest per-capita rate of AIDS in the world.

In recent years, the town has been staggered by a brutal one-two economic punch: the closure of a state correctional facility and mechanization of the area's sugar mills. Official unemployment rates are at 20 percent, but town leaders say the actual numbers are closer to 40 percent. More than one in four Pahokee residents lives below the poverty line; nearly one in three adults has less than a ninth-grade education.

A visit to Pahokee can feel like a journey back in time. There are no grocery chains, no movie theaters, no restaurants, no downtown. Many live in labor housing projects built by the government for early generations of farmworkers. It's common for families to live without electricity and running water because they can't afford to pay their bills.

But as any NFL defensive back knows, Boldin is a force of nature in his own right. And he is pushing back.

As recently as four years ago, Pahokee's pride – the Pahokee High School Blue Devils football team – was squeezing into the same shoulder pads that Pro Football Hall-of-Fame linebacker Rickey Jackson and his Pahokee teammates used in the 1970s. Boldin went on a shopping spree, outfitting the team from cleats to thigh pads to helmets to replace the outdated and unsafe equipment.

He's done much more than that.

Boldin's Q81 Foundation has awarded college scholarships – three this year in Palm Beach County, one in the Bay Area; handed out thousands of turkeys at Thanksgiving; and purchased thousands of toys at Christmas. Each spring the foundation sponsors a free, two-day festival in Pahokee. Last year, it distributed more than $113,000, and in March the NFL Players Association honored Boldin with its Byron “Whizzer” White award for community service.

The honor came two months after 49ers coaches named Boldin their MVP for 2013. In his first season in San Francisco, he propped up the team’s depleted wide-receiving corps, leading the 49ers in catches and receiving yards in the regular season. In the postseason, he became an even fiercer, more fiery version of himself.

When the Carolina Panthers’ celebrated defense tried to rough up and intimidate the 49ers’ receivers on Jan. 12, they discovered that covering Boldin was like covering a tempest. The receiver shoved, stiff-armed and stomped defenders on his way to eight catches for 136 yards.

After one of those receptions, he popped to his feet and mashed his helmet into that of the Panthers’ main aggressor, safety Mike Mitchell. The move prompted one of the Fox announcers that day, Joe Buck, to say the head butt would have made former pro wrestler Ric Flair proud, while his partner, Troy Aikman, moaned that he was “tired of watching” Boldin’s bellicose behavior.

A do-gooder who knocks heads? To understand what stirs inside Anquan Boldin, you have to understand where he grew up.

Muck City

“Pahokee pretty much has always been the stepchild of Palm Beach County,” Carl Boldin, Anquan’s father, says of their hometown.

Palm Beach has some of Florida’s wealthiest communities, its eastern edge dotted with gated neighborhoods, sandy ocean beaches and coconut palms. Drive 40 miles inland, to its western edge, and you’re in a different world.

Pahokee and the larger town of Belle Glade to the south are abutted by massive Lake Okeechobee, the United State’s seventh-largest freshwater lake. The cities sprung from the Everglades nearly 100 years ago when the marshes were drained and acres of rich, fertile, almost jet-black muck were revealed. The towns are collectively known as Muck City.

Plant anything in the muck, and it will flourish. It’s what first lured desperate people – many from Caribbean islands, others from the Deep South – to start their lives over in Pahokee.

Don Thompson, who coached Pahokee High’s football team from 1984 to 1992 was a child when his parents sold everything, bought a junker and drove from Arkansas to Pahokee because they’d heard there was steady work in the place touted as the “Winter Vegetable Capital of the World.”

“We were just cotton pickers, sharecroppers in Arkansas,” said Thompson, 73, who picked string beans and sweet corn alongside his parents in the winter months.

Thompson would call Pahokee home, but he’d only spend half the year there. Like many of their neighbors, he and his family worked as migrant laborers, driving to places such as Benton Harbor, Mich., to pick strawberries, blueberries and apples starting in late March, and then on to Arkansas to pick cotton in the fall. In some years, he wouldn’t return to Pahokee until November.

"There wasn't much time for schooling," he said.

Anquan Boldin's grandparents were part of the same pattern, traveling to Maryland's Eastern Shore and upstate New York in the spring and summer. The living conditions could be deplorable, and the locals in those far-off towns were sometimes vicious. The work bent backs and gnarled hands. But it fostered a sense of community among the Pahokee folks, who looked out for one another on the road as well as back at home.

Boldin's grandmother on his mother's side, Johnnie Mae Banks, made lunches and suppers – sometimes more than 100 at a time – while her husband, Robert, and the others were in the field. She took care of their children, too.

At that time, Banks said, she lived in a mobile home that had four rooms. There were plenty of times when each of those rooms was filled with children.

From young Anquan Boldin's vantage point, good deeds weren't something to be done occasionally. He saw them every day.

"My grandma – she raised kids that weren't hers," he said. "Anytime a parent would be going through something and wanted to take their kids to a safer environment, somewhere where they could be cared for – didn't have to worry about them being fed, being loved – they ended up at my grandma's house."

Boldin's paternal grandmother, Annie Boldin, watched out for the town's elderly, serving meals at her house or sending her kids off with meals to deliver them on their bicycles.

"Before there was Meals on Wheels, we were the meals on wheels," Boldin's father said.

If compassion was handed down from his grandmothers, Boldin's fight came from his grandfather. Robert Banks was a boxer as a young man in the 1960s, at one point racking up 19 straight wins, 17 of them by knockout.

"I was the champion of the Everglades," he says proudly. "That was my love. I loved boxing."

Banks, 76, briefly turned professional and trained in Syracuse, N.Y., with the likes of Sugar Ray Robinson. But before his career took off, he responded to a higher calling and came home to Pahokee to become a pastor. He'd prowl the pulpit with the same energy and purpose he had in the ring.

"It's still his passion," said Anquan's younger brother, D.J. "He's 70-something years old, close to 80, and he still thinks he can bob and weave, jab and all of that."

D.J., who is serving as an offensive line assistant for the 49ers this year, sees his grandfather in Anquan.

"He's very mild-mannered off the field, very cool, calm and collected, very articulate, well-rounded guy," D.J. said. "But when you put him in that cage, which is the football field, he's a totally different animal. It's the only time he can let it all out."

When the boys were young, their grandparents' mobile home was adjacent to the tiny, stucco church where Banks preached. Boldin and his three siblings spent as much time in church listening to their grandfather deliver thunderous sermons about the importance of community and the necessity of giving back as they did in their own home.

"We had service on Sunday, service on Tuesday night, Bible study on Wednesday night, choir rehearsal Thursday and church on Friday," Anquan Boldin said. "We joke about it now – 'Man, we got more church than we wanted.' That's all we knew. It was a routine. It was embedded in us."

Giant killers

Boldin grew up in a government-built housing project on the outskirts of town. Painted bright yellow, it juts out into the sea of deep green crops – celery here, lettuce there – that surround Pahokee.

By every American measure, he was poor. But he never considered himself so. He and his siblings – two brothers and a sister – rode bikes, played baseball, went to school and attended church. They were just like all their neighbors, just as happy as everyone around him.

His first glimpses of how kids from Pahokee stacked up came through football. If, 50 years ago, Pahokee's most famous exports were beans and corn, over the last two decades, it's been wide receivers and running backs.

Pahokee's senior and middle schools are combined so that seventh- through 12th-graders share the same campus. Despite a senior class of about 120 students, the town's high school has produced an all-star team of past and current greats, from Jackson to former Eagles safety Andre Waters to Rams cornerback Janoris Jenkins. When the 49ers and Ravens met in the Super Bowl last year, five players called Muck City home, including current 49ers Boldin and Ray McDonald, who is from Belle Glade.

Pahokee High also has won six state titles, its first in 1989 when Don Thompson was the coach.

His son Blaze is the current head coach. Blaze Thompson noted that because of its limited roster, Pahokee's boys play offense, defense and special teams. That is, amid the stifling heat and buzzing mosquitoes of interior Florida, a Pahokee player could be on the field for every snap. His opponent might play half that.

"We consider ourselves giant killers," Blaze Thompson said. "That's our mentality."

Football allowed Boldin and his teammates to see beyond Pahokee, even if it was just one Friday night at a time.

Blaze Thompson recalled a 1996 playoff matchup that drew reporters from Florida's biggest newspapers and recruiters from the top universities. They were there to see two of the state's most exciting players, Tampa Catholic quarterback Kenny Kelly and Darrell Jackson, a receiver who would go on to play for the Seahawks and 49ers.

The attention – even if it was focused on the opponent – was embraced by Pahokee coaches, who told their players that prestigious Tampa Catholic, where tuition is more than $11,000 a year, was their ticket to a better life.

"This is how you win scholarships," Blaze Thompson said. "You take away theirs. This is how you get out of here – shining on someone else's dime."

Boldin and the Blue Devils did just that.

Kelly, who had thrown only one interception all season, completed just five of 19 passes for 103 yards with two interceptions.

Boldin, a sophomore at the time, was part of the suffocating secondary as the team's starting safety. He also was the starting quarterback, finishing with 23 carries for 184 yards and three touchdowns.

"He just jumped out in that game – outplayed, outhustled, out-everythinged in that game," Thompson said.

Chasing rabbits

In 2008, ESPN ran a segment called "Legend of the Rabbits" that took place in Muck City's cane fields. When the fields are burned in late fall, it sends the marsh hares – 2½ pounds of fur and floppy ears– that live amid the tangle of stalks darting into the open.

The footage showed shirtless boys chasing the rabbits, capturing them with their hands, and at the end of the day, walking home with dozens of rabbits as if they were stringers of trout. The message: The football players from Pahokee get their speed and agility from running down rodents in the muck.

While some in Pahokee were happy to see themselves on television, others seethed.

"The myth is that everyone around here grew up chasing rabbits," Carl Boldin said while shaking his head. "I never chased a rabbit in my life."

Carl Boldin was once a defensive lineman on the high school team. He no longer lives in town but is active with the foundation. One of the notions he and his son are battling is that Pahokee is only good at producing athletes and that the only way to escape poverty is through a football scholarship.

"There was anger with certain people. I think the people that understand the bigger picture didn't like it," Anquan Boldin said of the ESPN piece. "They see what Pahokee has to offer. And they don't like just that view of Pahokee."

The foundation's latest project, and the biggest one to date, is to build a 25,000-square-foot community center that would serve as an after-school spot for students. Boldin already has purchased 10 acres adjacent to the housing complex where he lived as a child. The foundation figures the total cost will be $5 million, and it will begin seeking corporate and private donations at the end of this year.

The foundation already partners with sugar giant Florida Crystals in a summer enrichment program. The aim is to raise students' grades so they can matriculate or graduate. It also brings in guest lecturers and takes field trips to places like beauty salons, auto body shops and culinary institutes in an effort to show students the opportunities available to them.

There is plenty pulling students in the opposite direction. Drug use is a problem and gang life – a growing issue in Pahokee – can be seductive to a teenager who has never had enough money to buy new shoes.

The high school's graduation rate has improved recently – 74 percent for the last school year – but standardized test scores remain low. Only 26 percent of 10th-graders received passing marks for reading skills on this year's 2014 state achievement test. The overall rate for the county was 56 percent. In the most recent school accountability report handed out by the Florida Department of Education, Pahokee High School was given a D.

Another challenge is Muck City's success in producing pro football players.

The foundation's Judie Gibson said that in recent years, on the first day of the summer enrichment session, the students are asked what they want to do for a living. About a third of the boys say they want to be an NFL star. During the summer, the program brings in a banker who calculates just how daunting those odds are.

"About one in a million," Gibson says.

Even Boldin – who returns to Pahokee in the spring and early summer – tells students an NFL job is unrealistic.

"I feel like when you talk about Pahokee, it's always football – football, football, football," he said. "But there's so much talent there. Singing, dancing, poetry. You name it. Kids there are extremely talented, and they need an outlet there to express themselves. To me, I'm all for sports and things like that. But there's so much else that is going on there. And kids just don't have that outlet. And that's what I want to provide for them."

For the last 100 years, Pahokee's most valuable commodity was thought to be its soil. Boldin believes its people will be its salvation. And the hope is that the kids who escape Pahokee and its poverty don't leave forever but, like him, return to help lift it from the muck.

"The thing that hasn't changed is the resiliency in the people," he said. "There's still a lot of pride in that town. There's still that us-against-the-world attitude. And you see it everywhere you go, everyone you talk to. It's a small town, but people are proud of being from Pahokee."

Chris Borland*Thanksgiving Football Is Tradition for Chris Borland

A "Turkey Bowl" game in Kettering, Ohio. A Brian Urlacher workout DVD found on Google. A love for Wisconsin football in all forms. A disdain for the Ohio State Buckeyes.

What do these things have in common?

All of them helped Chris Borland become a starting inside linebacker for the San Francisco 49ers.

Sounds a little crazy, right? Well, the previously listed things will make a lot more sense after we share the findings of two recent conversations. The first was with the rookie linebacker's older brother, Joe, who took time from his work as a prosecutor for the U.S. Army Jag Corps. in Clarksville, Tenn., to speak with us. The second was with Chris' high school football coach Ed Domsitz, who is preparing this week for the semifinal round of Ohio's state championships.

The Borland clan grew up in Kettering, although it wasn't your typical family in the football-loving hotbed of Ohio. Jeff Borland, the patriarch of the bunch, raised his six boys and one daughter to appreciate all things Wisconsin-sports-related. That's not the norm in Buckeye country. But as Joe explained it, Jeff's father, Hank Borland, was a proud alum of the University of Wisconsin.

The Borland boys often watched Badger games. They wore a lot of Green Bay Packers jerseys, too.

Chris, the second-youngest of six boys, played football with his brothers; he also tried to keep pace with them in other ways. Joe, 13 years older than his NFL-playing brother, remembered Chris running around their home with two-pound weights in each hand. The story gets better. Chris used to do that in the winter time... as a 4-year-old.

"He's always been the type of person where if he said he would do something, he would do it," Joe said. "He was always all-out, always hard-working. I think that's somewhat innate."

It makes sense then that Chris became a decorated college linebacker and is now a two-time NFL Rookie of the Week winner, plus an NFC Defensive Player of the Week honoree.

Back to Kettering.

Joe, Chris and the rest of the Borland kids played a lot of backyard football. Chris didn't play organized football until he reached high school. Jeff opted to have his sons play soccer before football. He made Chris wait until the ninth grade to put on his first pair of shoulder pads. Coach Domsitz recognized that the brotherly household competitions brought out the best in Chris when it was his time to play football. "It's not surprising considering the family," the tenured football coach at Archbishop Alter High School said. "The brothers were all very competitive."

Chris made his football debut as a freshman at Alter. He earned first-team all-state and conference player of the year honors by the time he was a senior. But in order to get to that level in the Midwestern football mecca, Borland had to make sacrifices. He had to eat the right food. He also had to work out after track and field practices.

Joe was there to make sure that Chris had guidance in the weight room. The older brother recognized that Chris' college future would hinge on whether or not Chris could play linebacker. So Chris focused on the position more than playing tailback. Joe helped coach Chris' track and field team and devised a plan that would get his brother ready for his senior season.

He went directly to the Internet.

There, Joe discovered the Urlacher workout program.

"It was a happenstance of using Google," Joe said. "He happened to be an All-Pro at that time. We appreciated his talent, but I wouldn't say we were a fan of the Chicago Bears or him specifically."

No, the Borland's loved all-things Wisconsin. So much so that Chris used the former NFL star's training regimen as a way to add body mass and explosiveness to his football arsenal. By the time Chris' senior year came around, the young linebacker weighed 217 pounds. That year, he recorded 72 tackles, one interception, one forced fumble and two fumble recoveries on his way to being named team MVP and Defensive Player of the Year by OhioVarsity.com. He was also a punter for the Knights. Despite all the improvements and dedication to his craft, Chris was a two-star recruit.

He did, however, earn Domsitz' respect. That meant that the respected coach was eager to pitch Chris to college coaches. "When it came time to talk to people on the next level about Chris," said Domsitz, who is in his 23rd season at Alter, "it was a pretty easy sell because he really had all the qualities that you want whether it was athletic or personality, character, work ethic and all of those things."

Chris was never offered a scholarship to Ohio State. It didn't matter. He didn't want to go there. Bret Bielema, Wisconsin's then head coach, offered Chris a scholarship as an "athlete." The Badgers coaching staff didn't know where they'd play Chris initially. They just knew he could play.

Chris arrived to Madison, Wis., in 2009. He instantly made an impact on special teams, according to 49ers cornerback Marcus Cromartie, a former Badger and a current member of San Francisco's practice squad. "He caused fumbles and made every tackle on special teams," Cromartie said.

Chris redshirted as a sophomore due to an injured left shoulder that required surgery. When he returned to the field, he earned a starting role on defense and created a lasting legacy of big defensive plays for a perennial power in the Big Ten Conference.

"It was pretty awesome to see him play for a team we all cheered for growing up," Joe said. "I think he learned the linebacker position during his course of time there. As a freshman, it was all about flying around and flying to the ball. But I think he later became fundamentally sound by the time he left there."

Chris started 48 games on three Rose Bowl teams at Wisconsin, including the '11 squad that featured Russell Wilson as the starting quarterback. More on him later. As for Chris, his statistics and trophies were as impressive as anybody else's in the country. He totaled 420 tackles, 50 tackles for loss, 17 sacks, 15 forced fumbles, eight fumble recoveries and 18 pass breakups. Chris left campus as the school's sixth-most prolific tackler. He was also a first-team All-American as a senior and the Big Ten's Defensive Player of the Year.

All the kids back in Kettering became Badger fans by the time Chris' career had concluded. General managers in the National Football League, however, weren't as high on Chris' future in football. The 5-foot-11, 248-pound linebacker ran a 4.83-second, 40-yard dash at the 2014 NFL Scouting Combine.

Chris's scouting profile on NFL.com included this passage in the "weaknesses" section:

"Is short with Tyrannosaurus rex arms -- too easily neutralized (struggles to disengage). Eclipsed by larger offensive linemen. Can do a better job protecting his legs. Average explosion, tackle strength and pop on contact. Lets runners escape his grasp. Exposed in space. Has man-coverage limitations, especially against tight ends (lacks length to match up). Durability could be an issue."

Domsitz was aware of the critiques. But as a football coach, he knew it was hard to measure Chris' best talents: heart and hustle.

"You're watching his film and you see an aggressive player," Domsitz said. "He looks a lot faster than someone who is tentative. Chris just gets after it when you watch him. You knock him down and he gets back up."

Chris' draft status got knocked down in the weeks heading into the draft. Even so, the Borland family remained upbeat about his ascension into professional football. The family watched the second day of the draft from a restaurant in Kettering. When Chris received a call informing him he'd been selected 77th overall by San Francisco, the room erupted with applause.

Joe felt like it was a great fit with the franchise's proud winning tradition. Domsitz noted that Chris would have been an excellent choice for the Packers if Green Bay had gone in that direction in the second round. The Packers later picked eight selections after Borland's ultimate third-round landing spot. "He could have been the governor of Wisconsin one day," the coach said. "People just loved him."

It took seven or eight weeks into the '14 season for Bay Area football fans to really love Chris' on-field contributions. The rookie linebacker made his initial impact on special teams. Behind the scenes, he wowed teammates with his penchant for practice interceptions. So when star linebacker Patrick Willis was lost for the season with a toe injury, Chris' inclusion into the starting lineup was met with anticipation from his veteran teammates. They wanted to see if his practice skills would carry over onto gameday.

They did.

Chris currently leads the 49ers with 88 tackles, according to the count of San Francisco's coaching staff. He posted 15 tackles in his first start on the road against Peyton Manning and the Denver Broncos.

"That was quite a start, Peyton Manning on basically, 'Peyton Manning Day' where he was set to break an NFL record for most touchdown passes," Joe quipped. "It was trial by fire for him, but we were excited for him. He's improved since that game and each subsequent week. I guess you might as well start with one of the best of all time."

Chris followed that performance with 69 tackles in his next four starts. The five-game stint as a starter included a clutch overtime fumble recovery to help the 49ers beat the New Orleans Saints in Week 10. Domsitz had the game on before a coach's meeting in Kettering. As soon as Drew Brees lost control of the ball, the high school coach couldn't locate Chris. "He wasn't even on the screen," Domsitz said. "He was knocked down and when the ball was on the ground, Chris wasn't even on the TV screen, but he was over there recovering the fumble."

The following week, Chris intercepted Eli Manning twice to go along with his 13 tackles in a road win over the New York Giants. Joe, who talks with his younger brother weekly, was in attendance to watch Chris play in what turned out to be his first NFC Defensive Player of the Week performance.

"The guys in front of him have opened a lot for him," Joe said. "And the coaches have prepared him well. I was just glad when he had the opportunity he took advantage of it and made some plays. I also know that he's appreciative of accolades, but he won't let that go to his head. He'll just keep on preparing as he always has for the next game."

The next game is on a familiar day for the Borland family: Thanksgiving. Although Chris hasn't played in a "Turkey Bowl" game since his high school days, he has a pretty good memory of that battle. Just like any other group of family and friends who gather to play recreational football games hours before a Thanksgiving meal, the Borland's were no different. Only, their game was a little more physical than most neighborhood contests.

In the last "Borland Turkey Bowl," Chris caught the game-winning touchdown pass from Joe, earning the right to hoist a trophy topped with a plastic turkey head. Chris earned the hardware, too. He collided with a sapling tree and bloodied his forehead as he caught the winning pass. But as Joe tells it, Chris wasn't even the toughest player in the yard that day. Sarah Borland, the only female sibling of the bunch, suffered a dislocated shoulder in the game. What did she do after the injury? Oh, she just popped her shoulder back into place and kept playing.

"She's probably the toughest of any of us," Joe said.

Chris will look to channel Sarah's strength in Thursday's game against Wilson, his former college teammate. The primetime Thanksgiving game that will have 13 Borland family members at Levi's® Stadium will pit San Francisco against one of its biggest rivals, the Seattle Seahawks. Wilson told reporters this week how much he respects the 49ers linebacker.

"A lot of people said he was too short, too," the Seattle signal-caller said. "But he can make a lot of plays. You see it on film, too. He's getting to the quarterback; he's racking up those tackles and just making plays. He's a star player."

Chris BorlandHere he goes again: Rookie LB Borland facing familiar questions

By Eric Branch
San Francisco Chronicle
August 10, 2014

After he arrived at Arkansas in 2013, defensive coordinator Chris Ash treated some of his new players to game tape he viewed more like an instructional video.

The unofficial title: The ABCs of playing LB.

The main character: Chris Borland, an inside linebacker whom Ash had coached the previous three seasons at Wisconsin.

"I told them, 'You study this guy,'" said Ash, now the defensive coordinator at Ohio State. "'Look at his stance, his steps, his footwork, the way he tackles. Just watch and study this guy because I promise you're going to learn a lot from him.'"

It's clear what Ash thinks of Borland's tape. But it's also evident NFL personnel executives weren't as taken with Mr. Textbook, the 2013 Big 10 Defensive Player of the Year who ranks second in FBS history with 15 forced fumbles. Borland had first-round production at Wisconsin but slipped to the third round of the draft, where the 49ers selected him No. 77 overall.

Now, in the embryonic stages of his NFL career, the undersized (5-11, 248), slow (4.83 40-yard dash), short-armed (alligator-like 29 1/4-inch levers) Borland has morphed from college star to case study. Will the first-team All-American be a reminder evaluators can overemphasize a prospect's so-called measurables, or will his physical limitations now be exposed?

The 49ers are obviously interested in finding out. Borland is competing with frontrunner Michael Wilhoite to temporarily replace All-Pro NaVorro Bowman, who could miss the first half of the season because of a knee injury.

"There are some limitations," Borland said. "Obviously, not the biggest guy in stature. Straight-line speed wasn't my forte either. But I play very fast because I know the game, I take proper angles and know all my assignments."

Those who know Borland best are believers. They've underestimated him before and don't intend to get fooled again. To understand why, it's necessary to travel to 2008.

It was the summer before Borland's senior year at Archbishop Alter High in Kettering, Ohio, and he'd been invited to Wisconsin's three-day prospect camp only because he'd initiated contact with the coaching staff.

He arrived familiar with rejection. As a 200-pound running back who hoped to play linebacker in college, his visits to camps at Ohio State, Indiana, Purdue and Pittsburgh had inspired yawns instead of scholarship offers.

Despite his Ohio roots, Wisconsin was his dream school. His grandfather had attended UW, his dad, Jeff, grew up in Madison and the Borlands — Chris is the second-youngest of seven children — were devoted Packers fans.

How desperate was Borland to play for the Badgers? That was clear at the end of the first day when head coach Bret Bielema told players who had kicked or punted to see defensive line coach Charlie Partridge, who also worked with the specialists.

“Well, Borland comes waddling over there,” said Partridge, the head coach at Florida Atlantic. “He’s barely ever punted and starts hammering punts. I mean, here’s this little sawed-off, 5-foot-whatever, well-built kid that’s a linebacker that says ‘Yeah, I’ll try that.’”

Partridge was struck by the kid’s spunk. But in the final two days of the full-padded camp it became obvious Borland was better at kicking butt than footballs.

“He was making play, after play, after play,” Partridge said. “I mean, tackles, (pass breaks-ups), interceptions, in pass-rushing drills he was embarrassing kids — making kids miss, running over kids. It was an amazing display and it was just one of these deals where ... I’ll be truthful with you. The Big 10 is a smash-mouth league. So it was ‘Is he big enough?’ Same old question, right?”

“Bret Bielema, to his credit, finally stepped up and said ‘We are taking him. This kid is going to be a great football player.’”

Borland was prepared for his moment at UW’s camp because of a maniacal work ethic. It was partially instilled in him by his oldest brother, Joe, 35, who helped his brother train following Chris’ sophomore season.

After Chris determined his goal was to play Division I, Joe mapped out a plan. Chris, he knew, wasn’t fast enough to play running back at a high level. However, his instincts, toughness and lateral quickness made linebacker a logical fit.

The plan: Chris would begin weight-lifting-intensive workouts used by then-Bears All-Pro linebacker Brian Urlacher, whose workouts Joe pulled from the Internet.

After Chris’ track practices in the spring — he was fifth in the state in the shot put as a junior — they retired to the weight room to transform Chris’ body.

Joe, who played seven sports in high school, is a prosecutor in the U.S. Army JAG Corps who has served in Iraq and Afghanistan. Looking back, he identifies a watershed moment when Chris committed to realizing his goal.

“He was throwing in the shot put and some of his friends came up and said ‘Hey, we’re going to play pickup basketball after practice,’” Joe said. “He looked at me like ‘Hey, can we skip lifting today? I said ‘It’s your choice, but you’re making a decision whether you’re making a commitment to play at the DI level, or you’re going to play pickup basketball with the guys. You have to be fully committed.’”

Borland’s capacity for work helps explain his off-the-charts instincts.

At Wisconsin, Ash was struck when he watched game video on Sundays of moments he'd missed in the previous day's game. Before the snap, he'd notice Borland barking out the upcoming offensive play to teammates and moving a split second before the other 21 players on the field.

Much of it was based on clues – perhaps a shift in an offensive lineman's stance – he'd detailed during solitary February film-study sessions.

"You don't typically see a college football player at that time of year in the football office on a Sunday morning taking notes of himself and opponents," Ash said. "We're not in spring practice. We're not in summer camp. It's the middle of winter in Wisconsin and Chris is filling his notepad while watching film of opponents, himself, NFL players. Whatever he could think of to do, he was doing it."

Borland, 23, has taken those habits to the NFL, where few doubt his desire or football IQ. Wilhoite, 28, a three-year veteran, has taken the unusual step of seeking out the rookie for advice, wanting to learn how Borland routinely puts himself in the right position.

Still, the Darwinian NFL has a way of dismissing those who don't physically measure up. Ash, however, believes the league's evaluators don't have a test to accurately gauge what Borland possesses.

"Chris Borland doesn't pass the eye test, but what he has in his heart and in his head you can't measure," Ash said. "Whether he makes it with the 49ers, or some other team, he is going to make it in the NFL. He's going to make it because of who he is and how he works."

Chris BorlandChris Borland: The short, slow, short-armed 'baller'

By Eric Branch

Here is what 49ers rookie linebacker Chris Borland, a third-round pick from Wisconsin, doesn't possess:

HEIGHT: Of the 99 linebackers who have been top-80 draft picks since 2005, Borland (5-11 ½, 248) is one of four under 6-0.

ARM LENGTH: Of the 166 linebackers who have attended the NFL combine since 2010, Borland has the second-shortest arms (29 ¼ inches). Only the Browns' Brandon Magee (28 ¾), who entered the NFL as an undrafted free agent in 2012, has shorter levers.

SPEED: Of the 27 linebackers who ran at the combine, Borland's 4.83-second 40-yard dash ranked 21st.

Given all that Borland isn't, it's remarkable what he is: 1) The reigning Big 10 Defensive Player of the Year; 2) The player with the second-most forced fumbles (15) in FBS history; 3) The only Wisconsin linebacker since 1951 to be named a first-team All-American.

Before the draft, NFL Network analyst Mike Mayock raved about him:

"Borland is one of my two or three favorite players in this draft. The way I came on him was funny because I was getting ready to do a Notre Dame game. I was doing homework on BYU. The tape I happened to put in was Wisconsin. And I'm like, this (No.) 44 is everywhere.

"So I was kind of hooked on him early and every tape I've seen since then just reinforces to me that he could have the ability to be the (Buffalo LB) Kiko Alonso of this year's group. I think he is probably going to go in the second round. I think he is going to start for whatever team takes him. And as long as he stays healthy, he is just going to keep making plays. The kid makes plays. He's around the football all the time. I love watching him play football."

After the draft, 49ers general manager Trent Baalke was similarly smitten:

"How can you not love him as a football player? Not tall enough. Not fast enough. Arms are too short. You hear all of that. We just love the makeup. We love the player. He's everything you're looking for from a DNA standpoint. He loves the game. He's a smart football player. He's an extremely instinctive football player. He's overcome that lack of arm length. He's overcome that lack of speed that is being talked about. He's just a baller."

Of the 49ers' 12 draft picks, Borland's career could be the most intriguing to track.

Will the No. 77 overall pick be an undersized college star whose limitations are exposed in the NFL? One example: Florida State's All-American inside linebacker Buster Davis (5-10), the No. 69 pick in 2007. Never heard of Davis? There's a reason. He had 18 tackles and three starts in his two-year career.

Or will Borland join the linebackers he's looked up to who reside in The Undersized Linebacker Hall of Fame: Sam Mills (5-9), London Fletcher (5-10) and Zach Thomas (5-11), a trio that collected 16 Pro Bowl berths and played 41 seasons.

Borland, who will compete to fill in while NaVorro Bowman is sidelined at the start of the season, is confident his formula for college success will carry over.

"There are some limitations," he said. "Obviously, not the biggest guy in stature. Straight-line speed wasn't my forte either. But I play very fast because I know the game. I take proper angles and know all my assignments."

Niners defensive coordinator Vic Fangio knows from experience pint-sized linebackers can flourish after coaching Mills for 10 seasons with the Saints and USFL's Philadelphia Stars. But the straight-shooting Fangio also knows not all sub-6-foot-linebackers morph into Mills.

"It'll be interesting to see if (Borland's) game translates to the NFL," Fangio said to Sports Illustrated's Peter King.

When that quote was relayed to him, Borland tackled it head-on.

"I think coach Fangio's exactly right," he said. "You have to prove yourself at the next level. Your college (career) doesn't matter. It's a brand new slate. I intend on proving my skills at this level."

Derek CarrierSmall-school story: TE Carrier traveled unlikely path to NFL

By Eric Branch
San Francisco Chronicle
August 1, 2014

As a senior at Edgerton (Wis.) High School, 49ers tight end Derek Carrier came to a fork in the road.

And he chose the path likely to take him light years away from the NFL.

Carrier's decision: Accept an offer to play at Division I blueblood Wisconsin as a preferred walk-on, or attend Beloit (Wis.) College, a brainy Division III school that had never produced an NFL player?

Former Beloit head coach Chris Brann says Carrier's choice to eschew the Big Ten for the Midwest Conference was a stunner. But Carrier, a pre-med major who graduated summa cum laude, wanted to attend a top-notch academic school where he could play multiple sports. He also played basketball for two seasons and ran track one year at the private liberal-arts college of 1,300 students.

"In 22 years of coaching college football, I've had very few players that were preferred walk-ons at a major Division I school that came to us," Brann said. "What led to that? Derek's priorities were in order and he made the decision based on what was on his heart at the time."

Said Carrier: "Wisconsin told me I would get redshirted for sure and probably not play until my junior and senior year. That sounds like a great deal to a lot of kids, but I wasn't thinking about playing in the NFL at that point in my life."

So Carrier's heart took him to Beloit, where, improbably, his legs still led him to the NFL.

A wide receiver in college, Carrier was a four-year starter who set school records for receptions (189), yards (3,111) and touchdowns (29). NFL scouts yawned at his numbers against the future stockbrokers of Lake Forest and Lawrence, but Carrier's 2012 pro-day performance before representatives from all 32 teams at Wisconsin demanded their attention.

At 6-foot-4 and 238 pounds, Carrier ran a 4.51-second 40-yard dash, had a 40-inch vertical jump and ran the three-cone drill in 6.69 seconds. For perspective, his vertical jump would have ranked fourth and his three-cone time would have been second among wide receivers at the 2012 NFL combine.

His agent, Ron Slavin, from Madison, Wis., no longer had to promote his once-anonymous client after Carrier's performance.

"It was really off the charts, so that's when the interest started," Slavin said. "Scouts started seriously watching his film and realizing what an athlete he is. I talked to all 32 teams about him."

Just over two years later, Carrier, 24, is the only Division III product on the 49ers' 90-man training-camp roster. But the former undrafted free agent isn't an overnight small-school success story.

After spending 2012 on the Eagles' practice squad, Carrier was signed to the 49ers' practice squad last year and made his NFL debut in November when tight end Garrett Celek was sidelined by hamstring injury. Carrier played 45 snaps in five games, was inactive in five others and didn't have a reception.

This season, he's battling Celek for a roster spot as the No. 3 tight end. Celek hasn't participated in the first seven training-camp practices because of a back injury, which has given Carrier an opening to cement a job.

To do so, Carrier needs to continue to progress as a blocker, a must-have ability for tight ends in an offense that's ranked among the NFL's top seven in rushing attempts the past three seasons.

"If you're going to play in the core of the formation you've got to be a winning player in the run game in some way," 49ers offensive coordinator Greg Roman said. "And Derek has the raw tools to do it, but he's got to do it consistently.

"He's got a chance to be a productive player in this league. There's no doubt. Derek's got a nice feel for the passing game, he's got good hands and he can cover some ground now — he can really run. I don't like to put timetables on people, but this a big year for him. He's got a hell of an opportunity this year to really take a big step."

Carrier never imagined he'd have an opportunity to play in the NFL until midway through his college career when, Brann says, "opponents were scared of him and didn't want to tackle him." Carrier stopped playing basketball after his sophomore season and devoted himself to one sport.

"I decided to stick with football and see where that would lead me," Carrier said. "You ask anyone out here — the opportunity to play at this level is once in a lifetime. If you even have the chance to play at this level, you have to take advantage of it."

If Carrier's career doesn't develop, his education has provided him with an attractive fall-back option. After sporting a 3.95 GPA in high school, and making the dean's list for six straight semesters at Beloit, he plans to pursue a career in sports medicine.

"I'm not really looking to it now," Carrier said. "If you have a goal, or somewhere you want to be, you have to fully invested in that. And I'm all in."

Michael CrabtreeThe Real Michael Crabtree

By Taylor Price

September 3, 2014

The sun is making its presence felt and it's not even 6 a.m. I'm not used to this at all. I'm from the Bay Area, where we think 70-degree weather is a scorcher. I'm dealing with the dry heat for good reason, though. I'm in Texas to pick up San Francisco 49ers wide receiver Michael Crabtree and spend the next two days with him. I'm not exactly his Uber driver on this Saturday morning in June, but I will be his chauffeur of sorts.

The plan for this excursion was hatched during San Francisco's offseason program. Crabtree and I have built a good working relationship as team star receiver and team reporter during his tenure with the Niners. A mutual respect was formed from the first time I met him as our first-round draft pick in April of 2009. Through the years, I watched from afar and appreciated his passion for playing the game – and his penchant for wearing the illest football cleats in the National Football League. I'm a sneakerhead, so what? I also write about football and happen to appreciate wide receivers who throw themselves into defenders to spring a running back loose, or wideouts who make difficult catches look routine and inspire Jim Harbaugh to trust his life in their hands.

Crabtree... wait; let's just call him "Crab." To avoid confusion, I won't call him by the nicknames that his relatives use. "Fat Pookie" and "Rusty" are the best ones he told me about during our car ride. "I've got so many," Crab says. "I don't think my family calls me by my real name. If one of my family members says, 'Mike,' that's a problem. They never call me 'Mike.' They never call me, 'Crab.' It's always 'Pookie.' I wonder where that name came from... My whole dad's side used to call me 'Rusty,' because I never put on any lotion."

Crab and I smoothed out the plans for this story in May. It started when he came up to me in the team's Santa Clara locker room and asked if I wanted to cover his third youth football camp in Dallas. I didn't hesitate. I said, "Yes" right away. The timing and purpose for the story matched up. San Francisco plays the Dallas Cowboys on Sunday, Sept. 7 in Week 1 of the regular season and traveling to Dallas would allow us to get a behind-the-scenes story worthy of 49er Studios' new television show, "The Forty Niner Way." Nobody knows about Crab's football camp and how he's giving back to his hometown community. We needed to document that information, so 49ers producer Michael Blevins and I gathered all the camera equipment necessary to document Crab in his home environment. We plotted and planned – Harbaugh would be proud – and we got ready for a weekend with Crab.

What I learned was much more than how he's sponsoring kids to be active in Dallas' Oak Cliff YMCA. I got to know the real Michael Crabtree, the football addict who used to sell hot dogs and water bottles at the Cowboys old home, Texas Stadium, as a way to get football gloves from Pro Football Hall of Famers Michael Irvin and Deion Sanders. I learned about the person who used to cautiously drive around and scour junkyards to find car parts for his cherished Lexus. I discovered more about Crab's philosophy on dealing with the media. Now I fully understand why he chooses to let his words speak with authority. He doesn't utter statements just to have his name appear in a newspaper, Internet blog or a nightly newscast.

Crab told me that he had never let anybody in the media document his life in an in-depth way. So we had to do it right. No pressure, I thought.

Crab was accommodating and gracious as we put a microphone on his beige dress shirt and began filming our experience. He bought Blevins and I breakfast and was super chill when our rental car nearly broke down on the way to a local TV interview. He laughed at my corny jokes when I tried to make light of an awkward situation. He was good to us. Crab let us tag along for the weekend when all he had to do was say, "Meet me at my camp. It starts at 10 a.m. on Sunday." This trip was so much more than that. He gave us access into his world and I discovered much about his approach to life. I also spoke to his parents and good friends and heard them describe the real person that we see catch footballs from Colin Kaepernick for a living.

Back to the Uber ride. I'm in the driver's seat and Blevins is in the backseat after we pick up Crab and his Crab 5 Foundation director, Rodney Baker, a classmate at Dallas' David W. Carter High School. The two football players, four years apart, reconnected through Twitter last December, and now Baker runs the Crab 5 Foundation. Baker helped arrange the day's scheduled events: morning interview at Dallas' CBS affiliate, a speaking engagement for Carter's football teams, a lunch for the young players and a charity dinner at the home of Brett and Sanka Stalcup, two of Crab's close friends and mentors. Baker was also a driving force in setting up Sunday's youth camp.

Crab's being a good sport about being in front of the cameras at six in the morning and we're not even at CBS yet. I strike up conversation since we have Sony Action cameras mounted on the dashboards like an episode of Catfish. I tell Crab that this is my first real visit to Dallas. He's taken back by the comment.

Crab: This is your first time in Dallas?

Me: Yeah. I had a connecting flight here once, but that doesn't count.

Crab: (laughs)

Me: I was out in Austin last year for South by Southwest. That was nice. Austin has the weird food culture. They have interesting stuff to eat. I was out there trying new things. I liked that.

Crab: I think that's just Texas, period.

Me: They take their bacon seriously.

Crab: Yeah, they're frying bacon, seasoning bacon.

Me: I liked bacon, but I think I fell in love with bacon last year. I had chocolate-wrapped bacon. I had jalapenos stuffed and wrapped with bacon. You name it, I could go off on it – I had bacon with grilled cheese...

Crab: Man, you never had a bacon grilled cheese?

Me: Mostly grilled cheese – we didn't put bacon in it.

Crab: Come on, put in bacon!

Me: I found out you can put bacon in everything. It goes with every course.

Crab: They'll be laughing at me at the facility. I put sugar and butter in my grits. I said, "Isn't that what you're supposed to do?" They said, "No!" I guess I don't know any better. Grits, that's the best thing ever. You gotta try it. Put some sugar and some butter – have it country-style.

I drive us up a hill on Mercado Street toward the TV studio, and just as I accelerate, our rental car stops cooperating. The check-engine light pops on. I try to play it off, but my blood starts to boil and that uncomfortable internal feeling – the one where your body temperature feels like you drank 10 cups of coffee – starts to set in. Did our documentary project just end? It seems so. While Crab shoots his TV interview, I talk with a customer service rep from the rental car agency. Fortunately for us, the next time I start the car up, our SUV comes to life and the engine light goes away. It's now time for breakfast – and those Texas grits.

It's 6:45 in the morning, and the CBS reviews come in via text. Bessie Turner, Crabtree's mother, sends a message with encouraging words and an accompanying video of his sit-down with KTVT morning anchor Adrienne Bankert. Crab studies it as if he's watching game tape. "Don't do it," he says looking back at himself playing on his black iPhone 5. "Don't be outgoing right now! That's what's always on my mind like, 'Don't do it!'"

Crab does well in the interview, from what I'm able to observe from the driver's seat. But he's also a perfectionist. "Bro, it was so early," he tells me. "I couldn't get right." Crab's mind turns to breakfast, and I'm right there with him. All this driving has made me hungry. "Real talk: Cracker Barrel has the hottest breakfast," Crab says. "Like, literally hot. You'll get their pancakes and they're hot. Everybody else, they just lay a plate down and you say, 'I guess I'll eat this breakfast...'"

The Niners wideout has a long history of being meticulous with his choices. No stone, or hot cake goes unturned. Bessie explains this to us at the camp hosted at Southern Methodist University. "I'm definitely proud of Michael," she says. "Mike has done some great things in his football career and he's not going to be satisfied. He's not going to be satisfied until y'all win the Super Bowl – that's him. That ain't a joke – that ain't a play thing – that's who he is. He likes winning."

Crab has been hardcore about football for some time. He used to play ball for hours with 20-plus kids in his Oak Cliff neighborhood. "He never played inside the house," Bessie says. "If you were dealing with Michael at home, he was chill. You couldn't get anything out of him. He might have said three words. But when you put him on the football field, he was a different kid."

Crab is also unique with his on-field fashion. He jokes that he's been wearing red uniforms ever since his middle school days, but we have scrapbook pictures of him in a blue Moorland Cowboys pee-wee uniform, sent by his father, Michael Crabtree Sr.

The Crabtree family has deeper ties to "America's Team." Bessie sold concessions at Texas Stadium in the mid-1990s, and Crab tagged along to raise funds for his football team. Crab got rid of his items faster than anyone else. Why? So he could go to the front row and ask for gear from Dallas' star players. "When he would get ready to play on the little league team," Bessie recalls, "I would say, 'Where did he get all that NFL stuff from?' That was one of the best highlights. He would have the best outfit. He would have the gloves and the towel; it was just so cool. It's like he always aimed to be like that."

When he was old enough to drive, Crab took pride in his used Lexus LS300. He tried to make his four-door ride even fancier with trips to a nearby junkyard. Crab used Velcro to keep the gas tank closed. He also kept a gallon of water in the car in case his transmission overheated. But the most endearing feature of his first car – as he tells it – was its take-off speed. Crab couldn't step on the gas pedal too hard; he had to keep it around 20 miles per hour most of the time. "Everybody thought I was a smooth driver," he says, laughing.

It's now a little after 10 a.m., as he helps me merge into a right lane by rolling down his window and asking a driver to let our SUV in. "We're good now," he says. Crab knows his way around the commuter-heavy Dallas freeways. He drove them carefully in his Lexus and as a prominent athlete in Dallas' competitive prep sports scene. Back then, he competed in basketball, football and track and field. The latter sport was his least favorite. He's still sour about Dallas high school athletes being forced to wear water shoes on the track and not spikes. After one embarrassing slip in front of his peers, Crab stuck to playing on the hardwood and gridiron. Football, in particular, was always his top choice. Crabtree Sr. was his football coach up until middle school and they formed a tight bond through the sport. Crab, one of six children in the family, helped his father break down film at a young age. "It started from pee-wee football and I pretty much feel the same about him now as I did then," Senior says. "Seeing him grow and become the person he is today, it's really great."

Crab respects his parents, but he recalls that their styles being vastly different. "My dad, he used to be on me at an early age," Crab says. "He was one those dads where if you scored five touchdowns, he'd say, 'You would have had seven if you did this.' My mom was probably tougher than my daddy though."

Bessie was especially strong in the disciplinary role. "I understood at an early age who was the toughest," Crab says. "You get in trouble at school and they'd say, 'I'm going to call your mama,' and I'd be like, 'I'm not even worried about it; you can call my mama. Do whatever you need to do.' But in reality, I was like, 'Please don't call my mama!'"

In turn, Bessie recognizes her son was good at heart. He just caused family members anxiety in a different way. "He's never been a troublemaker," she says, "but he'll cause problems on the field. He wants to play football. He wants to win. He's only hyper on the field. Everything else is low-key."

Crab got called out for being late to class a few times, but he still was respected as the starting quarterback at Carter High, the school made famous for its role in "Friday Night Lights." As was the case with most Dallas prep schools, the team's run-first offensive attack featured the best athlete on the team at quarterback. That's where you'll find Crab in his high school highlight tapes. The 16th-ranked athlete nationally and four-star recruit in his 2006 class, according to Rivals.com, was offered a scholarship to Texas Tech University to play wide receiver.

Crab blew up at Tech. He won two Biletnikoff Awards as the nation's best wide receiver. He caught 231 passes for 3,127 receiving yards and 41 touchdowns in two seasons for the Red Raiders. It was ridiculous. People still remember his 28-yard tight-rope touchdown catch; the YouTube clip that saw him beat the seventh-ranked Texas Longhorns with eight seconds left at home. Crab hears about that moment all the time, especially when he's in the Lone Star State. "It was one of those games where we shouldn't have been in that situation any way," he says. "It was exciting. Everyone was on the field, happy that we won."

Crab parlayed his redshirt sophomore season into a first-round selection in the 2009 NFL Draft. Six years later, he is a leader in the wide receiver's meeting room and a go-to play-maker for one of the league's perennial Super Bowl contenders. We talk about how he's four years away from having his number 5 jersey retired by Tech, which requires a 10-year grace period before celebrating its Hall of Fame inductees. Crab is a no-brainer as a first-ballot inductee. He can't wait for that ceremony. It's getting closer, but so is the start of the NFL season. We shift the conversation from his experiences in Lubbock, Texas to what he's gone through with the Niners.

You can understand why Crab is in the best shape of his football life. He's been through a lot. Even so, the 6-foot-1, 214-pound receiver has caught 279 passes for 3,629 receiving yards and 22 touchdowns in 63 career games in San Francisco. A five-game holdout as a rookie added another year onto his original contract making him slated for free agency following the '14 season. Recent reports indicate that Crab and the Niners have made progress on a contract extension, but that topic doesn't come up in our car ride. That business can wait. Crab's story is more about him overcoming recent trials and tribulations. For starters, he was involved in the final play of San Francisco's heart-breaking defeats in both Super Bowl XLVII and last year's NFC title game. I'll spare Niner fans from the play-by-plays. Crab also suffered a torn right Achilles tendon in May 2013 offseason workouts. The injury sidelined him for 11 regular season games and caused him to cancel his 2013 football camp. "He had surgery and called me the next day," Baker remembers. "He was sad. He was hurt. His whole goal was to get healthy. Whatever he had to do to get back on the field, he did, and he came back pretty quick." Crab returned to the field six months after the severe injury and admitted to reporters that he wasn't 100-percent healthy at the time. Despite his health status, Crab provided a spark to San Francisco's passing attack, helping the team reach a third consecutive conference championship Game.

That brings us back to present day. Crab has a noticeable burst off the line of scrimmage. He's leaner and lighter than his 2013 playing weight. He's also stronger for what he's experienced, both mentally and physically. "It's a learning experience," Crab says. "I'm sure a lot of guys went to championship games and lost before they actually won, you know?"

Just as we go through the Super Bowl fallout in our car ride, Crab's day takes a turn for the worse. It's my fault. I mishear Siri's instructions on my iPhone 5 and I veer toward the Dallas Love Field Airport. "Bro, did we really just drive through the airport?" Crab razzes me. "Oh, Lord. This is crazy... The funny thing about this, as soon as you come out the airport – you have to pay some money. So we're going to have to pay... Taylor got us going through the airport!"

It was worth the $2 charge, one that I added to my company expense report. Although it was slightly embarrassing, we were able to make good time on the way to our next stop, Crab's high school for a noon speaking engagement.

Me: It's only two bucks.

Crab: Only two bucks? Do you know what you can buy with two dollars?

Me: In California it's like five dollars to cross any bridge.

Crab: We're in Texas, though. Two dollars, that's like five dollars.

Most people in Dallas know about the Super Bowl. They also know about the NFC title game and about how the game ended. They don't dwell on it. They support their local star. They want to see him win it all.

By this point of the day, the Texas heat lives up to its reputation, and I'm reminded why rent is so high in the Bay Area. Right on time, I pull into the parking lot at Carter High. Inside the school's basketball gym where Crab "used to get buckets," awaits 50-plus kids, all of them itching to follow in Crab's footsteps and become a high-profile NFL star.

"Get the grades," Crab tells the kids in a short, but impactful speech that lasts less than five minutes.

The Niners wideout relays what nearly held him back coming out of high school – his SAT scores. Crab had to raise them to get accepted into Tech. He has no problem sharing the information with the Carter football players. "I always wanted him to go to college and be a good person and be happy with whatever he chose to do, but he was destined," Bessie says. "He told me, 'I'm going to play football. I'm not going to be a scientist. I'm going to play football, mom.'"

Crab's talk concludes, but he's still the center of attention as we walk out of the gym. He poses for a group photo with the 50-plus kids and tells them of a surprise. Lunch is on him. It's going to be at Cajun restaurant, Pappadeaux's Seafood Kitchen. Blevins, Baker, Crab and I pile back in the SUV and I drive us over to lunch for some local fare. Inside a private dining area within the restaurant, the young football players take a look through large menus. Most choose seafood dishes. (I found it funny to see one of them eat crab legs just 10 feet or so from the player known as "King Crab" on Twitter and Instagram.) The kids grub on appetizers and main courses, and their smiles are ear-to-ear across the room. The same look is on Crab's face. He signs an autograph on the lunch tab and says his goodbyes to the room full of Carter players, making sure each kid knew they were invited to his football camp the following day.

By this time it's 2:30 in the afternoon and it feels like a whole day has already passed – yet Crab remains upbeat. He knows what's coming next – a fundraising event for his foundation at the Stalcups' immaculate Dallas home. Crab says goodbye to our car ride, the one that started before the sun came up. He goes off to freshen up at his hotel and we return to our abode to prepare for the next portion of our shoot.

The fundraiser is a casual affair, but Crab still showcases his personal style. He is, after all, the reason everybody came out. Being basic is out of question. The Niners wideout pulls up to his foundation event at seven in the evening. He steps out of a sleek all white silver Rolls Royce Phantom in an all-black ensemble, complete with black and yellow Jordan 14 retros and one of his own "Last of a Dying Breed" (LODB) brand shirts. Crab's attire is complete with stylish black frames by Alexander McQueen. The charity cocktail party is definitely a moment to enjoy for the receiver. "As a boy, you dreamed of this day," he says. "Just looking back on it, nobody really had a football camp or a legit foundation for the youth. I always thought of it like, 'Once I make it, I'm going to come back and do something for the kids.' A lot of guys aren't genuine about it, but when it's coming from the heart, you enjoy it."

Michael Crabtree Visits Former High School

Crab's closest NFL friends flood the event. Delanie Walker, a former Niners tight end, represents the Tennessee Titans and Tony Jerod-Eddie mingle with the crowd and sign autographs for the attendees. There's more NFL players – Ted Ginn Jr. of the Arizona Cardinals and Von Miller of the Denver Broncos are also among the notable guests. "Even though we're not on the same team, we're always going to be friends," Walker says. "I played with him, and you built a bond when you play together. We're like family. If he asks me to come out here and support something that's so positive, that's what I'm going to do. Crab has always been that type of person. That's something you don't see of football players, behind the scenes, behind the locker room. He always had that passion. Growing up where he grew up, he wanted to help change his community.”

Crab’s foundation dinner raises more than $50,000 through tickets and a silent auction. The money will allow 200-plus inner city youth to participate in a variety of programs at the Oak Cliff YMCA.

For the Stalcup, hosting the fundraiser is an easy choice. Brett Stalcup, a proud Tech alum and respected lawyer in Dallas, mentors Crab with personal and professional advice. They’ve seen tremendous growth in him, especially in his philanthropic interests. “He doesn’t brag about it, but he has a huge heart,” Brett says. “All you have to do is visit with him and listen to him. He’s very bright and intelligent. He’s his own man and people can say what they want to say, but I know his heart, and his heart is true and good and it’s all about kids for him.”

Crab continues his charitable work on Sunday with his youth camp at SMU. Crab and his NFL friends also make an incredible entrance; they run out of the SMU home tunnel through smoke-machine created clouds. Campers line up down the field like NFL players awaiting the announcement of their starting lineup. Crab can’t even fully run out for his entrance – the kids mob him immediately.

SMU’s Gerald J. Ford Field also happens to be the sight of perhaps his most memorable football game in his home state. On Sept. 3, 2007, Tech beat SMU, 49-9. Crab shined in front of his friends and family, catching 12 passes for 106 yards and three touchdowns. “Everybody was in awe,” Bessie says. “It was wild.”

Crab proudly considers himself to be a family man. That’s why his Dallas roots are so important to him. He often home because he loves a good family cookout and dominating his relatives in a game of dominoes. In our Saturday car ride, Crab tells me that’s where the “King” moniker comes from: dominoes, not football.

The proud Texan will be back in Dallas very soon, but not to play leisurely games. There will be many red number 15 jerseys inside of AT&T Stadium when Crab returns on Sept. 7. Crab’s father, for one, never misses his son’s games. Crabtree Sr. is already besieged with ticket requests. “Everybody is trying to hit me up, all our friends, our family,” Senior says. “It’s going to be crazy.”

Crab now has more than just football on his mind. He and his girlfriend Jae welcomed their first child into the world on Aug. 18, Michael Anthony Crabtree III. It’s safe to say Crab will be busy upon his Week 1 road trip. Besides game-planning for the Cowboys, he’ll be catching up with his son and sharpening his diaper-changing skills.

Crab says he’s enjoying all the hype that’s building up before his return to Dallas. “I like all that,” Crab says. “In football you always get a chance to come back and show people what the real deal is. You always get a chance. You live to see another down.”

The Niners will see plenty of downs, and they’ll do it for 16 regular season games with Crab and Anquan Boldin as their starting receivers. “I’m definitely going to give the people what they want,” Crab says. “Put it like this: I’ve been doing this, I’ve been the man on the field since middle school. It’s nothing new to me. I’m in my prime right now. I don’t really have time to be playing. I’m all business.”

That’s “The real Michael Crabtree.”

He speaks like a man on a mission. He's also carrying out what he learned from another veteran receiver. "Be yourself," Crab says. "That's one thing I want to get out to the kids. That's one thing I learned from Randy Moss. It's really OK to be yourself. In that short period of time he taught me – being you is the best thing you can be."

The camp and weekend with Crab was a huge success. Each camper gets a Jordan Brand T-shirt and an opportunity to work with NFL stars. I had a chance to see Crab in his home environment and share it with people who've never seen him in that light. By three on Sunday afternoon, it's almost time for us to leave. There's just enough left for us to interview Crab on camera before flying back to the Bay Area. I thank Crab for hosting us and promise to tell his story accurately.

I saw Crabtree at his realest. He's his own man, a football player who is always comfortable in his own shoes, or in this case, Jordans.

Just wait to you see the ones he wears against the Cowboys...

Quinton DialFootball, community inspired 49ers nose tackle Dial

By Matt Barrows
Sacramento Bee
August 7, 2014

When Quinton Dial was a junior in high school, he was shy, quiet and, according to his coach back then, a little lazy.

"He had some rough days out there," said Brent Smith, then the coach at Clay-Chalkville High in Pinson, Ala. "It was a deal where we had to give him some tough love at times."

By the end of his senior season, however, Dial was dominant. Lining up at nose guard, he threw aside opponents like they were made of cardboard. He was named the state's defensive lineman of the year in 2008 and was a finalist for Mr. Football in Alabama.

Dial went on to play two seasons at community college and another two at the University of Alabama. The 49ers drafted him in the fifth round a year ago, and he has a shot at being the Week 1 starter at nose tackle in 2014. He'll be one of the players who lines up there when the 49ers face the Ravens in their preseason opener today.

So what exactly happened between his junior and senior seasons of high school, which Smith calls the most dramatic one-year transformation he's ever seen from a player? It's a story about the power of community and its ability to deliver a young man from a rough situation.

Paul Denham first met Dial in 2008 at a Pinson-area church when Dial walked in with some other football players. Though Dial towered over everyone else, when he shook Denham's hand, his voice was soft and he avoided eye contact.

"He didn't have a lot of confidence," Denham said.

How could he? Dial lost his mother when he was a boy. His father, a truck driver, was rarely home. Dial had trouble reading, which meant he had problems in school.

"He was a big ol' boy who was raising himself, really," Smith said. "He was home alone a lot."

But Dial was sweet-natured, and everyone liked to be around him. He began showing up regularly at the church, Northpark Baptist, and he became especially close to three families, the Denhams, the Murdocks and the Riches.

When Dial's father lost his home and had to move elsewhere, Dial, 18 at the time, said he wanted to remain in town but didn't know where to go. The families got together and decided he could stay with the Murdocks, who had a son that also played football.

One night turned into a week. A week grew into a month, and after a while Dial was part of the family. Part of three families, in fact.

Dial calls it “The Blind Side of Clay,” a reference to the book and movie about Tennessee Titans offensive tackle Michael Oher, who was practically raising himself in Memphis, Tenn., before being taken in by a wealthy white family.

Dial's issues became the Murdocks', Denhams' and Riches' issues. When it was determined he didn't read well, he got extra help. Soon, his confidence took off. So did his grades.

He left East Mississippi Community College two years later with a 3.07 GPA. Then he graduated a semester early from Alabama.

“A lot of athletes don't graduate,” Denham said. “He graduated a semester early. That should tell you something about him and about his work ethic.”

The newfound confidence showed up on the football field as well. Whereas Smith and his assistants were constantly in Dial's ear when he was a junior, they didn't say a word to him as a senior.

Dial began that season at defensive end. When opponents began running their plays to the other side of the field, Smith put him in the middle of the line.

“We had to move him to nose guard because everybody was running away from him,” Smith said. “He was unblockable. He really was. He was a guy that opponents just tried to avoid.”

Dial also played nose guard at Eastern Mississippi. It was there, Denham said, that their bond tightened.

It's a 3 1/2-hour drive from the Denhams' home to campus. Games were played on Thursday nights, which meant Dial could spend weekends with the Denhams. Denham's wife, Denise, would retrieve him on Friday. Paul would take him back on Sunday afternoon.

Denham has three daughters. He calls Dial the son he never had. And he's quick to point out that he and the other families have gotten more from their relationship than they've given Dial.

Denham said he wasn't raised to discriminate but admitted he had never spent much time with black people until Dial walked into the church that day.

“If you had asked me before if I'd ever care so much about a black young man, I'd say, ‘You're crazy,’ ” Denham said. “That's hard to say. But it's like he's become a member of our family.”

He also notes that a lot of people were there for Dial.

After his senior season, for example, Dial needed a suit to attend the Mr. Football banquet. Denham arrived at the Murdocks' house with his share of the money for a suit but was told to put his wallet away. Dial's high school teachers had already chipped in and bought him the necessary attire.

“It wasn't just a few families who helped,” Denham said. “It was the community.”

Of course, like any young man wearing a suit for the first time, Dial required a little motherly assistance. He arrived at the banquet with the label still attached.

“My wife had to catch him and take it off,” Denham said with a laugh.

Niners' Dial Could Blossom in Second Season

Because of a toe injury, Quinton Dial didn't get much of a chance to play in his rookie NFL season. Dial, a 2013 fifth-round pick from Alabama, played in just three games.

But as the 49ers head toward their first practice of training camp on July 24, the second-year defensive lineman has some admirers.

The 6-foot-6, 318-pounder saw action at nose tackle behind Glenn Dorsey last season and had just one tackle in his three appearances. But in practices, he impressed some teammates and coaches. Defensive coordinator Vic Fangio likes the way Dial moves, especially for a man his size. He's huge, yet quick on his feet.

"That's what we saw when we drafted him," Fangio told a writer for the team's website. "We liked obviously his size and thought he moved well. ... And we thought his best football was in front of him. I think he's done a good job since he's gotten here of improving his body. And he's still got a long ways to go. But I think he's a guy that will eventually get there."

Niners defensive end Justin Smith, who's been a role model and mentor for Dial, also liked the fact Dial showed a lot of aggressiveness in his limited game action, particularly in a lopsided win over the Jaguars in London.

"He got in there and had a little nastiness to him," said Smith. "That's what I like seeing. Roughing it up a little bit, trying to get in a fight out there. That's good. He's got that fire that you need. I thought he did a good job."

But with 11 defensive linemen on the roster headed into training camp, the competition should be fierce to earn playing time. Smith and Ray McDonald are the starters at end with Dorsey and Ian Williams at nose tackle, so Dial figures to be in the second-tier group along with Tank Carradine, Demarcus Dobbs and Tony Jerod-Eddie. Lawrence Okoye, Mike Purcell and Kaleb Ramsey will also be fighting for spots.

In two seasons at Alabama, Dial was terrific as a run-stuffing lineman (45 tackles), but wasn't noted as a pass rusher (just 2½ sacks). But NFL scouts loved his versatility, strength, hustle and ability to work well in the chaos of the interior line. Recently, Dial noted that both Smith and McDonald have been terrific teachers, and credited Smith for helping him learn a certain pass-rush technique.

"He showed me how to do it and ever since I've been using it," Dial told 49ers.com. "Since that day when he helped me out, I feel like I can ask him anything and he'll help me out."

After a year of mostly watching and learning, Dial says he's much more comfortable and confident going into training camp. He'll definitely get a chance to test out those techniques – and his nastiness – in exhibition games, with veterans getting plenty of rest.

Bruce Ellington*49ers WR Bruce Ellington focused on NFL career

By Pete Iacobelli

July 11, 2014

Gone are the days when Bruce Ellington would rush from a basketball workout with South Carolina teammates to a football meeting room to learn the complex schemes of coach Steve Spurrier. Ellington's only focus is the San Francisco 49ers and making an impact on the NFL.

"It was fun, all the rushing around," said Ellington, taken in the fourth round by the 49ers. "I thought I could do and I went after it."

Ellington hosted a youth camp Friday at his high school with his older cousin, Arizona Cardinals running back Andre Ellington who twice rushed for 1,000 yards while playing college ball at Clemson.

Bruce Ellington actually pared down his workload in college after playing three sports — he ran track, too — at Berkeley High. He helped his school win a state football title his senior year and many figured he slide nicely into South Carolina's rising football program.

Instead, he decided his future was solely on the court. He led the Gamecocks in scoring as a freshman in 2010-11, starting all 30 games. But when South Carolina struggled to win games, Ellington felt like he was missing out not playing alongside football standouts like Alshon Jeffery, Marcus Lattimore and Stephon Gilmore — also Palmetto State prep stars.

"I didn't say much about it," Andre Ellington said. "But I knew he was going to miss football."

So Bruce began a two-sport odyssey that continued for three years until January, when he gave up his senior seasons in basketball and football to jump to the NFL.

"It took some time to realize what I wanted to do," Ellington said. "This is it."

And Ellington believes he'll continue improving in the pros. At 5-foot-9, Ellington is tied for the shortest receiver on the 49ers' roster. But Ellington's got a relentless nature for finding open space and holding onto almost everything thrown his way, said his former high school coach Jerry Brown.

"Football's played on a big field and it's hard to track someone like Bruce who's got so much agility," Brown said.

Ellington found his football form as a sophomore when he was South Carolina's top receiver with 40 catches for 600 yards and seven touchdowns, including a 32-yard grab with 11 seconds left to beat Michigan in the Outback Bowl two years ago.

Ellington was again South Carolina's top receiver in 2013. His best regular-season showing came at Missouri when he had 10 catches for 136 yards and two touchdowns in the 27-24, double-overtime victory. Ellington saved the game in the first overtime with his fourth-and-goal, 15-yard TD catch to keep things going.

"I think that may have been my favorite moment," he said, smiling.

Ellington capped his college career with his most versatile game: He had nine catches for 140 yards and two touchdowns to beat Wisconsin in the Capital One Bowl. Ellington also threw a nine-yard TD pass to quarterback Connor Shaw.

Ellington kept his football mentality while continually playing and training with basketball teammates. South Carolina basketball coach Frank Martin never saw Ellington's intensity drop, no matter what he had done to prepare for football.

Ellington, 22, swears he never got worn down at playing or prepping for two major college sports at a Southeastern Conference school.

"I'm a young guy," he said. "It's hard to get tired."

Ellington believes he can bring that drive to the 49ers. The team hasn't put expectations on him and he won't either, eager to prove his worth when the games start. And no, he says he's not planning a call to the NBA's Golden State Warriors to see if he can get in some hoops action in his down time.

"I'm just going to work hard, give it a hundred (percent) every time I step on the field and keep on chasing the dream," he said.

Bruce Ellington*49ers' rookie WR Ellington has run lifelong 'go' route

Even before Bruce Ellington could walk, his mother was struck by her baby's ability to move.

"Oh, Bruce squirmed and he squirmed a lot. It was actually hard to carry him," Gwen Ellington said, laughing. "I had to quit work and stay home because Bruce moved so much."

Over the next two decades, Bruce's coaches and teammates came to realize what Gwen already knew: The kid never stops.

Before the wide receiver was selected in the fourth round by the 49ers last month, Ellington's energy – and athleticism – allowed him to cram two careers into his four years at South Carolina. He was the starting point guard on the basketball team for three seasons and played three more on the Gamecocks' football team, earning first-team all-SEC honors in 2013.

The academic all-conference pick also graduated in three-and-half years with a sociology degree.

"Most of us in college athletics experience athletes who give us everything they've got in one sport," said South Carolina basketball coach Frank Martin. "Bruce did that in two sports. He never ran out of enthusiasm and he could run until the cows come home. He has unbelievable ability to sustain effort. How his body did not break down, I don't know."

How rare is it for a Division I athlete to excel in the NCAA's two highest-profile sports? South Carolina wide receivers coach Steve Spurrier Jr. got some idea when he did investigative work last year.

In 2011 and 2012, Ellington left the football team after its final regular-season game, joined the basketball team for a few weeks and returned to the gridiron when the Gamecocks began bowl-game practices. In 2011, for example, Ellington scored a game-high 17 points in a home win over Wofford, took a red-eye flight to Orlando, Fla., and participated in a Capital One Bowl practice hours later.

In December, Spurrier wondered if this breakneck pre-bowl-game schedule was such a good idea. There were 69 other teams playing in a bowl and he wanted to speak with coaches at other football programs. What kind of schedule did they map out for their two-sport athletes?

The problem: Ellington was in a class by himself.

"I couldn't find another team — I couldn't find another player in the country that also played basketball that was about to play in a bowl game," Spurrier Jr. said. "So we just let him go."

Ellington, who scored 17 points in three games before returning to football, didn't get run down by his two-sport demands: In a tribute to his tirelessness, he had six catches for 140 yards and two touchdowns and also threw a nine-yard scoring pass in a 34-24 win over Wisconsin in the Capital One Bowl.

After that Jan. 1 game, Ellington left the basketball team to focus on training for the NFL draft, meaning his performance capped a rare college career that included 1,586 receiving yards, 993 return yards, 148 rushing yards, 17 touchdowns, 893 points, 238 assists and 218 rebounds.

Not included in those stats: The number of times Ellington, 5-foot-9 and 197 pounds, waved off coaches suggesting he slow down.

In the sweltering Columbia, S.C., summers, Ellington routinely performed his personal two-a-days: He attended back-to-back running-and-weight-lifting sessions with the football and basketball teams, his only break coming when he drove to the gym.

Niners running back Marcus Lattimore, his teammate at South Carolina, was “amazed” by Ellington’s double duty. Spurrier Jr. was also wowed – and worried: “I’d be like, ‘Bruce, what are you doing?’ But he’d always say, ‘I’m fine. Don’t worry about me.’ What could you do? He never showed signs of fatigue, weakness or injury.”

Ellington, who ran track and played football, basketball and baseball as a senior at Berkeley High in Moncks Corner, S.C., never worried his body would betray him. And his confidence came from knowing what it had allowed him to do in the past.

At Berkeley High, he was rated the No. 12 point guard in the country by Scout.com and was a finalist for Mr. Football in the state as a senior when, as a quarterback, he led the way to a state championship by collecting 2,878 all-purpose yards and accounting for 29 touchdowns.

In the gym, he used his 39-inch vertical jump to do 360-degree dunks. In the weight room, he squatted 600 pounds as a 180-pound junior.

“I felt like I knew what my body could handle in college,” Ellington said. “It’s my body so I’m good. I’m not feeling aches and pains. I didn’t really listen to what other people said. It’s not their body, so I just went after it. I really think it’s a mind thing. I think if you say ‘Man, I’m tired. My legs hurt,’ that’s not good. So I always just said ‘I don’t get tired.’”

His stamina was on display in the 2009 state championship game, when Berkeley entered the fourth quarter trailing by 10 points. In response, Ellington, who ran a 4.45-second 40-yard dash at the 2014 combine, did what he’s always done best: run. He finished with 191 rushing yards and four touchdowns.

“In the fourth quarter we ran two plays and they were both basically about giving Bruce the ball: triple option and quarterback counter,” former Berkeley coach Jerry Brown said. “We won by nine points ... I probably should have done that earlier.”

Brown, a 43-year coaching veteran who has mentored seven other NFL players, a list that includes Ellington’s cousin, Cardinals running back Andre Ellington, counts his former quarterback as the “most dominating” high school football player he’s seen.

However, despite his football prowess – and 5-foot-9 stature – Ellington arrived at South Carolina determined to pave a path to the NBA. As a freshman, he didn’t play football, led the Gamecocks in scoring and was named to the SEC all-freshman team.

Spurrier Jr. had unsuccessfully recruited Ellington in high school, but it was Lattimore who eventually wooed him to the football team in 2011.

Three years later, Lattimore, an in-state prep legend who had beaten out Ellington for Mr. Football honors, is eager to see what his friend can accomplish when finally focused on one sport. Ellington, who was also a running back in high school, has only played wide receiver for three seasons.

However, his mom would offer he's been playing the position since childhood when he often spent hours alone throwing a football from one end of the backyard to the other.

"He tried to beat the football to the other side," Gwen Ellington said.

Could he do it?

"Oh yeah, he could always run and catch it," she said. "He's always wanted to just run, and run, and run. Once he found out he can run, he's just never stopped."

Frank Gore*Frank Gore out to show he's not running on borrowed time

By Eric Branch
San Francisco Chronicle
September 3, 2014

Before Oct. 2, 2011, Frank Gore had conquered poverty, dyslexia, a torn ACL in his left knee, a torn ACL in his right knee and a broken hip, but he didn't know how he'd overcome a severely sprained ankle to play that afternoon against the Eagles.

The 49ers' running back couldn't practice - heck, he could barely walk - in the days before kickoff. So he's still surprised that he morphed from injured to inspirational: Gore rushed for 127 yards, averaged 8.5 yards a carry and scored the winning touchdown in a 24-23 victory.

How did he do it? His explanation: He didn't do it alone.

"It had to be God," Gore said, pausing a few beats before delivering a definitive answer. "It was God."

Gore's belief in a higher power is borne out of his odds-overcoming background: Plenty of atheists would find spirituality if they'd rushed for 9,967 yards in the NFL on knees that were surgically repaired in college. And Gore believes divine intervention doesn't merely account for his past exploits, but will explain his future accomplishments.

Even many of his fans - The Faithful - wonder if Gore's adversity-conquering days are over. His age (31), workload (the second-most carries - 2,187 - among active running backs) and recent stats (a career-low 4.1 yards a carry in 2013) suggest this is the season he, finally, gets flattened by Father Time.

Gore has faith he'll continue to produce at football's most punishing position.

"I think God built me different," he said. "I'm a different guy. I think I'm going to be fine."

The 49ers' actions suggest they have their doubts.

Before Gore embarked on his 10th season with the team that drafted him in 2005, he wasn't offered a contract extension. However, the 49ers did select Ohio State's Carlos Hyde in the second round in May.

Hyde, a hard runner who, at 235 pounds, has the frame to assume a lead-back workload, averaged 5.6 yards on 17 carries in the preseason. Running backs coach Tom Rathman said last week that the 49ers need to "manage" Gore this season to keep him fresh. Last year, he averaged 4.2 yards a carry in the first eight games, 3.9 in the final eight and 3.4 in the postseason.

So what if Hyde impresses in what could be a 10- to 12-carry-a-game role this season? You see where this could be headed. It's easy to envision the 49ers' career rushing leader passing on a diminished role in 2015 and becoming the franchise's latest treasured name to end his career elsewhere.

Gore has considered the possibility he'll follow the same path as Joe Montana, Jerry Rice and Ronnie Lott. And it has helped shape his goals for 2014, which involve winning his first Super Bowl title and showing 31 teams he'll still be going strong in 2015.

"If it had to come down to it and I wasn't here, that's just the business of it," Gore said. "And I understand that. But I still love it, and I'm feeling great and I want mine."

"This year, I'm playing for a Super Bowl and, also, if I'm not here (in 2015), I want to show the other teams what I can do. I would love to be here, though. I would love to stay here. I love it. It's all I know. They've been great to me."

Rathman, a former fullback, finished his nine-year NFL career with the Raiders after spending his first eight seasons with the 49ers. In 1994, the 49ers drafted fullback William Floyd in the first round, told Rathman he had to compete for his starting spot and offered him a contract that represented a significant pay cut.

With his pride punctured, Rathman signed with Los Angeles. This saying sayonara to stars, of course, isn't unique to the 49ers. Consider merely these running backs: Franco Harris had his last carry for the Seahawks, Emmitt Smith finished with Cardinals, and LaDainian Tomlinson ended his career with the Jets.

Gore?

"I don't know what's going to happen," Rathman said. "I don't have a crystal ball. I love Frank Gore, but Frank is going to have to make the best decision for him. ... Players have pride, so I think it's going to come into play with him. I do know this organization loves him."

This summer, fans seemed to sense this could be the beginning of a goodbye. During three open practices at Levi's Stadium, Gore drew the biggest cheers. For jogging alone in an end zone. For running through the line, at half-speed, against air.

The cheers were a heartfelt thank you. Gore, the 49ers' longest-tenured offensive or defensive player, spent much of his career as the lone playmaker, on bad teams, in unimaginative offenses. He hasn't complained, but he clearly has cared: He first cried after an NFL loss as a rookie because he thought his teammates sloughed off failure too easily in the midst of a 4-12 season.

His heavy workload - and passion for stonewalling blitzing linebackers - explains his massive medical file: He has landed on the injury report with ailments involving his foot, hip, shoulder, ribs, head (concussion), shin, ankle, hand, eye, toe, wrist and knee ... and he has missed an average of 1.3 games a season.

He is, obviously, a survivor: Of the 24 running backs in his draft class, he's one of three still playing (Ronnie Brown and Darren Sproles are the others).

So what does he think those cheers have been all about?

"I've been here for a long time and I guess they think I'm looking great or something," Gore said, smiling. "I think they know what they're going to get from me. They know I'm going to try my best every Sunday. You never hear me complaining. I just go out and play football. I think people respect that."

He knows other people think he's done. During the course of a 20-minute interview, it's a subject he raises twice without prompting.

The is-Gore-too-old talk began in 2010, partly because, at 27, he had an injury generally associated with the elderly: a broken hip.

He has responded by ranking fourth in the NFL in rushing yards (3,553) since 2011 and playing in 56 of 56 games, including the playoffs.

"I'm not going to lie because I'm a competitive guy and it kind of does bother me when I hear 'Oh, he can't do this anymore,'" Gore said. "I've been hearing I can't do this all my life. And I love the challenge. I love to be challenged like that."

Indeed, Gore clearly hasn't lost touch with his chip-on-the-shoulder 22-year-old self. His ACL surgeries at Miami caused him to slip to third round of the draft and Sports Illustrated termed him the most overrated running back selected.

Gore, famously, can tick off the five running backs drafted before him and it wouldn't be surprising if he knew this: His seven 1,000-yard seasons are two more than those five other backs have combined to produce.

More than nine years later, he's nearing the end of his career with the same outlook he possessed before it began. In January 2005, shortly after his final college game, he heard the skeptics but was certain he'd succeed in the NFL.

And he knew he wouldn't do it alone.

"With God on my side," he said, "I know I'm going to be all right."

Frank GoreFrank Gore joins an odd cast to train by boxing

By Scott Ostler
San Francisco Chronicle
July 5, 2014

Look what has happened to the 49ers' bell cow. He has become a raging bull.

Frank Gore is sticking and moving, bobbing and weaving around the ring, his punches exploding off the trainer's mitts like a string of firecrackers.

Ding! Round over.

"You hear of fighters who don't have knockout power?" trainer Brian Schwartz asks. "If Frank was a fighter, he'd have knockout power. His punches are fast and snappy."

"Explosive!" says Gore, smiling and moving his head in time to this workout's sound track, Michael Jackson's "Thriller." Gore is an old-school old soul.

Ding! Back to work. Their ring dance is partly choreographed, partly ad-libbed, 100 percent fierce. Gore reacts to Schwartz's pad cues. React and attack, just like football.

"When I see the hole, I go get it," Gore says, clearly enjoying himself.

Gore is 31, heading into his 10th season with the 49ers, his ninth as the bell cow, the spiritual leader of the offense. For the past three years, Gore has trained in the offseason at Schwartz's Undisputed Boxing Gym in San Carlos.

Michael Crabtree turned Gore on to Undisputed. Crabtree went there during his holdout before his rookie season. He brought Gore there three years ago.

The first time Gore got into the ring to hit with Schwartz, he quit before the end of the first round. Now he goes 15 rounds, hard.

Gore is sweating like a lawn sprinkler, and beaming.

"What's our motto?" a ringsider says to Schwartz.

"If it's not fun, don't do it!" Schwartz says.

The ringsider is Victor Conte, infamous for his role in the BALCO scandal and Olympian misdeeds, but working the honest side of sports training and nutrition since he did four months in the slammer in 2005 and '06.

It's an odd mix, these four guys, thrown together by fate and chance encounters. Crabtree found Undisputed because the wife of one of his accountants worked out there.

Conte came into the picture four years ago, after meeting boxing champ Nonito Donaire in a bank. The bank manager introduced the two and they talked shop. Turns out that Conte's daughter Veronica, who runs his nearby business, SNAC (Scientific Nutrition for Advanced Conditioning) System, works out with Donaire's conditioning coach. Small world.

A meeting was arranged, Donaire and Schwartz with Conte. Conte talked cutting-edge nutrition and training, like hypoxic (simulated high-altitude) workouts and hyperbaric (high pressure) chambers. Donaire listened and nodded. Later Schwartz asked Donaire if he understood what Conte was talking about. "No idea," Donaire said.

But Conte can sell a program and Schwartz is open-minded, and soon Conte was supplying Donaire and the other fighters with blood testing and supplements, and moving them into super-high-tech training.

Conte designs workout protocols and testing and supplement programs.

"We didn't know anything about this stuff until Victor came along," Schwartz says.

Crabtree fell into step, and soon Gore joined the party. He has embraced the boxing aspect, sometimes sparring with Schwartz and other fighters. Crabtree recently started doing some ring work, though not sparring.

"Mentally, boxing is like being a running back," says Schwartz, a former world champion in karate and kickboxing. "You're getting ready to go to war, to get hit."

Now the action moves from the canvas ring to a giant plastic igloo. This is Conte's new baby, the SNAC Altitude Dome, an air-tight, transparent plastic dome 12 feet high and 18 feet in diameter. Low-oxygen air is pumped in.

Conte, a mad scientist, designed the dome and had it built in China for $35,000. Athletes train in short bursts, at the equivalent of two to three miles above sea level.

"I hate this," Gore says, climbing into the igloo.

The dome is large enough for equipment, like treadmills and stationary bikes, and for sparring - hypoxic boxing.

"This helps with reaction time, concentration and focus, oxygen utilization and energy," Conte says of the ring work inside the dome.

Gore and Schwartz are dancing. During these oxygen-deprived bursts, Gore's heart rate soars as high as 205 beats per minute. He says he notices that between plays in games and scrimmages, when everyone else is bent over, hands on knees, gassed, he's standing up, fresh and ready to rip.

When Gore started working out there, he was coming back from a serious hip injury. In three seasons, he has not missed a game and has gained at least 1,100 yards per season, despite the handicap of an offense that provokes defenses to stack the box.

Along with his eight-week offseason program there, Gore drops in a couple of times each week during training camp for workouts and to watch the boxers. During the season, twice a week Gore and Crabtree climb into the hyperbaric chamber, which supposedly speeds healing. There is talk of near miracles, like a boxer's black eye disappearing almost overnight after a chamber session.

Conte designs supplement packets for Gore and Crabtree - powders, pills, soft gels and sublinguals - to take before a game and at halftime. Justin Smith, Bruce Miller and two or three other 49ers, also get custom-formulated packets.

"If I don't have it, I get nervous," Gore says. "I make sure before I leave for the game or get on the plane that I have (the package) in my bag."

His workout over, Gore finally sits down.

"It helps you get your mind right," Gore says, nodding to the ring. Boxing "is a mind thing, and also a challenge. I'm very competitive."

Of his sparring sessions with the real boxers, Gore says, "B (Schwartz) don't let 'em go all out. He wants me to be safe, but I think I do a pretty good job. I know when I'm done, all the true boxers (are) surprised at what I know."

Gore mentions that someone recently told him he was about 1,000 yards behind Jim Brown on the all-time rushing list. (Actually he's 2,345 behind Brown.) Gore says he has goals, and enthusiasm.

"I still love it, man. I love it!"

Gore is entering the last year of his contract.

"I would love for (the 49ers) to bring me back here," he says. "If they don't, I just take my business somewhere else. I still love it. That's my goal, is to walk away when I want to walk away."

I mention that his teammate Vernon Davis is more vocal about his contract, going on a national media tour to enlist public support for his demands, even though his current contract has two more seasons.

"What's Vernon doing?" Gore asks with genuine curiosity, not scorn.

I say that it seems like Davis is enjoying the national attention.

"I don't like attention," Gore says.

But he gets attention, quietly. When training camp opens, the 49ers' bell cow will be leading the herd. He won't be grabbing a knee.

Conte, fittingly, believes in 2nd chances

Victor Conte knows that some people forgive, some forget, some do neither.

"There are people who think you should burn in hell," Conte says. "There are people who do not want the association" with his name or services.

But he has assembled a training stable of athletes, mostly boxers, including six who hold or have held world championship belts. He heads the SNAC Boxing Team, providing training, testing and supplements.

"They do get (drug) tested," Conte says of his athletes. "I would say anybody working with me becomes a target. (Phillies outfielder) Marlon Byrd used to get tested about five times a season. The first season he worked with me he was tested 11 times."

Conte believes in second chances. His athletes sometimes do track work with Remi Korchemny, who was banned from track for life during the doping scandals.

Conte offers to share his juicing expertise with groups that fight drugs in sports like the World Anti-Doping Agency, but says his advice is largely ignored.

"I do not believe they have genuine interest in catching people," Conte says. "It's all about propaganda."

Frank Gore*Frank Gore thwarts Father Time to drive San Francisco 49ers

By Ryan Maquinana

June 11, 2014

It's Wednesday night, and the Undisputed Boxing Gym is closed for business, but owner Brian Schwartz is leaving the lights on as the speakers blare '70s R&B classics for a special client.

"Frank's coming tonight," Schwartz says.

That would be Frank Gore, the San Francisco 49ers' all-time leading rusher, who is spending his third offseason honing his boxing skills to his preferred soundtrack of Al Green, the Isley Brothers and Marvin Gaye.

As for the training regimen, it resembles the one Schwartz and associate Mike Bazzel drew up for current featherweight champion Nonito Donaire, and Gore, coming off his third straight Pro Bowl season, swears by it.

"When I see a guy on the football field huffing and puffing, I know I got an advantage over him," the 31-year-old reveals after punching Schwartz's focus mitts for 30 consecutive minutes without rest. "Since I started boxing, between plays (on the football field), I'm standing straight up."

Keep in mind that this is Gore's second workout of the day; the morning session featured weightlifting at 49ers headquarters in Santa Clara. In a league where running backs on the wrong side of 30 are advised to preserve their bodies, Gore is pushing his to the brink, completing this particular session by performing sit-ups to exhaustion in a high-altitude-simulation dome.

"I'm done when I'm done," a light-headed Gore says matter-of-factly, copious beads of sweat glistening all over his face, neck and arms. "I don't like to have a set number on how many sets or reps (I do). That puts limits on what I can do to be in tip-top shape."

Heading into his ninth season as the top back on the 49ers' depth chart, Gore is an anomaly. But with the team drafting Carlos Hyde and the medical clearance of Marcus Lattimore, along with the presence of Kendall Hunter and LaMichael James, the 10th-year veteran's endeavor to keep his starting job will be more arduous than ever.

Nonetheless, Gore's remarkable journey to the NFL and his subsequent longevity are indicative of an indomitable spirit that makes it tough to bet against him.

"There are so many more doubters saying I can't do this or that anymore, but we'll see," says the running back, who is entering the last year of his contract. "I've been hearing that my whole life, and I'm still here."

Borne out of his beginnings

Gore attended Coral Gables High School in the Miami area, but grew up in nearby Coconut Grove, where the drug epidemic was so rampant his senior year that a police sting operation revealed some convenience stores were selling "crack kits" to the locals.

"If you want to understand Frank and why he's been on top for so long, you have to know where we came from -- and how tough it is," childhood friend Charles "Chucky" Watson says. "And you definitely have to start with his mom. She did everything to keep Frank and me away from all that."

Lizzie Gore was the general, drill sergeant and nurturer all rolled into one. Such duties are non-negotiable when you have to raise four kids and house countless other relatives and friends in a cramped two-bedroom residence.

"I could've easily gone the other way," Gore says, "but luckily, I had football and the dream to play in the NFL so I could do something positive with my life."

By the time Frank discovered his gift on the gridiron, Lizzie had defeated a bout with drugs only to be afflicted with kidney disease, laboring to get out of bed for dialysis treatment three times per week.

"No matter how much pain she was in, she'd always be coming to my games, though," Frank recalls about his mother, who succumbed to the illness in 2007. "She was everything to me."

"Even with everything going on with her, she put food on the table and clothes on our backs. My goal was always to take care of her and my family one day."

To do that, he would have to get eligible for college. Struggles in the classroom were partially due to an ongoing fight with dyslexia. But rather than seek the path of least resistance and hope for a handout, Gore took matters into his own hands.

After a senior season that saw him shatter the Miami-Dade County record with 419 rushing yards in one game, the uncommitted back was slated to join teammate Jonathan Vilma in a local all-star game. However, Gore never showed up.

"A lot of people told Frank he wouldn't be able to make it academically, and he's the type of person that loves to be told he can't do it so he can prove you wrong," Trelvin Payne, Gore's position coach at Coral Gables High, remembers. "So instead of going to the game, he actually chose to get tutoring all day so he could work on his grades. It was that important to him."

Eventually, his test scores improved enough for him to earn a diploma, and despite an enticing recruiting visit to Ole Miss hosted by none other than Eli Manning, the University of Miami staff made a successful last-minute plea to keep Gore at home despite the overflowing talent in the Hurricanes' backfield.

"I could've gone somewhere else and started right as a freshman," Gore says. "But you look at the competition I had in Miami: Najeh (Davenport), (Clinton) Portis, (Willis) McGahee, Jarrett Payton. When you go up against the best of the best, you're ready for any type of competition."

Gore's resilience was on trial throughout his collegiate career. After averaging over nine yards per carry as a freshman in spot duty, he beat out McGahee for the starting job in 2002 -- only to tear his left ACL in spring practice. The ensuing recovery was seemingly all for naught when he ruptured his right ACL in the fifth game of the 2003 campaign.

At that point, Gore was tired of being college football's version of Sisyphus and contemplated hanging up his cleats for good. But fate intervened in the form of his position coach, Don Solder.

"It was really disheartening to him with the injuries being one right after the other and the rehab the first time being such a bitch," Solder says, his signature booming voice permeating the speakerphone. "He was so down in the dumps, but I had to convince him that they haven't even seen what he really could be if he was healthy."

"Now look at him. He's had two flat tires and he's been in the league 10 years."

With a renewed focus, Gore returned to the lineup for his senior season and recaptured the No. 1 spot, amassing over 1,000 yards from scrimmage. Still, injury concerns caused him to slip to the third round of the 2005 NFL Draft, where the 49ers selected him 65th overall to spell incumbent starter Kevan Barlow.

"I had a chip on my shoulder," Gore says. "Once I got passed up in the draft and I see five other backs go in front of me, and once I played (sparingly) and still led our team in rushing, I said next year the job's going to be mine."

"They knew that as long as I'm healthy, the 49ers knew they had a steal."

That was indeed the case for offensive coordinator Norv Turner and head coach/general manager Mike Nolan, who would trade Barlow to the New York Jets the following offseason due to their faith in Gore as a three-down back.

Turner and Nolan have since exited San Francisco -- along with two other head coaches (including interim boss Jim Tomsula) and four more offensive coordinators during Gore's time in the Bay Area -- but the running back has never relinquished his starting role, despite a parade of challengers.

Indispensable tools

October 20, 2013. LP Field, Nashville. With the 49ers ahead 3-0, the Tennessee Titans have forced the offense into a third-and-7 situation midway through the second quarter.

Not to worry. Quarterback Colin Kaepernick takes the snap, fakes the read-option handoff to Gore, finds some daylight and scampers like a gazelle 20 yards into the end zone untouched.

The broadcast crew credits the signal-caller's speed in the open field, as well as fullback Bruce Miller's pancake block of Titans linebacker Colin McCarthy, but in the film room that week, there was no question about the play's true linchpin.

"The quarterback ended up pulling it (in), but we've really tried to emphasize if you don't get the football, sell it up through the middle and then add it on down the field," current running backs coach (and former 49ers fullback) Tom Rathman says. "(Frank) did that because he saw the safety coming down, so he got downfield and blocked him. He got the quarterback in the end zone."

"He adds on in the quarterback-disconnect stuff. Those are things people don't see and take for granted but mean a tremendous amount to the team, and he does all of them."

Even Miller, the purported catalyst of the scoring romp, nods in accord.

"He does it all the time, not just with that play," the fullback says. "We have our assignments on every play, and on the field, not everything is exact.

"But if I don't get the right leverage or miss a block, having a guy like Frank Gore, who knows where everyone's supposed to go, is a relief. He can erase mistakes. I like to say he always makes me right."

Thus, one of the keys to Gore's staying power has been his value as a second coach on the field. Lattimore, who spent his rookie season on injured reserve, used the 2013 campaign to observe and learn from the elder statesman.

"He's the smartest football player in the NFL, I think," claims Lattimore, who, like Gore, faced the daunting task of overcoming a gruesome college knee injury. "He not only knows where all 11 players are supposed to line up, but even all the offensive line's blocking assignments.

"He knows the route tree for every receiver, and he can read coverages. He's got the footwork, and he's the best blocking back in the league."

Then there's what Gore does with the ball in his hands. His uncanny ability to consistently squeeze through a modicum of space is the product of his eyes and patience more so than his speed.

"He comes out of piles or holes like no one I've seen," states the now-retired Solder, who was inducted into the University of Miami Sports Hall of Fame last year. "He has what I like to call great lamps -- great natural vision. He's the most natural runner I've ever had."

Dependability and durability go hand in hand, and Gore receives high marks here, too. Since taking the reins from Barlow in 2006, he's notched at least 200 carries all eight seasons, with this past campaign's 276 totes the third-highest total of his career.

Gore also hasn't missed a game since 2010, playing through countless injuries; in January's NFC Championship Game loss to the Seattle Seahawks, neither a broken finger nor a massive headshot at the goal line could keep him out of the contest.

"You never know when you're going to get back to this point," Gore says. "I don't want to look back and say I wish I did this or that. It was the NFC championship, and I had 53 people who believed in me that would rather see me on the field than on the sidelines."

While the courage was expected against the archrival Seahawks, the production didn't quite match it. Gore's 11 carries for 14 yards raised qualms that he either was being utilized excessively in the regular season, or that Father Time had finally begun to gnaw at his ankles.

As a result, Hyde, Lattimore and Hunter likely will get plenty of looks in the preseason -- a plan that will ease Gore's workload but also threaten his viability as the 49ers' unquestionable bell-cow back.

"I'm not ready to stop playing," Gore asserts. "I respect all the guys we got, but I don't care who they bring in. I'm not selfish. I'm willing to help them, but I want to compete."

Make or break in 2014?

Back in the high-altitude dome at Undisputed, Gore pulls out his phone and loads up a video clip of an ESPN analyst speculating that 2014 could be the running back's final go-around as San Francisco's starter.

"I put this on every time when I work out," he says, pursing his lips and nodding his head in the process.

As Gore enters the last season of a three-year extension, could the talking heads be right? With Kaepernick signing a lucrative deal last week, and several other cogs in the offense (Vernon Davis, Michael Crabtree, Mike Iupati, Alex Boone, et al.) itching for new deals, does Gore hope enough money will be on the table to allow him to finish his career in San Francisco?

"I do, but I just take it one year at a time," Gore says. "The only thing I can do right now is keep getting in shape ... and when the season starts, go play football and try to be the Frank Gore that I've always been. And whenever that comes, if it's here, whatever. Repeat and do the same thing."

Younger and cheaper is the mantra of the salary cap era. Hyde and Lattimore are both 22 years old. Hunter, 25, has entrenched himself in the rotation, while James, 24, has reportedly been on the trade block.

"It's Frank's spot, but when you get an opportunity, you have to make the most of it," Hunter says. "That's the mentality you have to have, and that's what I've learned from Frank. I have to bring my 'A' game every day."

Veterans truly walk the tightrope in the sense that they're tasked with showing the ropes to the very players who are aiming to usurp them in the lineup. Rathman remembers his gold watch moment. After eight seasons and two Super Bowl victories with San Francisco, he spent 1994 with the Raiders -- before calling it a career when he saw his skills inevitably deteriorate.

"It's not about what you did last year, or what you've done over the last nine years," Rathman says. "I've seen Joe Montana leave here. I've seen Ronnie Lott leave here. Roger Craig left here. I left here. It's going to happen eventually to everybody, but all you can worry about is the next snap, and I think (Frank) understands that."

Still, you'd be hard-pressed to find anyone at 4949 Centennial Boulevard to opine that Gore has reached the end of the line -- his competition included.

"You know what, I think he's got five more good years in him," Lattimore believes. "He still can do it all, from what I've seen."

Colin Kaepernick and Stevie Johnson – A reason for 49ers' optimism

By Kevin Lynch
San Francisco Chronicle
November 5, 2014

Looking for an island of optimism in a sea of San Francisco 49ers' despair? Look no further than the 49ers' locker room. Even coming off a pair of crushing defeats to the Broncos and Rams, the players remain steadfast in the belief in themselves and in a successful second half of the season.

The reason? The players are confident in each other and much of that confidence flows from quarterback Colin Kaepernick. Wide receiver Stevie Johnson learned that first hand when he struggled mightily in training camp and preseason games.

Johnson was trying to run routes the way the 49ers wanted him to do it. By running in a straight line, breaking down and then making his final cut to get open. However, Johnson runs in a fashion in which you never know when he's going to cut and that's what's made him successful.

As training camp went on, Johnson struggled to make the transition to the 49ers way, and that's when he approached Kaepernick about working after training camp practices.

"I tried to come in here and change and run their routes," Johnson said. "But it wasn't connecting. Then I was like, 'OK, can we get together where there are no cameras and I can run like I really run, and we can connect from there?'"

Johnson wasn't sure what kind of reaction he would get. He figured the 49ers had just come off three NFC championship games, proving their techniques and systems worked well. So why would they adjust to him?

"I wondered if this dude (Kaepernick) had time to get things right," Johnson said. "He was (open to it). He wasn't a prima donna-type player."

Kaepernick is far from a traditional quarterback – from the way he looks to the way he throws. So he, maybe more than anyone, could understand Johnson's frustrations and was more than willing to work with him.

"He's a very unique player, a very unique route runner," Kaepernick said of Johnson. "But that has worked for him. He has had success doing that. So why would you want to take him out of his comfort zone or take him out of what he's been successful with? Give him the guidelines and let him work within those guidelines to let him do what he does best. If he hits his spot on time, it doesn't affect me; it doesn't affect the play. But it gives him the freedom to get open the way he needs to."

Kaepernick said part of his job is to learn the nuances of how his receivers run routes, and that Anquan Boldin, Brandon Lloyd and Johnson all run routes differently. But Johnson is the most unusual.

"Part of it is just his body movement," Kaepernick said. "The natural mechanics of how he runs, how he cuts to get open, is unorthodox. Most people are straight line, break down and get in and out of breaks. His whole route he is setting up (the defensive back) to when he's going to break; when he's going to make that final cut."

Kaepernick suggested the best might be yet to come with Johnson. Both quarterback and receiver are committed to making sure every route and every play is run correctly for game day.

"If he runs a route and he doesn't feel like it's right, he'll come back and say, 'let's do it again.' That's kind of been like our protocol together," Kaepernick said. "If we don't run it right, we are going to go back and run it again until we get it right and that's why as the season has gone on, he has had a bigger and bigger impact. It's because of that extra work."

The two needed the extra work initially to convince coaches that Johnson should be allowed the freedom to get open his way.

"Once (the coaches) saw that we were working on it a lot, just to get timing down ... and we were having success with it, they were like, 'OK, you guys are on the same page, we are going to let you work,'" Kaepernick said. "I think that's when he started to really be in his comfort zone and feel like he had the freedom to go out and make plays."

The offensive coaches deserve credit for not taking the "my way or the highway" approach. Some passing-game coaches can get so bogged down in the precision of route running they lose perspective on whether receivers are actually getting open.

Johnson is getting open plenty. He is tied with Michael Crabtree in team touchdown receptions with three. His 28 catches for 356 yards is comparable to Crabtree's 37 catches and 362 yards, although Johnson has had 37 passes thrown his way and Crabtree has had 60.

Johnson knows that his success might not be possible if a Super Bowl quarterback didn't understand his plight, and that's given him added incentive to make the season a success. Johnson, like Kaepernick, talks with kids and he wants to use Kaepernick as an example on how to be a teammate and how to work together.

"That's why (the locker room) is special," Johnson said. "That's why I hope we make it (to the Super Bowl). I like working with people, and I like to show them how to be humble-minded, like he is."

A humble and open mind is what the leader of the 49ers has. And that's reason enough to retain some optimism about the 49ers.

Stevie Johnson

Wide receiver welcomes chance to suit up for his hometown team

By Ron Kroichick
San Francisco Chronicle
September 8, 2014

To say 49ers wide receiver Stevie Johnson grew up in San Francisco doesn't fully convey the unique connection he shares with his hometown football team.

One family photo shows him wearing a 49ers jacket and hat (and wide smile) at age 5 or 6. He often went fishing with his cousins near Candlestick Point. Some aunts and uncles sold concessions at 49ers home games, while others hustled parking outside.

And, soon after he turned 16, Johnson learned to drive in the spacious parking lot surrounding Candlestick Park. His stepdad, Herm Lewis, took him there for this teenage rite of passage - in the shadow of the stadium where Joe Montana threw passes to Jerry Rice and Steve Young found Terrell Owens.

"There were times after we finished driving when we used to walk inside and sit in the stands," Lewis said. "We just took it all in, not realizing Steve would one day be a 49er."

Johnson became a 49er in May, after six occasionally tumultuous seasons in Buffalo. San Francisco sent a conditional fourth-round draft choice to the Bills, hoping Johnson can provide another reliable target for quarterback Colin Kaepernick. Johnson makes his 49ers debut in Sunday's season opener against Dallas.

The trade gave Johnson, 27, a chance to come full circle in a way, given his childhood in the rugged Bayview-Hunters Point neighborhood. He could see Candlestick from his house, long before the 49ers drifted south to Levi's Stadium.

The vision then mostly involved avoiding all the trouble - gangs, drugs, violence - in Bayview. Lewis offered a first-hand example, because he's a onetime drug dealer who spent two years in prison in the late 1980s before he met Johnson's mom, Rhonda.

Lewis turned his life around, becoming a community activist and successful music producer with 12 albums to his name. He also gave Johnson and his other kids - including Andre Lewis, now a wide receiver at Utah - much-needed direction.

Importance of fathers

Fulton "Fully" Mitchell, who was Johnson's AAU basketball coach, knows what can happen to kids without a father figure. Mitchell recently came across one long-ago photo of a youth football team he coached, full of kids who would be about Johnson's age.

Handout, Courtesy Herm Lewis

Wide receiver Stevie Johnson wears a 49ers jacket in a family photo when he was 5 or 6.

There were 20 kids in the picture. Eight of them are now dead.

"You gotta have a dad, man," Mitchell said. "A lot of these guys just don't have fathers. If you don't see them busy in some sort of activity, they stray."

Johnson didn't stray because he stayed busy in sports, listened to Lewis' constant guidance and inherited his mom's personality. Rhonda was very much an individual, as Johnson put it, and he followed suit.

"I've always been a loner type," he said. "I really wouldn't follow the crowd."

Rhonda's impact on Johnson is undeniable. Among his many tattoos is one on the inside of his right wrist, with her name written elegantly in cursive next to a flame - because she's his fire and motivation, he explained.

Here lies the bittersweet element in Johnson's homecoming. Rhonda died unexpectedly in December, at age 48.

Johnson can't get to a pass in a preseason game last month as Denver's Omar Bolden defends.

She was an avid 49ers fan, though her closet at home in Fairfield - where the family moved when Johnson was in high school, to escape the dangers of Bayview - includes Bills jerseys from her son's time in Buffalo. Lewis hasn't touched the closet since Rhonda's death, but he planned to add two 49ers jerseys before Sunday's game.

"I hate that she's missing this," Lewis said. "She would be so happy to see Steve in a 49ers uniform."

Said Johnson: "She was my mom, she was my friend, she was everything. It's still kind of tough."

Refining his skills

Johnson jokes that he's got the Bay Area covered, from his upbringing in San Francisco and high-school years in Fairfield to his junior-college days in Hayward and now his 49ers time in the South Bay.

Chabot College coach Danny Calcagno recalled Johnson as a raw player with extraordinary athleticism. Calcagno once called a fade route to Johnson, a play he bemoaned upon seeing the opponent loading up on that side of the field.

"I remember thinking 'Oh, crap!' because of the defense they were in," Calcagno said. "Then it changed to, 'Oh, wow!' when he made the catch. We could call the fade anytime."

Johnson refined his skills at the University of Kentucky and with the Bills. The 49ers acquired him as a logical No. 3 receiver, behind Michael Crabtree and Anquan Boldin, though Johnson had a quiet preseason (only two catches) and must fend off Brandon Lloyd and Quinton Patton for playing time.

Even so, Johnson already has made an impression on one important teammate.

"Stevie's quick," Kaepernick said. "Not too many DBs get their hands on him. He has a great ability to create space on his routes."

Say what you want about Johnson's antics in Buffalo, but he produced - three consecutive seasons (2010-12) of 76-plus catches and 1,000 or more yards. His numbers dropped last year (52 catches for 597 yards), precipitating the trade.

Still, his Bills tenure will be remembered as much for his outlandish touchdown celebrations and provocative comments. One example: He took to Twitter to blame God for the potential game-winning pass he dropped against the Steelers in November 2010.

Then, a year later, he mocked Jets receiver Plaxico Burress by pretending to shoot himself in the thigh after a touchdown catch against New York. Burress spent 20 months in prison on a weapons charge after accidentally shooting himself in the thigh at a Manhattan nightclub.

Balancing business, fun

Johnson called his celebration "very stupid" after the game, though he doesn't regret other creative end zone moments.

"Man, I handle business and have fun," he says now. "I go by that motto, HBHF (another tattoo on his right arm). I've gotten in trouble for some things, but that's just my love of the game.

"Terrell Owens was the first guy I really watched, and he was out here doing stuff with pom-poms and popcorn. That's what I saw, so I wanted to do that. I wanted to entertain."

And what does he have planned for his first touchdown in a 49ers uniform?

"I might do everything at once," he said, laughing.

Sentimental for Stick

Johnson and his wife, Britney, love hanging out at Fisherman's Wharf when they're in town. Or he'll just walk around downtown San Francisco, watching the hustle and bustle.

He's home again.

"I'm not taking anything away from this stadium," Johnson said, glancing toward Levi's a few hundred yards away, "but I would have loved to have played one year at Candlestick."

Stevie Johnson

49ers' Stevie Johnson brings 'Stevie Styles' back to Bay Area

By Dan Brown
San Jose Mercury News

On the day Stevie Johnson reported for college football duty, the Kentucky equipment manager offered him a choice of uniforms with an array of traditional wide receiver numbers: 80, 82, 83 or 86.

"Then he said, 'Oh, yeah, and we've got No. 13,' " Johnson recalled.

Something about the way the equipment man said it sounded dismissive, as if no one would want that number anyway. Johnson took No. 13 on the spot.

The kid who once navigated the treacherous streets of Bayview-Hunters Point, who didn't play high school football till he was a junior, who was lightly recruited out of Chabot Junior College felt a kinship with a jersey from the reject pile.

"I felt like it was a number that people thought was irrelevant," Johnson says now. "And I wanted to make a name for that 13."

Now, with three 1,000-yard receiving seasons on his NFL résumé, Johnson will bring his number back to San Francisco. The 49ers traded for the six-year veteran earlier this month in hopes that the Buffalo Bills wideout could boost a passing attack that finished 30th out of 32 teams a year ago.

Johnson, too, is coming off a quiet year, managing only 52 catches for 597 yards, his lowest totals as a full-time starter. The drop-off was enough for people to doubt him again, which is fine with Johnson.

His No. 13 jersey is only the start of his symbolism.

Underneath the uniform is a body covered with tattoos. There are scenes from his neighborhood, words that resonate and names of family members. There's one with his mother's name, "Rhonda," next to a flame because he says that's where he got his fire from.

One tattoo, just beneath his left rib cage, depicts a misfit kid leaning against a brick wall, holding a football. The kid has weird, alien-like features. That kid is Johnson.

He had himself inked that way because he felt like an outcast -- alienated -- growing up as the super-focused, upright boy in a neighborhood awash in gangs, drugs and crime.

"When you're in it, you don't realize that you're in a bad neighborhood. I didn't notice until I got out of it. I would tell people I was from Bayview-Hunters Point. They were like, 'Oh, man! It's bad over there,' " Johnson said.

'WEIRDO' IN PADS

This is not a story about a kid from the mean streets who grew up mean. Johnson is a goofball. He once joked to the Buffalo News that if strangers walked into the Bills' locker room, they'd have no trouble spotting the free spirit from San Francisco: "Football player, football player, football player ... weirdo."

In conversation, he is breezy and light. And friends delight in telling their favorite Johnson story. Sarah McLaughlin, who taught Johnson world history at Rodriguez High in Fairfield, recalled how the kid showed up for his senior prom with an LED panel attached to his tuxedo coat so he could display his nickname -- "Stevie Styles" -- in bright lights.

Johnson's prom date that night, Britney, thought it was pretty cool: They've been married since 2006. She's another reason Johnson wears No. 13.

"I call her 'B.' And you take a 1 and a 3 and slide them together. That's a B," he explained. "And now I'm representing my family."

He has messages on the back of his hands. The left features the words "Have Fun." That's the Stevie Styles side. His right is inscribed with "Handle Biz." That's the Stevie Johnson side. That's the side that worked his way out of Hunters Point.

It was his stepfather, Andre "Herm" Lewis, who taught him how to handle his business. Lewis, a onetime convict, turned his life around to become a community activist and accomplished rap producer.

Herm and Rhonda kept their son out of trouble by keeping him in games. When asked how he avoided the pitfalls of his neighborhood, Johnson said: "I stayed active in sports. My father made sure I stayed out of trouble in Hunters Point. He kept me around the older guys -- my coaches -- who kept on top of us and made sure we stayed right, made sure we were doing our schoolwork."

Bayview-Hunters Point, especially in the 1990s, was a dangerous landscape of gangs, drugs and a sky-high homicide rate.

Herm Lewis' success in the music industry allowed him to move Stevie to Fairfield, where the kid enrolled in fledgling Rodriguez High.

Johnson's biggest obstacle there was making the varsity football team. Because there wasn't one.

LEADING A PROGRAM

Rodriguez High, born in 2001, didn't field a varsity football team until two years later, when Johnson was a junior. When it did, the Mustangs were the high school equivalent of an expansion team, and Johnson carried the load. He played quarterback on offense and on defense jumped around from linebacker to safety and defensive end.

"They didn't have that many athletes there. That's why he ended up playing all of the positions -- he was by far one of the best athletes in the school during that time," recalled LeVon Haynes, who coached at nearby Vanden High. "As a QB, he was decent. He just didn't have much of a supporting cast. He wound up being kind of a running back."

One position Johnson didn't play is the one that got him to the NFL. He made that conversion later, and only on a whim. While attending a Nike Football Camp at Stanford, coaches assigned him to run drills with the defensive backs.

Johnson took one look at what was going on and swallowed hard.

"I get up there seeing all these wide receivers running really fast and I thought, 'Oh, I know I can't guard them,' " Johnson recalled.

"I know I can catch the ball, so I just jumped over into the receiver line and was catching passes. That's how I started becoming a receiver. ... It completely changed my life."

Haynes coached Johnson at receiver in an East-West All-Star Game and saw "the way he attacks the football. The way he goes up and gets it. ... He's just got that tenacity that says I'm going to catch balls no matter where they're thrown."

Chabot College coach Danny Calcagno saw it, too. Johnson went on to become a key part of the Gladiators offense in 2004-05. Then, as now, the 6-foot-2, 207-pound receiver lacked breakaway speed. But he made up for it with his knack for beating defenders at the line of scrimmage.

"The two things I remember most about Stevie: No one could jam him. One team put two guys on him and still could not press him,' " Calcagno said. "Secondly, he was never in the trainers' room. No taping. No icing. Played every snap in practice and games."

Still, not many Division I colleges saw Johnson's skills. One of the few who did was Ron Caragher, the current San Jose State coach who was then an assistant coach at Kentucky in charge of scouting Northern California junior colleges.

Johnson had only a handful of catches as a junior, but Caragher, at Calcagno's urging, watched a few game tapes anyway. "Even on those few catches you could still see all the characteristics of a good receiver," said Caragher. "Separation from man-to-man coverage. Good route running where he would really stick his foot in the ground and create an attractive window for quarterbacks. And the biggest thing was that he always caught the ball at the highest point."

Kentucky rolled the dice. And handed him jersey No. 13.

'STYLES' GETS SPOTLIGHT

A seventh-round draft pick by Buffalo, Johnson went on to record at least 75 catches and 1,000 yards each season from 2010-12. He also let Stevie Styles loose on more than one occasion. He once drew a $10,000 fine for imitating a minuteman firing a rifle and falling to the ground after a fourth-quarter touchdown against the New England Patriots.

He once took to Twitter to question God after dropping a crucial pass against the Pittsburgh Steelers. "I PRAISE YOU 24/7!!!!!! AND IS THIS HOW YOU DO ME!!!!!! YOU EXPECT ME TO LEARN FROM THIS??? HOW????!! ILL NEVER FORGET THIS!! EVER!!! THX THO ..."

Now that he's home, back to where his journey began, Johnson seems at peace. His mother, Rhonda, would have loved his new gig. The lifelong 49ers fan died in her sleep at age 48 last December.

"I know she's smiling and looking down on us as a team and as a unit," Johnson said. "With her, it was Niners over everything. Even when I was with Buffalo, she was always going for the 49ers but cheering for me."

Johnson, meanwhile, can't wait to throw on his familiar uniform when the 49ers meet for offseason workouts next Tuesday. He's really done a number with it.

"I started calling it the 'Unlucky 13' because don't need luck when you're working hard," Johnson said. "That's what I did to get to this point. And I don't want to stop. I want to keep going."

Stevie Johnson had three 1,000-yard receiving seasons and 28 touchdowns over six seasons with the Buffalo Bills.

Colin Kaepernick

Colin Kaepernick's Heart Warriors

By Taylor Price

The quarterback you see on TV kissing his biceps and muscling the San Francisco 49ers to victory is providing strength in more ways than you can see.

Here's the story.

Kimberlie Gamino grew up as a San Francisco 49ers fan in Brentwood, Calif. The same goes for her husband, Michael, whom she married and had three children with in Modesto, Calif. Nathan, Taylor and Cameron. All three of the boys were raised as 49ers fans. All three make their parents very proud. However, Taylor Gamino, 21, has had health challenges that his two brothers, 22-year-old Nathan and 15-year-old Cameron, and many other children never experience.

Taylor was born with Hypoplastic Right Heart Syndrome, a condition that refers to the underdevelopment of the structures on the right side of the heart. In layman's terms, Taylor was born with half of a heart. The Gamino family learned that their second son had a life-threatening heart defect immediately at birth. They purchased books and diagrams – anything they could get their hands on – to educate themselves about their son's condition. A surgical procedure for newborns with HRHS was just four years in practice when Taylor underwent his first open-heart surgery. It took place five days after Kimberlie gave birth.

Taylor was one of the fortunate children to survive such an invasive procedure. During the months of recovery in the hospital, time that included a battle against a staph infection, Kimberlie and Michael prayed many nights, asking for their son to not suffer so greatly. Taylor was able to overcome the early health trauma. During this period, his brother Nathan, 13-months-old at the time of Taylor's first major surgery, was a source of balance and comfort for the Gamino family. Nathan would crawl up to Taylor's hospital bed and kiss his brother's forehead.

By the age of 5 and a half, Taylor had endured four open-heart surgeries and suffered a stroke. When he was 8, Taylor was living a happier and healthier life, though he could no longer keep up with his friends due to exhaustion. Taylor's oxygen saturation was not as high as other children his age and it affected his endurance in everyday activities. He was more susceptible to illness and he was embarrassed when people asked about the scar on his chest.

Taylor often told his mother that he felt like he was the only child dealing with heart disease. So Kimberlie and Michael searched for a program to help Taylor come into contact with other children living with similar health issues. "We were flabbergasted that nobody was doing anything for these children," Kimberlie said. "We recognized the need with our own son and we wanted to step up and make something happen for all these kids."

Taylor was challenged as a boy, but he had the love and support of his family. Little did the Gamino family know that years later, their foundation and son would have the financial and moral support of the 49ers starting quarterback, Colin Kaepernick.

The bye week came at the perfect time for the 49ers in 2014. The team's three-game winning streak was snapped by the Denver Broncos on "Sunday Night Football," so a week off of the field served the team well as it prepared for the final nine games of the regular season. Players were given the week off to rest up, heal, and spend time with their loved ones.

What did Colin do on his bye weekend? The 49ers signal-caller attended Camp Taylor's medically-supervised family camp in Soquel, Calif. You might recognize the namesake of the charitable event. The non-profit organization was created by Kimberlie to help accommodate one of the most unbeknownst health issues in the United States: congenital heart disease. Camp Taylor's mission is to offer programs for young people and families of children with heart disease. In addition, Camp Taylor offers medically supervised youth and teen residential camps sessions with the supervision of local doctors and nurses. The professional donate their time to help the under-served population of pediatric cardiology.

Gamino realized long before she came into contact with Kaepernick that her son's ailment was shared by 40,000 other children. "As a parent, I realized I needed to bring him into contact with others facing the same challenges so he wouldn't feel alone and he would know that children are facing the same battle," Kimberlie said.

On April 29, 2011, Kaepernick was selected 36th overall by San Francisco in the NFL Draft. It was a proud moment for Kaepernick's parents, Rick and Teresa, who've long stood by Colin's side during his athletic career. They were there when he was a Major League Baseball draft pick of the Chicago Cubs out of high school, and when he developed into an all-conference, school-record holding quarterback at the University of Nevada.

Colin's transition into the NFL was a major moment in the Gamino household, although they didn't know it at the time. The Kaepernick family's roots in Turlock, Calif., made them very aware of local headlines covering Camp Taylor's efforts in nearby Modesto. Weeks after Colin joined the 49ers, Teresa called Kimberlie to talk about Camp Taylor.

Kimberlie was astounded.

"It's not every day an NFL quarterback's mom calls you," she said, "let alone the quarterback of the San Francisco 49ers calls you, and says they'd love to help your organization. Talk about a dream come true."

Colin could have selected any charitable cause to support with his newfound fame and popularity. But in making this selection, the budding NFL quarterback wanted to support a cause near and dear to his heart. Colin's parents lost two boys at the ages for 4 days old and 4 months old to heart defects. The tragedies led Rick and Teresa to adopt Colin, then six-weeks old, from Appleton, Wisc.

Colin has long understood the significance of heart trauma, so helping Camp Taylor was an easy decision. He even donated money with his first paycheck from the 49ers.

"He told his parents he wanted to help children with congenital heart disease," Kimberlie recalled. "His parents were taken aback, and they were surprised because they hadn't talked a whole lot about the children they had lost to heart disease. But Colin had given it a lot of thought and it was very touching to his parents that he would choose to honor them, and show his love to them by reaching out to children with heart disease."

Autographs and photos are the norm for an NFL player. Any public appearance from a well-known player can require dozens of John Hancock's and selfie-photographs. The 49ers quarterback is well-aware of this aspect of the job. That's why he doesn't go shoe shopping in the malls these days. But when it comes to signing autographs, taking pictures and meeting with the kids at Camp Taylor's events, Colin is eager to lift the spirits of those around him. He's even well-versed in joining in on the camper's arts and crafts time.

"He's just a really awesome guy," Kimberlie said of her foundation's most notable donor. "I think a lot of people have a built up expectation and forget that he is a person. He's a human being, and he has feelings. He has a huge capacity of love for others and especially for children. You could see that easily in his eyes when he's with the kids. You can see that in his actions. He's very approachable, and he plays with the children. When he spends time with our kids, it's amazing."

Colin calls the children his, "Heart warriors." He often retweets @Camp_Taylor's pictures of the children. There's also merchandise available on kidsheartcamp.org for purchase that shows Colin's last name and a similar resemblance to his number seven uniform with the 49ers. The proceeds go to the children and helps Kimberlie put on events like the foundation's upcoming, third annual, Against All Odds Colin Kaepernick and Camp Taylor Golf Tournament in June. The expanding tournament in Modesto, which features appearances from Colin and his 49ers teammates, allows Camp Taylor to increase awareness and grow funding to serve more families and its numerous camps throughout the year in Turlock and Soquel, Calif.

"He always has us on his radar," Kimberlie said, "and he's always thinking about the kids. It's incredible. For somebody of Colin's level to stand up and say, 'I accept you. I think you're awesome. I'm going to come hang out with you,' is huge. That's acceptance on a scale that they don't normally receive. It helps their self-esteem."

Camp Taylor is growing at a rapid pace. They serve more than 600 people in a calendar year. Kimberlie has also purchased property in Modesto so the foundation can build its own permanent facility to better serve those affected.

Much of Camp Taylor's attention in recent years can be linked to Kimberlie's tireless work and Colin's success on the gridiron as San Francisco's starting quarterback. "We're continuing to grow in ways we never could before without his help and the awareness he's able to help us to create," Kimberlie said.

All of the funds being raised have been done so with little to no media attention. Colin has kept a low-profile when handling his philanthropic interests. "He doesn't invite the media in to take pictures of him doing things with us," Kimberlie said. "A lot of it is done behind the scenes. It speaks volumes about his character and his motives. They're pure. He's real. And that's what we hear from all the families, 'You know what? He's such a wonderful guy.'"

Colin's parents routinely volunteer at Camp Taylor's nine different year-round programs. They're known as "Momma and Poppa Kap" by the campers. With the help of the Kaepernick family, which includes Colin's brother Kyle, sister-in-law Lindsay, sister Devon and brother-in-law George, Camp Taylor is creating a charitable foundation that will provide life-changing experiences for years to come.

Kimberlie knows what type of influence the NFL superstar has had on her son, her community, and the cause she's trying to bring to the masses. "We're incredibly grateful," Kimberlie said. "I'm perfectly aware that Colin has his choice of charities to support and for him to have such unwavering support for our organization and for the children that we serve, and it's not just about support, it's about pure love."

Colin's relationship with Taylor has been "amazing to witness," Kimberlie said. The Gamino family remains vigilant in monitoring Taylor's overall health. In February of this year, Taylor had two coils placed outside of his heart. As a result, Kimberlie said her son feels better. Taylor takes three medications daily, but remains upbeat despite living with a life-threatening illness.

"My son has advocated on behalf of kids with heart disease," she continued. "He's 21 now and still lives with half of a heart. He's a miracle. For somebody like Colin to come along and be a voice and a spokesperson with a sincere desire to help move us forward, it is incredible. Taylor realizes that and is grateful for that."

As Kimberlie points out, most of the children in Camp Taylor's program will never relate to what Colin experiences on a daily basis as a professional football player. They'll never know what it's like to take part in a physically demanding sport. They will, however, know what Colin's kind heart is all about.

"They love football because of Colin," Kimberlie said. "They follow him like nobody's business. They have all the Niners gear and they cheer and root him on. Sunday is a big day for them."

Colin KaepernickColin Kaepernick and Stevie Johnson – A reason for 49ers' optimism

By Kevin Lynch
San Francisco Chronicle
November 5, 2014

Looking for an island of optimism in a sea of San Francisco 49ers' despair? Look no further than the 49ers' locker room. Even coming off a pair of crushing defeats to the Broncos and Rams, the players remain steadfast in the belief in themselves and in a successful second half of the season.

The reason? The players are confident in each other and much of that confidence flows from quarterback Colin Kaepernick. Wide receiver Stevie Johnson learned that first hand when he struggled mightily in training camp and preseason games.

Johnson was trying to run routes the way the 49ers wanted him to do it. By running in a straight line, breaking down and then making his final cut to get open. However, Johnson runs in a fashion in which you never know when he's going to cut and that's what's made him successful.

As training camp went on, Johnson struggled to make the transition to the 49ers way, and that's when he approached Kaepernick about working after training camp practices.

"I tried to come in here and change and run their routes," Johnson said. "But it wasn't connecting. Then I was like, 'OK, can we get together where there are no cameras and I can run like I really run, and we can connect from there?'"

Johnson wasn't sure what kind of reaction he would get. He figured the 49ers had just come off three NFC championship games, proving their techniques and systems worked well. So why would they adjust to him?

"I wondered if this dude (Kaepernick) had time to get things right," Johnson said. "He was (open to it). He wasn't a prima donna-type player."

Kaepernick is far from a traditional quarterback – from the way he looks to the way he throws. So he, maybe more than anyone, could understand Johnson's frustrations and was more than willing to work with him.

"He's a very unique player, a very unique route runner," Kaepernick said of Johnson. "But that has worked for him. He has had success doing that. So why would you want to take him out of his comfort zone or take him out of what he's been successful with? Give him the guidelines and let him work within those guidelines to let him do what he does best. If he hits his spot on time, it doesn't affect me; it doesn't affect the play. But it gives him the freedom to get open the way he needs to."

Kaepernick said part of his job is to learn the nuances of how his receivers run routes, and that Anquan Boldin, Brandon Lloyd and Johnson all run routes differently. But Johnson is the most unusual.

"Part of it is just his body movement," Kaepernick said. "The natural mechanics of how he runs, how he cuts to get open, is unorthodox. Most people are straight line, break down and get in and out of breaks. His whole route he is setting up (the defensive back) to when he's going to break; when he's going to make that final cut."

Kaepernick suggested the best might be yet to come with Johnson. Both quarterback and receiver are committed to making sure every route and every play is run correctly for game day.

"If he runs a route and he doesn't feel like it's right, he'll come back and say, 'let's do it again.' That's kind of been like our protocol together," Kaepernick said. "If we don't run it right, we are going to go back and run it again until we get it right and that's why as the season has gone on, he has had a bigger and bigger impact. It's because of that extra work."

The two needed the extra work initially to convince coaches that Johnson should be allowed the freedom to get open his way.

"Once (the coaches) saw that we were working on it a lot, just to get timing down ... and we were having success with it, they were like, 'OK, you guys are on the same page, we are going to let you work,'" Kaepernick said. "I think that's when he started to really be in his comfort zone and feel like he had the freedom to go out and make plays."

The offensive coaches deserve credit for not taking the "my way or the highway" approach. Some passing-game coaches can get so bogged down in the precision of route running they lose perspective on whether receivers are actually getting open.

Johnson is getting open plenty. He is tied with Michael Crabtree in team touchdown receptions with three. His 28 catches for 356 yards is comparable to Crabtree's 37 catches and 362 yards, although Johnson has had 37 passes thrown his way and Crabtree has had 60.

Johnson knows that his success might not be possible if a Super Bowl quarterback didn't understand his plight, and that's given him added incentive to make the season a success. Johnson, like Kaepernick, talks with kids and he wants to use Kaepernick as an example on how to be a teammate and how to work together.

"That's why (the locker room) is special," Johnson said. "That's why I hope we make it (to the Super Bowl). I like working with people, and I like to show them how to be humble-minded, like he is."

A humble and open mind is what the leader of the 49ers has. And that's reason enough to retain some optimism about the 49ers.

Colin KaepernickKaepernick all smiles at Camp Taylor benefit golf tournament

By Rob Agostini
The Modesto Bee
June 16, 2014

In the parlance of children born with heart defects, Kayla Safdari, 10, is saddled with disorders known as “single ventricle” and “dextrocardia.”

Simply, her heart is inverted in her chest. She wears a pacemaker.

Much of her support comes from two sources: her companions at Camp Taylor and especially the man who stood behind her, literally and figuratively, Monday at the Del Rio Country Club.

“It really helps me because I realize there are other people out there that went through what I went through,” Kayla said.

Upon hearing those words, Colin Kaepernick – the towering football player nearby – wore a smile the size of Turlock. He loves kids, especially those who fight for their lives as hard as he works to win on the football field. The San Francisco 49ers’ charismatic quarterback would do anything to improve their plight.

Kaepernick did something, all right, during his second annual “Against All Odds” benefit golf tournament. The event that raised $219,000 last year for Camp Taylor, the Salida-based organization that helps children such as Kayla, figures to do at least as well this year, if not better.

His public appearance at Camp Taylor three years ago has grown into a love affair. Kaepernick feels a personal and emotional connection to the kids, given that his mother, Teresa, lost two infant boys to heart disease.

“My first time at Camp Taylor, we were in the swimming pool. Not once did the kids ask me about the tattoos. They have scars from surgeries,” he remembered. “Ultimately, it wasn’t about the skin. It’s about who you are.”

Kaepernick has parlayed his popularity into a personal crusade. The 184-player tournament and the dinner for 320 Monday night were sold out. Fans of the 49ers paid princely sums for the right to play a few holes with the local product who’s already led his team to the Super Bowl and the NFC Championship Game.

His “Against All Odds” event, named for the scripted words inked across his chest, provides Kaepernick a sense of satisfaction. Not only does he assist the children who clearly need him, he also bonds with fans willing to help.

Kaepernick’s joy at Del Rio was hard to miss. He’s a happy man these days. Two weeks ago, he signed a six-year, $126 million contract, which was hailed as a realistic statement for a young and growing quarterback. Much of his money will be awarded on merit, and he won’t financially strap the franchise along the way.

Last week, he learned that no charges would be filed against him regarding the troubling incident in Miami involving him, two teammates and a woman who awoke in a hospital.

"Miami is over and done with," he declared. "There was nothing there."

Rick Kaepernick, Colin's father, also appeared relieved. He was present when his son signed the lucrative contract.

"What the contract means is he has to perform," Rick Kaepernick said, "but when has a big contract been signed where you don't have to perform? You know, he hasn't spent a penny yet. We're just pleased with the 49ers and their willingness to meet with us."

Rick Kaepernick also was straightforward regarding the Miami episode. "We knew what the deal was," he said. "Sometimes silence is better, but it was hard not to go out and say it (that he had done nothing wrong)."

Colin Kaepernick, 26, already has accomplished great things while feeling the sting of major disappointment. The Pitman High graduate has fallen two completed passes shy of a Super Bowl victory and a second straight appearance in The Big One. Like many athletes, the shelf life of the losses lingers longer than the wins.

"They stay with me," he said. "I still remember the back-to-back losses to Grace Davis."

His sometimes rocky off-season, after the heartbreak against the eventual Super Bowl champion Seattle Seahawks, finally has stabilized. Now it's time to address the 2014 season. He had company at Del Rio in fullback and former roommate Bruce Miller.

"I wanted to show my support for him and the kids," Miller said.

Yes, you can assume Kaepernick and his heavier wallet will open even wider for his friends at Camp Taylor.

Said the grinning quarterback, "They will be getting another check."

Colin Kaepernick will be the San Francisco 49ers starting quarterback through 2020.

Hours after using a quill pen to sign a six-year extension, the fourth-year pro said he feels no pressure to live up to added expectations.

"I'm going to work to make sure I'm worth every penny of this," said Kaepernick, who coincidentally wore socks with dollar bills on them while speaking to local reporters. "That's something I feel like I can do."

Kaepernick has played under the brightest of lights, including two starts in back-to-back NFC Championship games and an appearance in Super Bowl XLVII.

A new contract, in his mind, won't change his outlook on his job.

Kaepernick said he remains motivated to win multiple titles now that he's playing in San Francisco for the next seven seasons.

"I'm trying to win as many Super Bowls as I can," Kaepernick said. "That's not necessarily realistic to win it every single year, but that's what your goal is."

Kaepernick credited his agents and the 49ers front office for getting a contract done earlier than expected. Six weeks sooner, to be exact.

"We can get back to football and get back to trying to win a Super Bowl," the 26-year-old quarterback said.

On the field, Kaepernick is aiming to be one of the top quarterbacks in the league. The contract might bring on added attention, but Kaepernick is just fine with that.

"To me it's something I feel like I'm always striving to be in that group, in that elite group in the NFL," Kaepernick said.

"Whatever comes along with that, comes along with it. For me, I'm worried about being the best player that I can and try to help this organization win as many games as we can."

Kaepernick said the 49ers made the deal team-friendly.

"They felt like this was something they would be able to get other players," Kaepernick said. "I'm very grateful for it. There have been too many people to help me get to this position... I'm very grateful for my teammates as well. I wouldn't be there without them."

Kaepernick, ironic socks and all, isn't motivated by his paycheck. It's the performance that matters most.

"I don't think my motivation is money driven," he said. "I think it's driven by the success I can have on the field ... with my teammates."

Kaepernick will use the rest of the offseason to brush up on his passing skills and get his team in position to compete for a Super Bowl.

"Progressions, getting though reads, making better decisions in certain situations – those are always things you're looking to improve," he said.

Kaepernick received a sports car from an endorsement deal, but he said he's not looking to add anything fancy soon.

"The three most expensive things I own are my TVs, my bed and my couch," he said. "I'm going to keep it that way for awhile."

Daniel Kilgore

49ers Kilgore a gentle giant when not a ferocious center

By Ron Kroichick
San Francisco Chronicle
September 27, 2014

Daniel Kilgore understood a professional football career was no sure thing.

Kilgore, now the starting center for the 49ers, did not disappear from campus after his senior season in college, like so many NFL prospects. He diligently trained for the league combine, sure, and held private workouts for prospective teams curious about a promising lineman from unheralded Appalachian State.

But he wasn't at all certain about his NFL future, so Kilgore stayed in school and spent time student teaching at Hardin Park Elementary School in Boone, N.C., working mostly with special-education kids.

Mary Williams, the since-retired adapted physical education specialist for Watauga County public schools, led the program. Williams saw anything but a big-time athlete making a token effort to complete the requirements for his physical education degree.

"Daniel was very dedicated to kids with disabilities," Williams said. "He had this presence about him. The students were in awe. They'd say, 'He's a giant!'"

Kilgore made a giant impression on one special-education student in second grade at the time. The boy hated P.E., so he often arrived late to class and conveniently missed exercises.

But the kid, even if he didn't talk much, connected with Kilgore. He called him "Mr. Daniel" or "Coach K" and dutifully followed Kilgore's instructions on how to do push-ups and sit-ups.

"He would do anything for Daniel," Williams said. "Daniel got him to work."

Kilgore took his role seriously, dating to his sophomore year at Appalachian State. That's when he first volunteered at Hardin Park, soon after his grandfather James Hammonds died.

By his senior year, Kilgore became more involved. He helped the kids work on their basic motor skills, among other activities, and the experience made an impact.

"It really hit me hard," he said. "That could be a second calling. You can't play football forever."

Kilgore might have seemed like a giant to the kids in North Carolina — understandable given his size (6-foot-3 and 308 pounds) — but his relative lack of height hurt him in college recruiting.

He earned all-state honors as the center at Dobyns-Bennett High in Kingsport, Tenn., but no high-profile Division I programs offered Kilgore a scholarship. One ACC assistant coach pointed to his height as the main reason, according to Joey Christian, the offensive line coach at Dobyns-Bennett.

Kilgore started for three years in high school, exclusively at center. This is notable because he didn't play the position at Appalachian State — 16 starts at right guard, 13 at left tackle — and then the 49ers moved him back to center, where he took over as this year's starter after three seasons as a seldom-used reserve.

The stint in high school, in the spread offense, made Kilgore comfortable with the shotgun formation (which the 49ers often use). Kilgore mastered the shotgun snap one summer by cutting a full circle in a piece of plywood, then firing snap after snap through the opening.

"I don't recall us ever having a bad snap in his three years here," Christian said.

Kilgore endured several injuries and coaching changes in college, but his time at Appalachian State also included some memorable moments. He scored a touchdown in the FCS (formerly Division I-AA) national championship game against Delaware in 2007, recovering a fumble in the end zone.

The Mountaineers went on to win their third consecutive national title, punctuating a season in which they gained national acclaim for their stunning upset of Michigan. That victory still serves Kilgore well: He enjoys reminding 49ers offensive tackle Joe Staley that his alma mater, Central Michigan, didn't win at the "Big House."

Kilgore, whom the 49ers drafted in the fifth round in 2011, cracked an exclusive club when he replaced Jonathan Goodwin as San Francisco's starting center. The 49ers had developed uncommon continuity on their offensive line the past few seasons, with Goodwin flanked by Mike Iupati and Staley on the left side and Alex Boone and Anthony Davis to his right.

Goodwin was the leader of the pack, an unflappable veteran who reliably handled a center's wide-ranging duties. All the while, as Kilgore mostly sat on the bench, he watched and learned.

So when the 49ers let Goodwin leave as a free agent, Kilgore was ready — with lessons from Goodwin ringing in his head.

"The biggest thing is to just keep my cool," Kilgore said. "I try to copy the way Jonathan approached every day. He was the guy teams look to for leadership on the final drive in the fourth quarter, when you're down by a touchdown."

The 49ers, like all NFL teams, demand more than poise and leadership from their center. It's a complicated position, requiring quick recognition of defensive formations and blocking schemes — not to mention the athleticism and nasty streak needed from all offensive linemen.

No other offensive player, beyond quarterback Colin Kaepernick, shoulders more responsibility than Kilgore does.

"There's a lot on his plate, but it's something he's very capable of handling," Kaepernick said.

Kilgore's work with special-education students is not highlighted to portray him as saintly. (He was arrested for public intoxication in Tennessee in January; the charges were later dropped and the case was dismissed in April.) Still, given the recent headlines of misconduct by several NFL players, his story seems refreshing.

Even after his career took him across the country, Kilgore stayed connected to those kids in North Carolina. They occasionally trade text messages during the season and he returns to Hardin Park each offseason; he made a sizable donation this year toward a new playground for special-needs students.

This all makes for a striking contrast: an oversized man who earns his living grappling in the NFL trenches and finds deeper meaning in small kids with disabilities.

"I'm sure he's a beast on the field — I've watched him play, and I'd hate to go against him," Williams said. "But Daniel has a soft spot for special-ed kids, and that was the side we saw. It wasn't about him, it was about the kids."

Brandon Lloyd

Back in the saddle

By Dan Pompei
SportsOnEarth.com
August 1, 2014

When 33-year-old Brandon Lloyd retired last year, he didn't just stop playing football. He escaped from the NFL, and all that he was for a decade as a wide receiver for the 49ers, Redskins, Bears, Broncos, Rams and Patriots.

He could have been catching passes from Tom Brady last fall. The year before, Lloyd had 911 receiving yards for the Patriots. Instead of selling moves on cornerbacks, Lloyd began selling steel parts for airplanes. He gave up being cheered by thousands and having his accomplishments replayed on giant scoreboards, televisions, laptops and mobile devices in order to be a regular guy, with a regular job and regular kids in a regular suburb of Denver.

A lot of us wanted to be Brandon Lloyd. Brandon Lloyd wanted to be us.

He never watched a game or even checked a score. He kept in contact with no one from his football life. He turned down overtures from at least six teams, including the Patriots, according to Pro Football Talk. He even denied that he was who he was. "When I was working in the aerospace industry, people sometimes would make a comment," Lloyd said. "They'd say, 'You know there is a football player who has the same name.'" Lloyd laughs. He didn't want them to know. One time, he admitted it, he said. And it helped him make a sale.

Lloyd sought complete separation from his former life, and it was not difficult to attain. "I didn't have time to distract myself with sports or gossip or whatever," he said. "I don't watch much TV. I had a lot on my plate. I was doing a lot of reading. Lot of studying. Even reading sales books, figure out how to make sales, maintain clients, keep the clients I had happy. I had to submerge myself into their lives so they could understand who I was beyond football."

He wore a collared shirt when he worked in an office at Re-Steel in Commerce City, Colo. When he traveled, he wore a tie. He took business trips to Japan, Detroit, Southern California, Great Britain and Seattle, where he studied under a metallurgist. He made decent money. And he worked hard. He said football ingrained a discipline in him that helped prepare him for the corporate world. Getting up early, being on time and staying late had been second nature.

Lloyd found his new job rewarding, just like football had been. "I got the same gratification out of solving problems with my mind that I did physically out on the football field for so many years," he said. "That's what I liked about the challenge."

In his free time, Lloyd did things like driving his two boys to school and watching their athletic events. He played in a men's tennis league and went golfing, snowshoeing and cross-country skiing. Those sports were a lot easier on his body. The aches and stiffness in his shoulders, back and legs dissipated.

But he had to yearn for the game, right? He had to miss the competition, the locker room, the adulation, the money, didn't he? "There was not an overwhelming desire or need or urge to play," he said. "I wasn't missing anything in my life by not playing... There was a peace of mind and anonymity that I really appreciated in that time off."

So how can we explain the sight of Lloyd at 49ers camp this week, putting a move on a 22-year-old cornerback, creating separation and scoring a touchdown in a seven-on-seven drill?

After last season, when the NFL was Lloyd's ex-wife, his agent David Dunn called. He asked if Lloyd would be interested in reconciliation. The answer was no, unless...

It once was Lloyd's dream to play for the 49ers, the team he grew up cheering for. And he was chosen by San Francisco in the fourth round of the 2003 draft. But the 49ers that drafted him were no longer the team of his dreams. The Bill Walsh magic was gone, and Lloyd's experience was disappointing. He lasted three years in San Francisco before being traded to the Redskins. But now, Jim Harbaugh's 49ers are more like the 49ers that Lloyd dreamed of playing for. "An opportunity presented itself for me to play for the team I was in love with when I was a child when they were back in the winning mode," Lloyd said. "The conclusion we came to is the ability to bring closure to my career was worth it."

Initially, the thought was Lloyd would go through OTAs and see how his body felt, and if he had any misgivings. That went well, and now he is playing well in camp. Many around the team believe he could give the 49ers passing game a dimension it lacked one year ago.

It only was four years ago when Lloyd led the NFL in receiving and played in the Pro Bowl, so it came back quickly to him. He said he feels just like he did in 2012 when he was catching all those passes from Brady. Harbaugh told reporters Lloyd looks "young and spry." Rookie cornerback Dontae Johnson said Lloyd is the most difficult receiver on the team to cover, and praised him for his ability to disguise his routes. Lloyd's re-ignited flame for football has burned brightly. Harbaugh has gushed about how Lloyd gets animated when he watches tape, even rising from his seat to mimic moves on the screen.

The best part for Lloyd is he didn't have to give up his new life. His employers were pleased to give him a leave of absence, in part because they were excited to watch someone they knew so well do what they never could.

So one day Lloyd will slip back into a phone booth, and when he emerges, hardly anyone will know who he used to be.

Marcus Martin*Skills and smarts: Tech-savvy Martin ready for NFL debut

By Eric Branch
San Francisco Chronicle
November 2, 2014

Before he was opening holes, Marcus Martin was opening computers.

Growing up in south central Los Angeles, the 49ers rookie center was too big to play Pop Warner football. Way too big: Martin was 6-foot-2 and weighed 360 pounds when he entered Crenshaw High.

But his size didn't disqualify him from replacing desktop hard drives and circuits, installing software and, eventually, learning computer code. It was a passion he inherited from his father, Gary, who repaired computers as a hobby, often helping relatives free of charge.

Gary Martin says Marcus was 12 when he approached him in the middle of a job.

"I told him what I was doing and he took to it right away," Gary said. "By the time he got to high school he could do anything I could do, if not a little bit more. It was very good for him. You have to think. You have to work with your hands. It really helped him develop in other parts of life. It's very meticulous work."

Eight years later after he dug into his first desktop, Martin's meticulous nature has helped prepare him for the high-degree-of-difficulty task he'll assume when the 49ers host the Rams on Sunday at Levi's Stadium.

Martin, who hasn't taken a regular-season snap, will make his NFL first start in place of Daniel Kilgore, who has been placed on season-ending injured reserve with a broken ankle.

That, alone, is a daunting assignment. Making it more difficult: Martin, 20, isn't old enough to legally buy a beer, is a former guard who first played center last year as a junior at USC and will square off against an imposing blend of quickness (Rams first-round pick Aaron Donald) and power (2012 first-round pick Michael Brockers) on Sunday.

MMWhy is he ready? His coaches and teammates have pointed to his attention to detail, certainly borne partly out of his computer work.

"One thing I've noticed about him is that he takes notes like an old veteran," left tackle Joe Staley said. "He really does. We went over some stuff and his notebook was filled with every single detail. He's ready. He's been champing at the bit to get on the field."

Martin has had to wait because he sustained a dislocated kneecap in a preseason game on Aug. 24 and didn't return to practice until October.

He's been inactive for the first seven games, but active on the sideline. Martin has stood next to offensive line coach Mike Solari and acted as if he was on the field making the split-second adjustments centers must communicate based on defensive fronts. He also used his time off when he was injured to spend more time meeting with coaches.

"That was a key component of rehabilitation because most guys fall off mentally and allow themselves to just focus on the physical aspect of it," Martin said. "But I think playing good football is about being consistent both physically and mentally."

Martin has always excelled in the classroom. He took advance placement courses at Crenshaw High, where he had a 3.4 GPA. In an interview with Scout.com, the heavily recruited Martin, then 17, dropped the word “nihilistic” to describe the bleak outlook adopted by many in south central Los Angeles. He plans to return to USC in the offseason to complete his degree in African American Studies.

When his oldest brother, Mark, 39, began mentoring Marcus, he quickly realized the fledgling football player wanted to know the finer points of his position. All of them. Mark is a former defensive lineman at Crenshaw who serves as a volunteer coach at his alma mater.

“He took off and ran with football and he really made me have to step my game up a little more,” Mark said. “He was really interested in knowing everything about it. It was like ‘I better learn a little more.’”

The 49ers selected Martin, 6-3 and 321 pounds, because they believe he has skills to match his smarts. He stepped into a starting role in the third game of his freshman season when he was 17. He made 33 starts and finished as a team captain and first-team All-Pac 12 center after playing his first two seasons at guard.

General manager Trent Baalke said Martin needs to develop in the weight room, which is common for young offensive linemen, but his other strengths are why the 49ers selected him with the sixth pick of the third round. Martin was the second center drafted.

“He’s a naturally big guy who’s quick and quick-minded,” Baalke said. “When you have those things working for you – you can make some make pretty good things happen.”

USC offensive line coach Tim Drevno, who held the same position with the 49ers from 2011 to 2013, has routinely watched video of Martin this season. In preparation for an upcoming opponent USC played in 2013, Drevno has studied film of that previous game. Drevno’s analysis: Martin will be a “great pro.”

“You can tell he’s got really good lower-body girth, he’s got great initial quickness, can snap the ball and get low pad leverage,” Drevno said. “He does a nice job of bringing his feet and finishing blocks ... They’ve got a really good football player.”

Martin, who will turn 21 on Nov. 29, is the 49ers’ youngest player by more than eight months, but he’s accustomed to being the baby.

He is the youngest of five children and his older siblings range in age from 27 to 39. Gary Martin, 59, who has been divorced twice, largely raised Marcus as a single parent. His other children and extended family looked after Marcus when Gary was working as a shoe salesman, bus driver and meter reader, but it was often the two of them together when Marcus was growing up.

Asked about his beyond-his-years maturity this week, Marcus credited his dad, who cried when he first saw his son emerge from the home tunnel at USC. He’s expecting similar emotions from his seat in Levi’s Stadium on Sunday.

Lawrence OkoyeThe Great Brit: 49ers Okoye staying low, aiming high

By Matt Barrows
Sacramento Bee
June 4, 2014

During OTA practices a year ago, Lawrence Okoye was a physical specimen. Today he looks more like a football player.

"I couldn't get anything right because I didn't know what was going on," the one-time Olympic discus thrower said Tuesday after practice. "So at the snap you jump straight up because you're looking for the ball. Now I can stay lower for longer because, like I said, my mind's clearer."

Staying low is perhaps the biggest challenge for Okoye, who stands 6-6 and weighs more than 300 pounds. He has long legs – only offensive linemen Alex Boone and Carter Bykowski can rival Okoye's – and that makes gaining leverage an issue.

The Croydon, England native has a few traits, however, that can give him an advantage. With apologies to Joe Staley, he's the most athletically gifted big man on the team. Last week Jim Harbaugh mooned over the way Okoye more than kept pace with speedy return man Darryl Morris during a special teams drill. Morris, a 186 -pound cornerback, once ran a 40-yard dash in 4.33 seconds.

His other advantage is strength. Discus throwing is predicated on sudden bursts of power, which is similar in a lot of ways to firing off the line of scrimmage for a five-second play. Okoye did not have any catching up to do when it came to the 49ers' weight room. On the contrary, he immediately stepped in as one of the leaders when it comes to hoisting big numbers.

Okoye, 22, said that OTAs are good for honing technique but that he's looking forward to training camp when he can show off his power. "Right now it's about looking smooth and being technically sound," he said. "When the pads come on you can show your physicality and stuff."

Finally Okoye is very bright, studies hard and (psst: here's the key) seems to truly want to be an NFL football player, which hasn't always been the case when it comes to athletes – whether it be wrestlers or track stars – who take up the sport.

He has plenty going against him, including his relative lack of experience and a loaded 49ers' roster when it comes to defensive ends. In addition to starters Justin Smith and Ray McDonald, the team has Tank Carradine, Quinton Dial, Tony Jerod-Eddie and Demarcus Dobbs at the position. Will Tukuafu has been playing fullback exclusively, but his original position was defensive end and his ability to play multiple positions is an advantage when it comes to landing a roster spot.

Okoye, meanwhile, spent 2013 on injured reserve. He and Carradine, a high second-round pick a year ago, are the only players in the list above who have not played an NFL snap. It will be interesting to see whether the leap Okoye has made from know-nothing first-year neophyte to second-year player is dramatic enough for the 49ers to keep him around for a third season.

Kaleb Ramsey

Strength to carry on: Ramsey has endured injury plagued past

By Eric Branch
San Francisco Chronicle
June 3, 2014

At the NFL combine in February, 49ers rookie defensive tackle Kaleb Ramsey had 36 reps of 225 pounds on the bench press, which ranked second among all the prospects in Indianapolis.

Unfortunately for Ramsey, he ranked first in another category: time spent with the combine's medical staff.

After he missed games at Boston College with a concussion and ankle, hip, foot, calf and hamstring injuries, Ramsey spent six hours undergoing various exams.

"My medical file was probably about that thick," Ramsey said, placing his index finger and thumb a few inches apart. "It was a long day to say the least ... I looked around about 10 at night and I was the last one in there."

Thanks to his War-and-Peace-sized medical dossier, Ramsey was also among the last players drafted in May. The 49ers selected him in the seventh round, No. 243 overall, with hopes he can stay healthy after injuries marred a once-promising college career.

Before Ramsey was granted a sixth year of college eligibility – injuries forced him to miss 21 of 24 games from 2011-12 – he played seven games as a true freshman in 2008. Ramsey played alongside nose tackle B.J. Raji and defensive end Ron Brace, who were both top-40 picks in the 2009 draft.

At the time, it appeared Ramsey (6-foot-3, 285 pounds), an all-state basketball player at Laurel Highland (Pa.) High, would also become another high-end draft pick thanks to his blend of strength and athleticism.

"His true freshman year he was playing with some very good players and he was right there competing alongside them," said Old Dominion assistant head coach Jeff Comissiong, who was Ramsey's position coach at Boston College from 2008-12. "That, right there, tells you something about his talent. Up until the injuries really started to take effect, there were a lot of people looking at him and saying 'Wow, this kid is going to be really damn good.' And he is a good player when he's on the field. A very good player."

In 2009, Ramsey missed five games with a sprained ankle. In the spring of 2011, he underwent shoulder surgery to finally repair a torn labrum he sustained in high school. That fall, he missed the final 11 games with plantar fasciitis. In 2012, he missed the final 10 games with a torn calf muscle. Last year, he missed three games with a hamstring injury and couldn't participate in drills at the combine because of a pulled calf muscle.

He spent so much time at Boston College – he began his senior season on three occasions – that general manager Trent Baalke said the 49ers scouts developed Ramsey fatigue.

"They were finally glad that this was the last time they had to watch him at the college level and put a grade on him," Baalke said. "Because in all honesty I think we have graded him for three straight years."

Said Ramsey of his extended college career: "I was at home (this winter) and I felt like 'OK, I'm going to going back to school soon for spring ball.' Then I thought, 'Wait, I'm not in school any more.' It was kind of weird."

Ramsey's background has made for an interesting NFL rookie bio. He'll turn 25 on June 20, making him almost four months older than right tackle Anthony Davis, a four-year NFL veteran. He earned a sociology degree two years ago and is pursuing a master's degree in criminal justice. After his football career, he hopes to follow in the footsteps of his father, Jeff, a retired police detective.

Ramsey credits the support of his parents, prayer and perseverance for not becoming overwhelmed by frustration at Boston College. Comissiong said his teammates respected Ramsey's attitude and work ethic. Evidence: They named him a team captain in 2012 even though he played just one game the previous season.

With the 49ers, Ramsey has a more modest status. He is a long shot to make the 53-man roster on a team filled with capable defensive linemen.

After his injury filled past, though, he has a healthy outlook on his future.

"I feel like I'm the darkhorse," Ramsey said. "Being a seventh-round pick, I don't think it expressed the potential I have. My goal is to prove a lot of people wrong and just take advantage of this opportunity."

Keith Reaser49ers rookie Keith Reaser strives to honor memory of his cousin, Sean Taylor

By Mark Maske
Washington Post
August 14, 2014

Keith Reaser remembers the football games he watched his older cousin play. He remembers the workouts when Reaser was old enough and began to show some promise of his own at the sport. But mostly, he says, he remembers the advice his cousin would give to him whenever they trained together.

"His overall message to me was, 'It's no secret to it. It's just hard work. People are always looking for the shortcut or [asking]: How do I do this? But it's just hard work,' " recalled Reaser, a rookie cornerback with the San Francisco 49ers. "And he just really worked at it, really worked at it."

Perhaps the message wasn't all that unique. But for Reaser, it was memorable because of how uniquely gifted the messenger was. Reaser's elder cousin, his football hero, was Sean Taylor.

Taylor, the former Pro Bowl safety for the Washington Redskins, possessed talent so immense some observers believed he would have left a mark as one of the all-time greats at his position. Instead, it's been seven years since he was shot and killed during a botched burglary at his home. Reaser, who was 16 at the time of Taylor's death, has managed to follow his cousin into the NFL. In May he was selected by the 49ers in the fifth round of the draft out of Florida Atlantic University, despite a knee injury that is expected to keep him sidelined for all of his rookie season.

Reaser's goal now, as always, is to do things that would have made his cousin proud, he says.

"Every time I come out on the field, every time I go to work out, I try to play that over in my mind: If he was here, how would I work? What would I do today? Would he be proud of what I'm doing today?" Reaser said. "I try to keep it in my mind. I try to write it on me somewhere before a game. But it plays on my mind every day, any time I do anything football related."

Family ties

Drew Rosenhaus, the NFL super-agent, remembers a picture taken at Taylor's 2004 draft celebration with his family. Standing close to Taylor on one of the happiest days of Taylor's life was a 12-year-old kid. It was Keith Reaser.

"It's really special that we were able to help Sean's family after the horrible tragedy they've gone through and had to deal with over the years," Rosenhaus said. "And it's really special to be able to contribute to bringing the family some good news with Keith making it into the NFL. Keith has dealt with a great deal of adversity of his own. It's very meaningful because I care very much about Sean's family and just being able to do something for his first cousin is very important."

Rosenhaus represented Taylor, and now he represents Reaser.

"It's just great," Rosenhaus said. "It's amazing how time flies. It seems like just yesterday we were representing Sean. I'm very proud of Keith. He's a hard worker. He's a real winner.... They have a lot of the same qualities. They both play the game very hard, very passionate. I think a lot of the great qualities he has, he learned from Sean. Sean was one of the most competitive guys I ever met. I think the fact that the 49ers drafted Keith in the fifth round knowing he probably wouldn't play this year shows you that he's an early-round talent. He has a really bright future."

Taylor was eight years older than Reaser, and Reaser followed Taylor's football career at every level.

"My favorite player, favorite player by far," Reaser said, referring to his cousin. "The cool thing is to have your favorite player be someone in your family. It really gave you that added motivation and that belief that if he can do it, I can do it, too, because he's in your family. I watched him from little league to high school to college, went to every game. In high school, we went to all of the home games and UM [the University of Miami]."

It was obvious all along, Reaser said, that his cousin was headed to football stardom.

"It wasn't even fair," Reaser said. "He could play anything on the field. Anything. They even put him at quarterback and let him throw passes sometimes.... He was blessed with natural size and ability. He was playing with older kids. He was playing varsity football in ninth, 10th grade and was bigger than a lot of the other guys. You could see it at a young age."

Their age difference meant that the two didn't spend too much time together, Reaser says, until Reaser was playing football and running track at Miami's Killian High School.

"If he was still alive now, we would have" spent more time together, Reaser said. "The last couple years before he died, I started training with him more, working out with him more."

Reaser vividly remembers the day in November 2007 when he learned that Taylor had been shot.

"I was in school and my mom had called me... at like 5 in the morning," he said. "I really didn't think anything of it. But it was odd that my mom called me at that time of the morning. I remember some kid in school — because people in school knew that I was his cousin — saying, 'I heard Sean Taylor got shot.' But he kind of said it... like he didn't know if it was true. I was like, 'What? Nah.' I started thinking and I was like, 'I wonder if that's why my mom called me.' So I called my mom. She was at the hospital with my uncle. I guess she didn't keep calling me because she didn't want to bring me that news while I was in school."

'Beyond frustrating' knee problems

Reaser spoke about Taylor as he stood this past Monday near the practice fields at the Baltimore Ravens' training facility. The 49ers had just finished their third day of joint practices with the Ravens before heading back to the West Coast. But Reaser isn't practicing as he works his way back from a series of knee surgeries.

"He's got a great approach, a great attitude," said Ed Donatell, the secondary coach for the 49ers. "And that's not easy to do when you know you're a guy that's down for the year. That's the right thing to do. When he comes out next year, I think he's going to be really good. I'm excited for that already."

Reaser had his final collegiate season cut short by a torn anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee and underwent surgery. When he attended the NFL scouting combine in February in Indianapolis, he learned that the graft used to repair his knee had failed and another surgery would be required.

"He's at the combine," Rosenhaus said. "He was getting ready to run the 40[-yard dash]. I think he would have run in the 4.3s. And he's being told by teams that the graft didn't hold, that his knee isn't right and he needs another surgery. He's doing great. It seems unlikely he'll play this year. He'll probably have an NFL redshirt year, if you will. But look out for Keith next year."

Donatell offered a disclaimer — "I don't really do that," he said — but with prodding, guessed that Reaser might have been a second- or third-round pick in the draft if he hadn't needed another knee surgery.

"We saw a guy with good size and good speed, good ball skills," Donatell said. "He's no stranger to the weight room. You can see he's a workout guy.... We had him rated high because of his speed. The position is so valuable. I've got college films of his one-on-ones and you see every reason to feel good about him as a player."

Reaser did not rule out the possibility of playing this season but acknowledged there's a good chance his doctors and the 49ers won't allow it.

"Beyond frustrating," Reaser said. "At this point, I'm trying to stay patient with it. My whole life I've been playing football. There's never been a time where I went months and months without playing football. So that's probably the toughest part, just to want to come out here and compete and prove what you can do. But there's just not much you can do about it and that's the most frustrating part."

Keith ReaserMemory of cousin inspires 49ers rookie

By Bill Williamson

June 9, 2014

One of the things Keith Reaser misses most about his older cousin, Sean Taylor, is how he united the extended family.

Every Sunday, if the family wasn't watching its fabulously talented prodigy dominate as a star safety for the Washington Redskins live, it would gather at a family home to watch Taylor on television.

Seven years later, Reaser hopes to give his family the chance to revisit those wonderful memories. When the San Francisco 49ers took Reaser, a talented but injured cornerback from Florida Atlantic, in the fifth round of last month's draft, they brought back the NFL to a family.

When Reaser was 16, Taylor, a Pro Bowl safety for the Redskins, was shot and killed by intruders at his home in November 2007. Taylor was 24. His death shocked the NFL. It devastated his family.

Cornerback Keith Reaser (3) was drafted in the fifth round by the 49ers. "It was such a tough time for us," said Reaser, whose mother is the sister of Taylor's mother. "He was our focal point. So much was about Sean. For it to happen like that and being in the spotlight, it was very difficult to handle."

Like his older cousin, Reaser is represented by agent Drew Rosenhaus. He was close with Taylor and recalls his death as one of the most difficult memories of his life. Rosenhaus relishes the chance to work Taylor's family member.

"It's special," Rosenhaus said. "It's really nice to be around these great people with something nice going on. Sean's passing was so difficult on me and, of course, the family. To be around them for something that is going on is really a blessing."

Reaser is proud to follow his cousin to the NFL. While Taylor was eight years his senior, he was definitely a role model for Reaser. The two would work out together, and Reaser tried to glean everything he could from Taylor, the No. 5 overall pick in the 2004 draft.

"I watched every game he ever played," Reaser said, "from him being at Miami in college to the NFL. We used to run and train together. What I learned most from him was his passion and work ethic. He taught me that, and I will never forget it."

Reaser learned from the best. ESPN analyst Louis Riddick was a pro scout when the Redskins drafted Taylor and was the team's director of pro personnel during Taylor's final three seasons. Taylor remains special to Riddick.

"[Taylor was] the best athlete that I ever scouted from a size, speed, instincts and competitiveness perspective for any position coming out of college," Riddick said. "He was a Kam Chancellor-style hitter with fluidity, grace and ball skills that could not be matched as far as safeties go. Developed a commitment to being the greatest he could be, which would have been one of the greatest of all time."

Very football smart, very likeable, very coachable; he was everything I wish I could have been when I was a player, and I used to tell him that. [He was] taken from his family and friends way, way, way too soon."

Rosenhaus said he thinks Reaser used some of the strength developed from the loss of his older cousin when he suffered a setback that could have devastated other players. Reaser, who Rosenhaus said could have gone as high as the second round if healthy, tore his left ACL in October playing for FAU. It was discovered at the NFL combine in February that the grafting in his surgery did not work. He had to undergo a second surgery.

"Keith handled that devastating news so well," Rosenhaus said. "I think he was able to bounce back partially because he learned how to deal with devastation early. He has the perseverance many young men don't have."

There is a chance Reaser could be ready to play later this year. But the 49ers, who have a loaded roster, drafted Reaser for the future. They believe Reaser, who has good size for a cornerback, is a fluid athlete who can develop into a strong contributor.

Reaser, who has long studied film of his cousin, can't wait until he gets his turn in the NFL.

"He would have been the best safety ever to play," Reaser said of Taylor. "I want to make his memory proud."

Eric ReidEric Reid returns home to Louisiana, hoping to validate praise from Brees

By Ron Kroichick
San Francisco Chronicle
November 7, 2014

Eric Reid grew up in Geismar, La., along the steamy corridor between Baton Rouge and New Orleans. So it makes perfect sense to learn he was a Saints fan – and a Drew Brees fan – in his formative years.

Here's the part Reid struggles to understand: The past few seasons, as Reid starred at LSU and jumped into the NFL with the 49ers, Brees became an unabashed Eric Reid fan.

Reid got his first clue last November 17, when he sheepishly introduced himself to Brees after the Saints beat the 49ers in New Orleans. Brees, naturally, already knew all about Reid.

Then, in this week's buildup to Sunday's game at the Superdome, Brees raved about Reid. Really, he raved about him way more than a Super Bowl champion, eight-time Pro Bowl quarterback usually does about a promising, 22-year-old safety.

"If you kind of drew a picture of what you'd want a starting free safety to look like in the league, you would probably draw a picture of him," Brees said. "That dude is big, fast and physical, and he just has a nose for the football.

"I had a chance to kind of keep up with him a little while he was playing at LSU. Then obviously he gets drafted by San Francisco and you're going, 'Oh, man, we've got to play against this guy.' But he's a really good player with a bright future."

Even if Reid's personal numbers are down from his standout rookie season, and his team is slogging along at 4-4, he anchors one of the league's top pass defenses. The 49ers rank No. 3 in the NFL, allowing 206.3 yards passing per game.

They also have allowed the fewest pass plays of 20-plus yards (18), a testament to the solid work by Reid and fellow safety Antoine Bethea.

The Saints counter with the No. 3-ranked passing offense, churning out 307 yards per game. Brees, at 35, leads the league in completion percentage (69.6) and ranks fourth in passing yards (2,524), behind only Andrew Luck, Ben Roethlisberger and Peyton Manning.

Those three quarterbacks are big and imposing. Brees merely seems big and imposing.

"I think the unique thing about him is he's a shorter guy (6-0), but he plays as if he's 6-6 in the pocket," Reid said Friday. "He has great pocket awareness and he distributes the ball well. There aren't many things he does wrong, so it's a challenge for our defense to get some turnovers."

Sunday's game clearly carries special significance for Reid. He will have 50 family and friends there, a slight decrease from last year (56) but an inescapable reminder he's going home.

He expected another, none-too-subtle hint when the 49ers' plane landed in Louisiana on Friday night.

"Last year, the minute I stepped off the plane and smelled the humidity, I knew I was home," he said.

Reid collected four interceptions as a rookie, on his way to making the Pro Bowl as an alternate. He has one pick this year, in the season opener Sept. 7 against Dallas.

Still, he meshed quickly with Bethea in the secondary. Now Reid seeks more turnovers, a game-changing play to shake the 49ers from their lethargy. He acknowledged a growing sense of urgency entering Sunday's game.

Reid also appreciated the unexpected words of praise from Brees.

"That's a heck of a compliment, especially coming from that guy," Reid said. "Hopefully, I'll live up to it this weekend. I need to play like a great free safety and help my team out by making some plays."

Dan SkutaPain and perserverance: Skuta has overcome tragedy, long odds

By Eric Branch
San Francisco Chronicle
September 20, 2014

To Dan Skuta, his tattooed right biceps is about tragedy and triumph.

It is covered with roses and the initials of three family members who died in 2008, when he was a senior at Grand Valley State University. After his aunt and uncle passed away, Skuta played his penultimate college game five days after his older brother, Joe, 24, died.

Six years later, Skuta's pain is evident. On Thursday, with his eyes glistening and T-shirt sleeve pulled up to display his tattoos, the 49ers outside linebacker said he couldn't dive too deep on the topic. He appeared willing, but unable.

"I don't really want to talk about it too much," he said.

This, of course, is the tragedy.

And Skuta forged ahead to explain the triumph: His NFL success, fueled partly by his losses, has been a salve for his wounded family.

He's an undrafted free agent from a Division II school who has overcome long odds to carve out a six-year NFL career with Cincinnati and San Francisco. Since signing with the 49ers last year, he's started 10 games, returned a fumble for a touchdown, had two postseason sacks and forced a fumble in a season-opening win at Dallas on Sept. 7 that was returned for a tone-setting score on the game's second play.

He enters Sunday's meeting at Arizona as a starter who will play on base downs while Aldon Smith serves his nine-game suspension. His performance in that role over the past two seasons – and his absence of ego in doing so – has earned him team-wide respect. Defensive coordinator Vic Fangio has likened him to a former Pro Bowl linebacker, sans the unwanted headlines.

"Could probably compare him to (Bill) Romanowski from years past," Fangio said, "without all the fluff."

Skuta, who was pigeonholed as mostly a special-teams player with the Bengals, is grateful the 49ers have provided an expanded role. And he's thrilled his parents, Tim and Joanie, routinely gather in his hometown of Flint, Mich., with relatives and friends to root for victories and, for at least three uninterrupted hours, forget their past personal losses.

"I think about all my family members a lot," Skuta said. "... That was my senior year at Grand Valley and the fact that I've since been playing and doing well, I think, is cool for my family. I think after a year in which my family was torn up a little bit, maybe me kind of making it (in the NFL) has kind of helped. So that's been good."

Skuta, 28, also credits his Rust Belt roots for providing the perseverance to make it.

In 1908, General Motors was formed in Flint and the automobile maker's huge presence allowed the population of "Vehicle City" to peak at nearly 200,000 in the 1960s. GM, however, has since shuttered many of its plants and Flint has become a poster city for economic depression and urban decay. In May, its population dipped below 100,000 for the first time in more than 90 years.

Skuta's parents, however, have stayed. His dad is a toolmaker at GM who will retire in January 2016. His mom is a nurse. Their son has left, but carries his hometown with him.

"If you watch me play, I play with a chip on my shoulder," Skuta said. "It's kind of a nastiness that comes from Flint. We're not going to talk a lot, we're not going to do a lot of stuff, but we're going to show up and be physical. And work. That's what I feel like Flint is all about. Everybody puts their head down and works."

Skuta didn't roam far from Flint after his career Carman-Ainsworth High didn't inspire a Division I offer. He went to Grand Valley, a Division II powerhouse located about 125 miles away in Allendale.

At GVSU, he was a first-team All-American who led the Lakers to a 51-2 record and two national titles. His 33 ½ sacks ranked third in Division II history, but his position coach talks more about his team-first approach than his individual accomplishments.

Skuta harbored NFL dreams since childhood and he initially worried he'd never be discovered in Division II. His chances of making it weren't buoyed when he was moved from defensive end to defensive tackle after his sophomore season. It was a spot Skuta, now 6-foot-2 and 250 pounds, wouldn't play in the pros and made it more difficult to for scouts to evaluate his NFL potential.

Skuta's response to the switch? Let's do it.

"Dan didn't bat an eye," said Matt Yoches, GVSU's defensive line coach during Skuta's career. "All of us as coaches, I don't think we realized at the time that we might never have another Dan Skuta. I feel fortunate to have coached him. Not because he's gone on to play in the NFL, but because he's a guy with that type of mentality. He isn't afraid to do what's best for the team. He isn't afraid to run through a wall if asked."

Jim Harbaugh is similarly smitten with Skuta, who, in the head-coach's mind, is an old-school player. Very old school. Harbaugh, oddly and affectionately, has said Skuta is a "rough and tough guy" who could have been a Civil War soldier.

"He does it without a lot of fanfare, but a lot of grit," Harbaugh said on KNBR in August. "I could go on talking about him for a while."

Skuta's grit was on display last year. He didn't miss a game after tearing the plantar fascia in his left foot in mid-November, an injury that forced him into a walking boot in the days before the next kickoff.

And he's dealt with even more emotional pain since arriving in the NFL. In June 2010, his best friend, U.S. Army Spc. Joe Johnson, was killed in combat in Kunduz, Afghanistan. In July, two days before training camp, Skuta flew to Yuma, Ariz., to join U.S. Army Captain Mike Viti on his cross-country journey to remember deceased service members. Skuta walked 12 miles with Viti to honor Johnson.

In memory of his friend, Skuta has also added another tattoo. As with the loss of his relatives, Johnson's death isn't a topic Skuta wants to discuss at any length.

He'll wear his feelings, forever, just under his sleeve.

Justin Smith

Justin Smith the Same 'Dude' after 14 NFL Seasons

By Andrew Pentis
49ers.com
September 20, 2014

Justin Smith the man could be an entirely different guy than Justin Smith, the menacing defensive tackle. Honestly, it's hard to tell.

Smith is not the most approachable player in the San Francisco 49ers locker room, but we have seen him lift his sons up into the air with one arm during training camp; smile around his teammates as he's walked off of the practice field; and be treated like a colleague by his coaches around the facility.

Next thing you know, he's tossing Tony Romo and Jay Cutler to the ground.

"He's a small-town guy," one of Smith's best friends, Blair Thompson, says over the phone from Jefferson City, Mo. "All the talking never really interested him. He's more about the nuts and bolts of things and if you make plays, he thinks that speaks loudly enough."

Smith, who grew up in nearby Holts Summit (population of 3,420), let the outside world in at least once. After three seasons at the University of Missouri, he penned an NFL Draft diary-style story for Sports Illustrated in which he alluded to his newfound fame.

"The media stuff at Madison Square Garden was just crazy," he wrote after the Cincinnati Bengals spent the fourth overall selection on him in 2001. "All the photo shoots and stuff that we did in New York really doesn't fit me – all the glamour crap – but it was a good experience."

Fourteen years, 85 sacks and one conference title in the league haven't changed Smith. The 49er we call "Cowboy" – soon to be 35 and in the penultimate year of his contract and, perhaps, career – is the same man who left his family's ranch for greener pastures.

"Teammate – best teammate I think I've ever seen," Ted LePage said when asked what first comes to mind about Smith, whom he coached at "Jeff City" High School until 1997. "To be honest, I don't know if Justin liked football as much as he liked being around the guys all the time and just being a teammate."

"I don't think the dude's changed since he's been about 14 years old."

"Dude" is just one nickname you'll hear friends and teammates call Smith. Three others help tell the story that's worth sharing.

'Brain Cell'

Smith earned this one for missing an assignment during an early-years football practice. It hasn't endured as long as the others.

Smith, his parents, Dave and Ginger, and his older sister Sarah moved to "Jeff City" when he was a sixth-grader. At about 10, he met Thompson, his new best friend. Every summer growing up in Missouri, the pair would "put up" hay to make a little extra money.

"One time in particular, the hay elevator broke that ran from the ground to the loft in the barn where the hay would be stored, which is about a 12-foot elevation," Thompson remembered. "Once the elevator broke, we had no way of getting the hay up there, so Justin actually decided he could throw the hay bells up there by himself. He proceeded to throw, oh, about 40 to 50 hay bells up into the air, which most people probably couldn't lift over their head."

"That was an indication of just how strong the guy was, and he liked to push his limits to see what he was capable of. He was blessed with some good genetics, but he never took it for granted."

This was also the case in the weight room. As the boys grew older and started working out for their high school football and basketball seasons, Smith used to bring a bucket with him to the weight room so that he had somewhere convenient to throw up.

"He lifts that hard," Thompson said. "With him, it's not like you put your headphones in, bust out a set and then go get a drink for five minutes. It's one thing to the next, and there's a lot of weight on the bar."

'Big Smitty'

Many of Smith's friends back in central Missouri still use this moniker. The man who is listed at 6 feet, 4 inches and 285 pounds in his prime also towered over his family, friends, teammates and opponents back home.

"We won the state title when he was here, and usually the issue is that your biggest, fastest, strongest players are going to garner most of the attention, and Justin was never ever concerned about any of that," said LePage, an assistant under then-head coach Ron Cole and now the school's leading man. "He just wanted to be one of the guys in the locker room doing his job every day."

All his teammates had to do was watch. On offense, Smith played tight end and – in games against fierce rivals, Columbia's Hickman High School and Kansas City's Rockhurst High School – would motion along the line of scrimmage to take hand-offs. In most other games, he'd use the majority of his aggression on the defensive side of the ball.

"Justin hardly ever lost his temper," LePage said. "In a game, if he did, it was always fun to watch. He would pick the opponent up, turn 'em around and pile-drive 'em into the ground."

"Over the course of the year," Thompson recalled, "some of those quarterbacks' parents were calling the high school to complain about how hard their son was being tackled."

But Smith, whose mother was a physical education teacher in the same school district, never got into trouble on the field or the basketball court.

Thompson, who went on to play Division II hoops and now coaches Jeff City's squad, offered a scouting report on Smith, the basketball player, that should come as no surprise.

"He could defend anybody, push anybody off of the post," Thompson said. "He was one of the fastest guys on the team and was pretty explosive off of the floor. He could catch, drop-step and put it down pretty easy."

"Really light on his feet and a natural at it, to tell you the truth, but I think he made the right decision with football."

'John Wayne in Cleats'

This last one comes from LePage and has yet to catch on. But Smith does bear a resemblance to Wayne, an Iowa-born actor who starred in flicks like "True Grit" and "The Quiet Man." A big, strapping man with a strong jaw, a rasp to his voice, middle-America roots and a certain aura.

Plus, "he's not afraid to tell you where he stands," Thompson said of Smith, "and that's on the right side of the fence."

Smith was called "Cowboy" since his early days with the Bengals, when he wore his boots, buttoned-up shirts and blue jeans on road trips. (The Anheuser-Busch tattoo on his left arm doesn't hurt either.) He, his wife Kerri and their three boys returns to Missouri every summer, checking in with family and friends, or on their property – Smith owns the local Railwood Gold Club.

Often, however, Smith can be spotted working out (sometimes with a bucket nearby) at San Jose State University or the 49ers Santa Clara-based practice facility back in California. His sessions, which no longer include reps of hay bales, are still tailored to getting the most out of himself on the field.

“Not too much has changed,” LePage said. “If he’s trying to get somewhere, there’s not too many people who can slow him down.”

“If I had to sum him up in one play,” Thompson added, referencing the 2012 NFC Divisional playoffs, “it would be that play against the Saints when he put that Pro Bowl tackle from New Orleans, Jermon Bushrod, on skates and just drove him right back into (Drew) Brees.

“The dude is all about blood and grass stains, man, and that captured it.”

Jimmie WardJimmie Ward: 49ers' first-round pick has overcome weighty matters

By Eric Branch
San Francisco Chronicle
June 14, 2014

Northern Illinois defensive end George Rainey laughed dismissively after he'd sized up the true freshman with big dreams and a bantamweight body.

It was 2010 and barely recruited Jimmie Ward had just arrived on campus carrying 168 pounds and a quiet confidence: The 19-year-old believed he'd play during his first season.

Rainey, then in his second year, was redshirted as a true freshman. And if he wasn't good enough to suit up, he was certain the shrimp-sized safety wouldn't see the field any time soon.

"He started coming around and I'm thinking 'Does this dude really think he's going to play? He weighs 110. He's never going to play,'" Rainey said. "And I'd tell him that: 'You're not about to play, dude. You're not even big enough.'"

Four years, 320 tackles, 11 interceptions and armfuls of awards later, Rainey happily admits to his suspect scouting report. Ward played in all 14 games as a true freshman and had a school-record three blocked punts. And he played so well as a starter in his final three seasons the 49ers grabbed him in the first round of last month's draft to play nickel cornerback and serve as a back-up safety.

At a bar in Berkeley, a onetime skeptic was nearly sobbing when Ward went No. 30 overall.

"People probably would have thought we were boyfriend and girlfriend the way I reacted when Jimmie was drafted," Rainey said. "I was so happy for him. If anybody deserves it, it's Jimmie."

As you can tell, this is an underdog story with Ward, literally, playing the part of the little guy.

His size explains why, before he signed four-year, $7.1 million contract, Northern Illinois was the only Division I school willing to sign him.

Ward, 5-foot-10, now weighs 193 pounds, with much of that added weight presumably coming from the slights he still carries with him. He remains miffed he wasn't selected to play in the Alabama-Mississippi high school all-star game. And it's telling he had a career-high 14 tackles in the 2013 Orange Bowl against Florida State, one of the blueblood programs that ignored him.

How did more than 120 Division I schools pass on a player who, as a senior, was a third-team All-American, a semifinalist for the Jim Thorpe Award given to the nation's best defensive back and ranked seventh in the nation with seven interceptions? In response, Ward, smiling said the only thing that's changed is the perception of him.

"Everything I did in college," he said, "I did in high school."

At W.P. Davidson High in Mobile, Ala., Ward was a three-year starter, team captain and honorable-mention all-state safety as a senior for a respected program that routinely sends players to the SEC.

With the help of Andrew Thomas, a family friend who owns a youth training facility in Mobile, he traveled to prospect camps at Florida, Auburn, Mississippi State, Florida State and Southern Mississippi. At Southern Miss, he ran the fastest 40-yard dash among defensive backs. Their response: Want to walk on?

Despite struggling to support four children, Ward's mom and stepdad, Torcivia and Derrick Daniels, paid the postage to mail his highlight tape to nearly 200 Division I schools. Not even South Alabama, which began its inaugural football season during Ward's senior year, pursued him. It was the ultimate insult. The school is in Mobile, four miles from Davidson High.

"Yep, even South Alabama didn't give me no love," Ward said. "No offer. No nothing. I sent them a letter and I'm pretty sure they saw me play. That was a slap in the face. I thought I was good enough, but I guess I didn't measure out. But all that stuff just gave me my grind. I always believed somebody would see. Somebody would give me the opportunity."

That someone was NIU defensive backs coach Jay Sawvel, who discovered Ward on his annual recruiting swing through Mobile. But even Sawvel was skeptical.

Ward's video was impressive. Thanks partly to boyhood tackling drills against his older brothers, James, 27, and Cortez, 26, he was fast, fearless and shockingly physical for a player his size. But was he too tiny to play safety? And, if so, could he transition to cornerback? And, most perplexing, why wasn't another Division I school interested?

"At the school, people would tell me 'Boy, he's one of the best players we've ever had,' this that and the other," Sawvel said. "And I didn't know if they were telling me that just to get him recruited."

Ward visited NIU, but didn't receive a scholarship offer, which, Sawvel said, nearly caused him to burst into tears. The Huskies were looking for two safeties and Ward was among a group of five under consideration. Eventually, head coach Jerry Kill, now at the University of Minnesota with Sawvel, ended some of the agonizing. His message: Let's sign the premier player, even if he is puny.

"He was always the best guy on the field when you watched him play," Kill said. "We scratched out heads too trying to figure this one out. We kept going back to the film and it was 'Wow, he's sure not very big.' But film don't lie, now. And it was too good a film to ignore."

Four years later, 49ers general manager Trent Baalke also trusted his eyes. Baalke, who believes "big wins," prefers industrial-sized players. Last month, the 49ers' draft included a 235-pound running back, a 321-pound center, a 6-2 cornerback and ... Ward.

"Not big," Baalke acknowledged. "Big heart. Plays big."

And violently. Ward had foot surgery in March which will sideline him until training camp, but he played in 55 of 56 games at NIU despite constantly channeling his inner kamikaze. In his first college game, he set the tone for a season in which he was named NIU's special teams player of the year with a molar-rattling hit of an Iowa State returner.

“As small as he was, he was one of the most physical players on our team as a freshman,” Rainey said. “It was crazy how he threw his body in there at – whatever it is he weighed. I was talking to him about a week ago and told him ‘You not caring about your body is what got you to where you’re at right now.’”

And Ward, at the start of his NFL career, is in a far different place than when Rainey first met him in 2010. As a first-round pick who has added 25 pounds, he’s gained in stature in more than one way.

Still, thanks to this background, he possesses an advanced degree in uncovering slights. He’s gone from unknown, to DeKalb, Ill., to the NFL spotlight, but Ward insists there are plenty of skeptics to prove wrong.

Michael Wilhoite*Season-opening starter? LB Wilhoite not straying from humble roots

By Eric Branch
San Francisco Chronicle
May 30, 2014

If ESPN's Mel Kiper is the ultimate draftnik, Michael Wilhoite resides on the other end of the spectrum.

The 49ers inside linebacker has never paid attention to the NFL draft and has no intention of doing so in the future. After he attended the 49ers' fan-filled draft bash earlier this month, he went home and watched an NBA playoff game instead of the rest of first round.

Still, Wilhoite probably had far more certainty than Kiper – or any other analyst — about one draft development. He was fairly positive the 49ers would use an early round pick on an inside linebacker to compete with him for a season-opening starting spot.

And the 49ers did just as he expected: They drafted Wisconsin linebacker Chris Borland, the Big 10 Defensive Player of the Year, in the third round.

"I was not surprised when more competition came," Wilhoite said. "I knew they'd bring in some. That's the nature of their business and that's their job: To be a great team. And to be a great team you have to competition at every position."

The competition to temporarily replace three-time All-Pro NaVorro Bowman promises to be one of the most intriguing battles of training camp. Bowman, who tore two knee ligaments in the NFC Championship Game in January, could miss half the regular season and his absence could create a sizable void on a defense that ranked third in points allowed in 2013.

At this point, Wilhoite, who lined up alongside Patrick Willis in practices last week, is the front-runner and Borland promises to be his main challenger. Nick Moody, a 2013 sixth-round pick, and Shayne Skov, a rookie from Stanford who surprisingly went undrafted, are also in the conversation.

Wilhoite, 27, is an unlikely front-runner. A former undrafted free agent from Division II Washburn University, he had a stint in the now-defunct United Football League and worked as a shoe salesman before landing on the 49ers' practice squad in December 2011.

Last year, he made the most of his first two NFL starts, which came when Willis was sidelined by a groin injury. Wilhoite had 20 tackles and the 49ers allowed one touchdown in wins over the Rams and Texans.

This week, he said he's focused on keeping his underdog attitude despite his presumptive-starter status. His plan for the month off before training camp in July? He'll work out at home in Overland Park, Kans.

"I'm just going out there every day, and staying hungry and driven," Wilhoite said. "I think that's the mindset I've had from the beginning and that's the mindset I'll keep. Just to keep working hard."

Despite his draft status – and big-college pedigree – Borland also arrives in the NFL as something of an underdog. At 5-foot-11 and 248 pounds, he doesn't possess ideal size and his 4.83-second 40-yard dash at the combine ranked 21st among 27 linebackers.

However, Borland also arrives with the second-most forced fumbles in FBS history (15) and as Wisconsin's first linebacker since 1951 to be named a first-team All-American.

"He's very smart," Wilhoite said. "He's very instinctual. He finds the ball. I think he's a very tough kid, so I think those things are what set him apart."

Wilhoite noted, though, that it's hard to get a true feel for Borland during non-padded offseason practices. That is, one of the 49ers' more intriguing position battles won't really heat up until this summer.

"You don't want to judge anybody or base your opinion on somebody off OTAs," Wilhoite said. "Because we play with pads. We hit people and we're not doing that right now."

Wilhoite goes from shoe store to 49ers' starting lineup

Michael Wilhoite was selling sneakers at a mall in Topeka, Kan., nearly three years ago when the 49ers called: Hey Michael, we've got a spot on our practice squad. You interested in trying out?

He was on the next flight to the West Coast.

Wilhoite nailed the audition, which has become a recurring theme. Of course, he had to. When you play at Division II Washburn in Topeka, go undrafted and start your career with the now-defunct Omaha Nighthawks of the United Football League, you don't get second chances.

"Guys like us – our backs have always been against the wall from Day One," said former 49ers wide receiver Joe Hastings, Wilhoite's best friend and a fellow Washburn alum. "For us, it's do or die."

Wilhoite methodically worked his way up from the 49ers' practice squad in 2011 to special teams in 2012 and, this season, to the starting defense.

On Sunday, he has a chance to further solidify what opposing offensive coordinators are quickly discovering: Wilhoite isn't merely a Band-Aid fix for injured linebacker NaVorro Bowman; he has the skills to be a full-time starter in the league.

With Patrick Willis and Wilhoite roving the middle of the defense, the 49ers rank second in rushing defense. Last week, they helped limit Philadelphia's talented running back duo of LeSean McCoy and Darren Sproles to 21 rushing yards and 2 yards on receptions.

Now Wilhoite will face a Kansas City offense – ranked fourth in the NFL in rushing – that likes to throw to its running backs and tight ends and may do so even more today with top wide receiver Donnie Avery out with a groin injury.

"He can cover," Bowman said of Wilhoite. "A lot of people don't know that. But we as linebackers, as teammates, we see that in practice each week. The coverage part is very good as far as having a feel on when he can take chances and when he can't."

NFL scouts didn't know a lot about Wilhoite coming out of Washburn. In fact, they weren't even sure what position he played.

He was a quarterback in high school and played six positions at Washburn. He played three spots – linebacker, defensive end and safety – in one game during his final college season.

When he and Hastings arrived for a predraft workout at Kansas State in 2011, that school's head coach, Bill Snyder, walked up to Wilhoite and said he was the biggest free safety he had ever seen.

Wilhoite had committed himself to linebacker by bulking up to 240 pounds for the session. He and the rest of the small-school invitees, dressed in the same bargain-bin attire in which they'd go the gym during the week, performed after the Kansas State players, who were nattily decked out in matching gear with their names and numbers on the back. Because his surname begins with "W," Wilhoite was the final player of the final group to work out.

The scouts were smart to have stuck around. Wilhoite outperformed the other linebackers with a vertical leap of 37 inches, a broad jump of 10 feet, 9 inches and a 4.7-second 40-yard dash.

Afterward, Snyder returned and asked Wilhoite where he was from.

"Right here in Manhattan (Kan.)," the linebacker replied.

Said Snyder after a pause: "Holy (smokes), we missed on that one."

The workout didn't land Wilhoite an NFL job during or after the draft, but it did put him on the radar.

When Willis pulled his hamstring and couldn't practice later that year, the 49ers held a tryout for young, aspiring linebackers. Hastings, who now works in the Eagles' front office, was on the 49ers' roster at the time and watched his buddy during the session.

"You've got 15 minutes to impress those guys," Hastings said. "And you don't get another chance."

After the workout, Wilhoite disappeared upstairs, and Hastings said he was dying to know the outcome. When they passed in a hallway later that day, the mystery was solved.

"He had a smile from ear to ear on his face," Hastings said. "We ended up next to each other in the locker room. It was wild."

Patrick WillisA Troubled Childhood Shaped Patrick Willis Into A Forgiving Adult And An NFL Powerhouse

By Jordan Schultz
Huffington Post
July 7, 2014

Seven years into his NFL career, Patrick Willis has already taken his place among the all-time great linebackers. At 29, he is the chief enforcer for the San Francisco 49ers' unforgiving defense, earning seven consecutive Pro Bowl invites and six All-Pro awards. And it's not a stretch to say that on-field success can be traced to the resilience he learned as a child.

"Growing up the way I grew up really, I think, just matured me faster," Willis told The Huffington Post. "I think that has helped me be able to withstand anything that is thrown my way -- knowing that anything is possible if you just trust in yourself and believe in what you have within yourself."

The former Ole Miss All-American grew up in rural Tennessee in a trailer park. By his 10th birthday, he was working in the cotton fields to help support his family. The four Willis children were being raised by an abusive, alcoholic, drug-using father, so it was Patrick, the oldest, who made sure his younger brothers and sister did their homework and stayed out of trouble. By 17, he'd had enough and turned to school counselors for help. The authorities moved the siblings into foster care. Through it all, Willis immersed himself in sports, trying to avoid the pitfalls and temptations that had ensnared his father.

Even as his home life was falling apart, Willis was thriving on the field. As a kid, he couldn't afford to pay the league entry fees, so he honed his football skills in the Tennessee backwoods. In high school, he became the first person in state history to be nominated for the Mr. Football Award on both defense and offense (he played running back on offense).

"Success to me is not just being like a football player," he said, "but I feel like what makes me successful is my ability to stay who I am and be who I have always been."

These days, he's also working to repair his relationship with his father, Ernest. Even after he found success in the NFL, Willis refused to give up on his father.

"He really is a good guy," Willis told ESPN in 2011. "I'd say we're actually closer now than in the 15 years I lived with him. Probably a year or two ago was the first time my daddy told me, 'I love you, son.' Can you believe that? I was like 23 or 24. ... He said, 'Son, keep doing what you're doing. You got it going on for yourself. I love you, boy.' I was in so much shock I couldn't even cry."

It's a response that clashes with the image of a fierce, unforgiving contender on the field, but one that's consistent with how Willis has chosen to face troubles in his life.

"I'm just comfortable with where I've come from and where I am today," Willis told HuffPost. "I don't take that for granted because I know what it's like to have nothing and I know what it's like to have something. I promise you that it feels better to have something. ... I just stay humble and thankful and just be me."

Patrick WillisReady for His Ring: Patrick Willis Fueled by Void

By Tyler Emerick

September 9, 2014

There's a moment etched into his memory when David Saunders thinks of Patrick Willis. Following his junior season at Ole Miss – a year in which he recorded 128 tackles and was unanimously named First-Team All-SEC – Willis underwent surgery on a fractured right foot. Saunders, hired during that 2005 offseason to be Willis' new linebackers coach, wondered if the injury would derail his blossoming star's growth.

Willis wound end up missing practice the next spring, but Saunders recalled strolling into the facility early one morning and, to his amazement, encountering the standout back at work shortly after the procedure.

"I remember seeing him in there at 6 a.m., coming out of treatment and going directly into the weight room," Saunders said. "Having such a structured approach in not only the recovery of his foot injury, but also in finding ways to still get better, he wanted to make sure he entered his senior season in optimum condition. I think he accomplished that under challenging circumstances."

That would be an understatement. The ensuing fall, Willis won a triple crown of collegiate honors: SEC Defensive Player of the Year, consensus First-Team All-American and the Dick Butkus Award, given annually to the most outstanding linebacker in college football. A few months later, the San Francisco 49ers selected him with the 11th overall pick in the 2007 NFL Draft.

Yes, a whole heap of talent helped Willis rise to the pinnacle of his profession, but it's his unparalleled work ethic and unassuming ego that the people around him admire most.

"I tell everybody he's a special person," fellow 49ers linebacker Michael Wilhoite said. "You don't find many people like that, who are as good at what he does and are still humble and still willing to help anybody. All the things he has accomplished, you never notice it because he's so humble. He's willing to stick his neck out on the line for anybody to help this team win. It's special being around a guy like that."

Willis doesn't seek headlines – they find him. He's a soft-spoken man who happens to tackle with a deafening thud. This has been the case with Willis throughout his career.

"He never projected himself as a player out there by himself – it was always about the team," said Saunders, now the cornerbacks coach at Louisiana-Lafayette. "I never ever once saw him flinch or give in to anything. He made the best of every situation; just very, very consistent. I don't think I ever saw an inconsistency in him. The other guys looked up to him for that."

A six-time All-Pro and the first 49er to be a Pro Bowler in each of his first seven NFL seasons, Willis has maintained his motivation by looking down the road. Hoisting a Lombardi Trophy would help him join a list of all-time 49er defensive greats with Super Bowl titles, comprising names like Ronnie Lott and Charles Haley.

That's why the lack of a championship is so consuming. The fact that Willis has come so close to a ring only deepens the void. Willis admitted he still thinks about the 49ers narrow loss the Baltimore Ravens in Super Bowl XLVII. The occasional television highlights will trigger the memories and induce a cringe, but reflecting on the disappointment also serves some good.

"You have to stay hungry. You can't get this far looking the other way, thinking, 'Maybe it's just not for us,'" Willis said. "We have every opportunity to go after it again.

"For us, we have been close. We did go one year, but that's not good enough. We want to bring it home."

This season, the 49ers face the tall task of making it to their fourth consecutive NFC Championship game. Willis feels the urgency to stop knocking on the door and finally break through, but he tunes out the pressure.

"We understand what's at stake – we understand it's all about winning a championship," he said. "Every year there's going to be opinions, there's going to be criticisms, there's going to be people saying you shouldn't win, but all that doesn't matter. The only thing that does matter is what we believe in this locker room.

"We believe in each other, we believe in what we have here and we just have to go after it one game at a time. If it's easy, we'll take it. If it's not, we'll earn it as we always do."

The word "we" is recurrent in Willis' vernacular. He's the consummate teammate to every player on the roster, not just his fellow veterans.

Take Chris Borland, for example. The rookie linebacker came to the 49ers this spring after being drafted in the third round amid questions about how his sub-six foot frame would translate into the NFL.

Willis, who went largely overlooked as a recruit coming out of a small high school in Tennessee, knows what it's like to be undervalued, so he made it a point to extend an olive branch.

And when a player of Willis' caliber accepts someone, it rapidly trickles down the ranks.

"He's a good teacher and a great teammate," Borland said. "He's welcomed me with open arms and he's taught me a lot. He's got such high character. He's a great guy, very down to earth for being a superstar and I've really appreciated that."

Although part of his lore centers around his passionate pregame speeches, Willis isn't one to frequently raise his voice. He chooses his words carefully so that when he does decide to speak up, his voice carries more weight.

"I think he has a great feel for it. A lot of guys come off as disingenuous when they talk too much," Borland said. "Pat talks just the right amount."

Even when he isn't vocal, Willis' mere presence provides leadership for his team.

"All that little stuff, you learn by watching him," Wilhoite said. "From the littlest details like shuffling instead of crossing over in the box, or playing certain leverage in man (coverage), or how to disguise a blitz in a zone; you can get so much. When you're out there with somebody who is that good, it makes it that much easier."

With NaVorro Bowman out until at least the middle of the season, Willis began 2014 by shifting to the strong-side linebacker position – also known as the "Mike" spot. He'll play alongside Wilhoite, who takes over the vacated "Jack" spot while Bowman heals.

"That's absolutely no regression in his game," 49ers defensive coordinator Vic Fangio said of Willis' ability entering his eighth season. "It's not the first time he's done it, so he's ready to do it."

For Wilhoite, the chance to partner up with Willis is something he'll remember beyond his career.

"It's an honor," Wilhoite said. "I know one day I'll be able to say, 'I played with one of the best linebackers ever, period.'"

"One day," however, will have to wait. Winning a Super Bowl is his sole focus for now. And coming off of his sixth 100-plus tackle season, Willis feels as strong as ever. Just ask him.

When a reporter recently questioned if he was still in his prime, Willis answered without missing a beat, "Yes, sir."

ABOUT LEVI'S® STADIUM

The Bay Area is a consistent leader in innovation. Hosting the premiere outdoor sports and entertainment venue in the world that is set to incorporate groundbreaking in-stadium technology will add another industry that has been greatly influenced by the innovation of our region. In the past decade, the home-viewing experience has become so good that many argue it is a more attractive option than attending a live sporting event. Imagine a stadium that combines the comforts of home while also providing a forum to connect with 68,500 people in real time. Levi's® Stadium is set to change the dynamic of live sporting events as we know it, while uniting the Bay Area region in the process.

A smarter stadium was bound to happen. Levi's® Stadium will capture the best technology found in Silicon Valley by allowing fans to create their own experience inside its friendly confines. Instead of focusing on hardware that will become obsolete over time, Levi's® Stadium will leverage the brilliant companies who create personal mobile devices for our customers, such as tablets and smartphones. The focus will be on ensuring that fans have full connectivity inside the stadium, providing them the unique ability to get inside the game like no other venue allows. The best fans in the world expect a stadium to provide a ticketless and cashless experience with unique content and camera views available on their own handheld devices. That's why the 49ers have hired the best and brightest minds to redefine the in-game venue experience.

Innovation doesn't stop with the fan experience. Levi's® Stadium will be functionally green: the first stadium in North America designed to be net neutral to the grid. That means the 49ers 10 home games would be completely powered by the sun, from the venue's year-round collection of solar power, allowing it to become the first professional football stadium with LEED Gold Certification for New Construction. Food service will bring together all the great aspects of Northern California culinary culture. There will be an emphasis on locally grown, organic, seasonal and sustainable food.

An interactive museum highlighting 49ers history and tradition will also serve as an educational hub that teaches students how the stadium functions from a STEM perspective, while also highlighting the great history of the Bay Area. Levi's® Stadium will set a new standard for the in-stadium fan experience.

There is no bigger sporting event than the Super Bowl. Levi's® Stadium is set to host the game's golden anniversary in 2016, when Super Bowl 50 comes to the region. There is no better stage to showcase the smartest stadium in the world when hundreds of millions of television viewers join millions of tourists to get a glimpse of life in the Bay Area. Hotels, restaurants, museums, and other attractions will be buzzing. Public transportation and three international airports will be front and center. What an opportunity it will be to inform the world that the Bay Area is a present day version of Florence during the Renaissance.

Levi's® Stadium will build off of a legacy of innovation founded in the Bay Area. No longer is "good enough" an option for live sports. Levi's® Stadium will change the game internationally, becoming the next innovation to commence right here in the Bay Area.

TECHNOLOGY

Levi's® Stadium will be a showcase for innovation in the Silicon Valley through partnerships with local, national and international technology providers that will deliver world-class WiFi capability, mobile connectivity, IPTV, digital displays, HD scoreboard and video displays, and paperless ticketing.

- The most technologically advanced stadium will be accompanied by its own app. The Levi's® Stadium Mobile App will bring the comforts that come with watching a game at home right to your seat at Levi's® Stadium. This will include a game center with replays (within 5-10 seconds) and game statistics, as well as in-seat food and beverage, and merchandise ordering. The app will also provide paperless ticketing and parking, wayfinding, and integrated access to Faithful 49 presented by Esurance, the team's fan engagement platform.
- XFINITY by Comcast will be bringing free WiFi to guests throughout the stadium. When a fan is in their seat, they will never be more than 10 feet away from a WiFi signal.

NETWORK INFRASTRUCTURE

- Over 400 miles of data cable has been run in the stadium, including 70 miles of cable to support WiFi.
- More than 12,000 physical network ports have been installed.
- Levi's® Stadium features a backbone of 40Gb/s of available Internet bandwidth, easily scalable to event attendance, which is 40 times more Internet bandwidth capacity than any known U.S. stadium and four times greater than the standard for NFL stadiums mandated by the league for 2015.
- WiFi: The stadium contains more than 1,200 access-points and the most current wireless standards will be accessible in every location and free to all.

IN-STADIUM "BROADCAST"

- The in-stadium "Broadcast" will rival that of a Network TV broadcast, featuring 13 stadium cameras (most NFL stadiums have four-six). The stadium has the ability to share camera feeds with the broadcasting TV network. At least six different replay angles can be viewed per play. The game day production team will consist of 40-plus people.
- The stadium is equipped with two HD 13 video boards at the North and South ends of the stadium that measure 200 feet by 48 feet, producing more than 19,000 square feet of viewing space. They are among the largest in the NFL. The boards also feature tremendously sharp, cutting-edge LEDs. The boards can be sectioned in order to show multiple pieces of content simultaneously.
- Levi's® Stadium is one of a handful of stadiums in North America that is truly 4K-capable. The content team will be using 10 Sony F55 video cameras, their premium product, to capture the action in the stadium. The content team will be capturing in 4K, not broadcasting, as they are capturing for future capabilities.
- Nearly 2,000 screens will be connected to the stadium's IPTV system, which allows for incredible flexibility and customization throughout the venue. Content will include menu boards, game broadcasts, statistics and other important information as deemed necessary.

LEVI'S® STADIUM MOBILE APP

The new Levi's® Stadium mobile app will help guests unlock Levi's® Stadium's best-in-class fan experience features, including:

MOBILE TICKETING

Access Levi's® Stadium with mobile tickets and parking passes.

WAYFINDING

Navigate Levi's® Stadium with turn-by-turn directions and line wait times for all restrooms and concession stands.

FAITHFUL 49 PRESENTED BY ESURANCE

Track, gain, and redeem yards from Faithful 49, the 49ers new fan engagement program.

MOBILE ORDERING

As part of our Levi's® Stadium App, we are offering guests two ways to purchase food and beverage through their mobile devices:

EXPRESS PICK-UP

- Guest places order to a specific stand through the app and is directed to the express pick-up window at the associated stand. Guest scans a QR code at point of sale and order is fulfilled in-the-moment.
- Service is free of charge, but requires credit card payment through the app.
- Service is available at all 28 concession stands, with the exception of frozen yogurt.

IN-SEAT DELIVERY

- Guest places order for in-seat delivery through the app; order is routed to a pre-determined stand for fulfillment. Guest will receive a notification when the order is placed, as well as an estimated wait time for delivery. When order is ready, food will be delivered via runner, and guest will receive a notification that the order is on its way. Once runner arrives to seat, guest will confirm order number using a confirmation screen on the mobile device; runner will check ID on any alcohol orders.
- Service carries a flat $5 delivery fee on all orders, credit card payment required through the app.
- Service is available to all seats, but there is a limited menu for in-seat delivery: frankfurter, vegan dog, Bavarian pretzel, nachos, popcorn, candy, chips, peanuts, cracker jacks, bottled soda, bottled water, Gatorade, bottled beer, and wine.

SUSTAINABILITY

Levi's® Stadium is the first professional football stadium to open with LEED Gold certification for New Construction, the recognized standard for measuring sustainability for design and construction.

The stadium is designed to reduce energy demand and generate more electricity annually, via on-site photovoltaic (PV) systems, than is consumed during the 10 scheduled 49ers games each season.

SUSTAINABLE DESIGN ELEMENTS

- NRG, the exclusive sustainable energy provider of the 49ers and the stadium, installed a number of state-of-the-art solar elements that account for 1,162 photovoltaic panels throughout the venue:
 - The NRG Solar Terrace, the venue's 27,000 square foot "green roof," is located atop the stadium's Suite Tower. It will feature 16 species of vegetation native to the Bay Area, and will lower the building's cooling/heating needs, as it will help regulate ambient temperatures in the Suite Tower. A portion of the roof is shaded by a solar panel canopy.
 - Three solar array-covered bridges (NRG Energy Bridges) - the first of their kind in the NFL.
- Electrical vehicle charging stations (NRG EV Charging Stations) are also being installed at the stadium to power maintenance and operations electrical vehicles. NRG is currently building the nation's first comprehensive, privately funded electric vehicle charging network.
- Low-flow plumbing fixtures such as toilets, urinals and sinks will use 40 percent less water than conventional fixtures. On top of low-flow water fixtures, the stadium will be using reclaimed water for flush fixtures in addition to irrigating all site landscape.
- The stadium's sustainable initiatives also include public transit access (Caltrain, Ace & capital Corridor - VTA, Amtrack), convenient bicycle parking and a walking path from the San Tomas Creek Trail.
- Construction materials utilized contained more than 40% recycled content overall, based on cost. More than 75% of construction waste was recycled and diverted from landfills.

SUSTAINABLE STADIUM OPERATIONS PROGRAMS

- The Recycled Water Program is setting a new standard for stadiums. Recycled water will account for about 85 percent of all water used in Levi's® Stadium and will be used for playing field irrigation, the "green roof", flushing toilets, and cooling tower make-up water. Other stadiums in the U.S. are plumbed for recycled water use, but none are using it to the extent and in the myriad of ways as Levi's® Stadium.
- The Solid Waste Management Reduction Program is a comprehensive waste diversion program will strive for net-zero landfill. All garbage, recycling and compostable materials from inside the venue and the surrounding parking areas will be sorted on site and placed into compactors to be processed.
- The Building Management System allows the venue to conserve energy usage through HVAC monitoring, lighting distribution and the use of automatic sensors.
- The Energy Metering & Benchmarking Program utilizes a comprehensive, live-time electrical metering building management system, that allows the stadium to load-shed as needed through the use of motion sensors.
- The Preventative Maintenance Program will track all equipment and systems to enact their manufacturers recommendations and scheduled preventative plans.
- The Ongoing Commissioning Program will ensure that the venue will operate under the LEED existing building guidelines for new projects and build outs.

- The Green Cleaning Program ensures that the janitorial contractor, ABM, will use sustainable green certified products for all cleaning essentials and equipment.
- The Sustainable Purchasing Program for ongoing consumables, foodstuffs, durable goods will ensure that local, organic, recycled, compostable, items will be purchased from vendors.
- The Integrated Pest Management Program uses green pest eradication products.
- The Indoor Air Quality Management Program consists of perpetual monitoring of indoor air quality based on the LEED approved HVAC system.

- The Landscape Management Program includes using native, drought-resistant plants that will be hydrated with 100 percent recycled water.
- The Exterior Hardscape Management Program will utilize cleaning equipment when washing the exterior skin of the building and sidewalks. All organic materials collected will be composted.

FAN EXPERIENCE OVERVIEW

Levi's® Stadium will deliver an unparalleled game day experience to fans and will be delivered in a multitude of ways.

STADIUM DESIGN

- Featuring over 45,000 seats, Levi's® Stadium's lower bowl will be one of the largest in the NFL (roughly two-thirds stadium capacity). The seating is designed this way to bring the majority of fans closer to the field.
- The design also eliminates the traditional club mezzanine level, which will bring fans sitting in the upper deck lower to the field.
- The location of Levi's® Stadium offers convenience to patrons in both access and parking. There are 13 freeway interchanges located near the stadium's site, which means fans will have ample access points to get on the freeway.
- There are 25,000 parking spaces located within a short walking distance from the stadium. Tailgating will be an integral part of the game day experience in Santa Clara.

LEVI'S® STADIUM FEATURES

Plazas

- The first level of the stadium will feature open pedestrian plazas, retail and community space, a team store, the 49ers Museum presented by Sony and Edward J. DeBartolo, Sr. 49ers Hall of Fame, the Yahoo Fantasy Football Lounge, Michael Mina's Tailgate and more.
- The main entry, Intel Plaza at the northwest corner of the Stadium, will be open to the public year-round and provide direct access to the Levi's® Stadium Fanwalk and the 49ers Team Store. In the northeast corner, Toyota Plaza will be the main entry for guests of Michael Mina's Bourbon Steak & Pub restaurant and the 49ers Museum presented by Sony. Dignity Health Plaza at the southwest corner of the Stadium will be another primary entry gate for fans on event days.

Faithful Mile presented by Safeway

- Faithful Mile presented by Safeway, an all-new tailgating concept designed to serve as the official pre-game destination of 49ers home games at Levi's® Stadium. Safeway will also support 49ers tailgaters inside the stadium by awarding a Tailgater of the Game at each 49ers home contest.

Concourse

- Concourses at Levi's® Stadium are among the widest in the NFL and have more than 600 individual concessions points of sale, allowing for easy pedestrian access and creating a more pleasant, less congested atmosphere around vendors.
- Concourses will also feature open field views so fans can watch the game even while they purchase refreshments.

Party Decks

- Expansive party decks featuring both concessions and specialty food and beverage stands will be located under each scoreboard. The Pepsi Fan Deck above the north end zone and Bud Light Patio above the south end zone are available year-round and offer a unique stage for many types of events.

THE 49ERS MUSEUM PRESENTED BY SONY

The Museum is open daily, with specialized hours designated for the Game-Day experience. Visit www.LevisStadium.com/49ersMuseum for more info, or contact museum@49ers.com.

ADMISSION

- Museum Ticket: $15 - Adults, $10 - Children (5-12), Seniors, Military, Santa Clara residents

 - Museum entry is only for guests possessing an event ticket

The Museum features 11 unique gallery and exhibit spaces. Your journey will begin in the main lobby at the Trending Gallery, where you will learn what's new with the team and the space. From there you'll move to the Morabito Theater to watch the 49ers signature film and then into the Edward J. DeBartolo, Sr. 49ers Hall of Fame where you'll walk amongst the 49ers greats. The Heritage Gallery innovatively illuminates the history of the team through artifacts and multimedia exhibits and leads perfectly into the active In the Game Gallery on the lower level. Your visit will end reliving the memories of our five Super Bowl Championships in front of the Lombardi Trophies.

MUSEUM GALLERIES

TRENDING

Step into our “You are a Niner” augmented reality experience to take your place beside current and former players or take in our Trending display, which features information about the team's recent success, what's happening in the Museum and recently curated artifacts.

MORABITO THEATER

Inside the theater—which seats 100, and features a 50 feet by 18 feet screen and Sony 4K technology—you'll be inspired by the story of the 49ers told through film.

EDWARD J. DEBARTOLO, SR. 49ERS HALL OF FAME

Stand next to and around life-sized statues of the 49ers 26 Hall of Famers in their signature poses. Snap a photo next to coach Bill Walsh and Joe Montana or put yourself in the huddle with the Million Dollar Backfield.

TEAM

In the Team Gallery, you will hear first-person stories from 49ers alumni about everything from nicknames and practical jokes to what it was like to play for the team. You'll also find an interactive database that will allow visitors to find information on every person that ever wore a 49ers uniform.

BILL WALSH INNOVATION

A homage to one of the most influential people the NFL has ever known, this re-creation of coach Walsh's Redwood City office serves as both a treasure trove of artifacts and the home of a signature film on coach Walsh as told from the eyes of players, friends and others. Also located in this space, the Bill Walsh Coaching Universe is an interactive exhibit that illuminates the coach's vast impact on the coaching ranks of professional football.

HERITAGE

The Heritage Gallery will be an era-by-era experience made up of historical items, stories, interactive exhibits and one-of-a-kind artifacts. Spanning the years from 1946 to the present day, guests will leave the Heritage Gallery with a deep appreciation for the history and tradition that are so important to the 49ers organization.

SPIRIT

The 49ers have long been known as innovators when it comes to the fan experience. Here, guests can take in the history behind the team's mascots, in-game entertainment and other joyful elements of football. A feature film is on display featuring fans, players and others talking about the 49ers significance to them.

DENISE DEBARTOLO YORK EDUCATION CENTER

The pillar around which the 49ers industry-leading education program is built, this state-of-the-art classroom serves more than 20,000 Bay Area children annually and also offers content on how the 49ers impact the community in many positive ways.

IN THE GAME

Get ready to engage with the game of football. In the Game offers multiple interactive challenges and exhibits, including a passing and kicking simulator. Be the Broadcaster—a real-life booth where fans can call the team's most iconic plays—and the Gridiron Challenge, a series of gesture-based challenges that bring out the athlete, cheerleader, uniform designer and touchdown scorer in everyone.

SUPER BOWLS

The home to the 49ers five Lombardi Trophies and the rings associated with each championship is each guest's last stop in the Museum. Enjoy the photo opportunity while you take in yet another feature film on what it was like to be a part of 49ers history.

THE DENISE DEBARTOLO YORK EDUCATION CENTER

The Denise DeBartolo York Education Center, located inside The 49ers Museum presented by Sony, is committed to education and innovation and is extremely proud of the educational program already scheduled to serve more than 20,000 Bay Area children in year one alone. The program is unique in many ways, but perhaps the most compelling is the fact that the program is completely free to the end user. The 49ers will pay for transportation, admission, supplies and everything else associated with visits to the Museum. This program is not only unrivaled in the NFL, but in all of professional sports.

INSPIRE THROUGH EDUCATION

Housed in the Denise DeBartolo York Education Center, the 49ers Museum's education program will provide learning platforms that connect, inspire, and engage students in grades K-8. Our program will use football as a platform for:

- Teaching content-rich lessons in STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics)
- Ingraining invaluable life skills
- Encouraging physical activity

THE CURRICULUM

As the first professional sports organization to embrace the STEM learning concepts for youth, the 49ers Museum will constantly be evolving and enhancing students' experiences to reflect the most current concepts that support classroom learning. By working closely with a board of local advisory educational partners, all programs have been specially aligned to state Common Core and Next Generation Science standards which support leading instructional practices. Additionally, the Museum's education program curricula:

- Is aligned to National & California Common Core and Next Generation Science Standards
- Engages students in a variety of technologically-rich learning experiences that are student-centered and can be adapted to various development levels and learning audiences.
- Integrates STEM learning through project-based activities that transfer student knowledge and skills to real-world problems.
- Is aligned to 21st Century Learning Skills (Critical Thinking, Problem-Solving, Communication, Collaboration and Creativity).
- Increases student motivation for learning and enhances student understanding of STEM concepts.

CUSTOMIZABLE FEATURES

A field trip to the 49ers Museum presented by Sony will complement and reinforce existing school curriculum in many ways. By offering hands-on, project-based learning in a dynamic and technological environment, the education program will allow students to use leading edge, technological tools and techniques, challenging them to reach new heights.

THE EXPERIENCE

Students that participate in the Museum's education program will receive an engaging, well-rounded experience. It will include

LEVI'S® STADIUM ART COLLECTION

The Art Collection at Levi's® Stadium is home to over 200 original pieces and more than 500 photographs. The museum-quality artwork featured is comprised of mixed mediums such as acrylic, charcoal, enamel, oil, pastel, pen and ink, stencil, metals and sculptures. Of the 23 original artists showcased, 20 hail locally from California. The photographs in the collection are from the archives of the 49ers and their esteemed group of team photographers, as well as from the San Francisco Chronicle and many local libraries and historic centers.

The Art Collection at Levi's® Stadium celebrates the 49ers legendary history, the organization's current success and the vibrant culture of the greater San Francisco Bay Area. No other multi-use stadium contains the quantity and scope of original artwork that this collection has procured. The galleries highlight diverse, local artists and include pieces that have personal ties to the 49ers organization.

The 49ers are thrilled to present a collection that enhances the building by creating a fully integrated visual experience. Guests will encounter larger than life portraits of 49ers greats, alongside charcoal sketches that celebrate notable regional figures such as Steinbeck and Kerouac. Visitors may marvel over pieces from the Ranchos of the Santa Clara Valley and the timeless psychedelics of the storied Fillmore Music Hall. The collection has been crafted to engage and provoke everyone from the casual fan to the art aficionado.

The Art Collection at Levi's® Stadium was curated in partnership with Tracie Specia-Ventura of Sports & the Arts (SATA), a woman-run, small business in California.
