GOLDMINE

- Sherfield grew up in a tough neighborhood only two hours outside of Chicago. Raised by a single mother who gave birth at the age of 16, his family who moved around year after year, often in uncomfortable circumstances such as motels and cramped apartments with his grandparents, uncles and late stepdad (pictured below). When Sherfield reached high school, his mother came to the realization she could not afford to pay for his college. On that day, Sherfield made it his ultimate goal to earn a scholarship. Years later, he walked across the stage at Vanderbilt with a degree in medicine, health and society with a minor in corporate strategy and four varsity football letters. "It's being able to show kids back home that I'm from the same city," Sherfield said. "I grew up on the same street. In reality, there's nothing you can't do. You have to work for what you want, but I wouldn't have it any other way."

- Sherfield's dreams shifted to giving back to the community that raised him. At Vanderbilt, he served as a mentor at the local Boys & Girls Club and interned at the Martha O'Bryan Center in Nashville. He hopes to bring that experience back to his hometown to build an indoor athletic facility for the youth as he remembers traveling two hours to Chicago every weekend to practice and workout. In 2019, he raised over $1,500 for the Danville football team and started a free football camp at Danville High School. He also honors his hometown in the NFL's annual My Cause, My Cleats initiative as in 2018 he wore cleats that read, "No more silence, end gun violence," after he knew 14 people killed in his community due to gun violence in that year alone. Although life presented him challenges along the way, those challenges have written Sherfield's story, something he could not have faced without his single mother. "My mother taught me from a young age that you have to work for everything you want," he said. "Nothing in life is easy, so you'd better go get it."

SHERFIELD'S GOLDEN NUGGETS

- Cites one of his biggest mentors in football is Vanderbilt legend and 49ers TE Jordan Matthews, who also spent time with the Eagles and Bills. While Matthews helps him on the field, Sherfield says his off-the-field advice has helped him become an avid reader as well to sharpen his brain.
- Raised by his small family of his mother, grandparents and two uncles, who inspired his love for football. His whole family would drive five hours each game day to watch him play for the Commodores.
